More than 1,500 people were drawn out in 103-degree weather Sunday for the eighth annual Welcome Back Concert. The turnout was the largest ever for the event and was larger than 1987 concert's turnout of 400 to 500 people.

The increase in numbers was attributed to the afternoon's entertainment, which included That Statue Moved, of Wichita; ESP, a local band; and headliners The Rainmakers, of Kansas City.

This is the first time a wellknown band has played the event, and with this came another change. For the first time, a $2 admission fee was charged.

Mike Penner, program adviser for the Union Program Council, which sponsored the event, explained the changes.

"In the past couple of years, the numbers (in attendance) have been dwindling," Penner said. The Rainmakers were brought in to encourage crowds, he said.

UPC is a non-profit organization, and it budgets to lose $2,500 every year at this event. The admission charge this year is a temporary change, and will only continue if the same type of big-name entertainment continues.

The crowd did not seem to mind the admission charge.

"I came here to see The Rainmakers. I think the admission price is fair to see a good band," said Melinda McIntire, junior in accounting.

Housing update: Vacancies scarce

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

If the number of students applying for housing is any indication, K-State's enrollment will increase again this fall, and the situation could prompt the reopening of Van Zile Hall as a residence hall.

On campus, the residence halls are full. "Just beautiful" is how Thomas Frith, director of the Department of Housing, described the situation.

All rooms in men's housing are occupied, and several people have already been placed on a waiting list for housing contracts.

Extra beds have been set up in non-living areas of several residence halls for those people waiting for space to become available from cancellations. About a dozen men are waiting for rooms under these temporary conditions in Marlatt and Putnam halls. Men who were housed under temporary conditions in Goodnow Hall have already found permanent rooms.

David Yoder, director of Marlatt Hall, said about six extra beds were set up in that hall's music and recreation rooms with no problems.

"I don't think anyone was enthusiastic about it," he said.

Frith said that only about 20 spaces were still available in women's housing. The housing department had expected women's spaces to be filled, but Frith said a large number of last-minute cancellations for sorority rush left the spaces empty. "Cut-off (for a name to be put on the waiting list) is when the halls are filled," Frith said. "We will probably encourage people to start looking for off-campus housing sometime next week."

The current shortage of housing space on campus has prompted the University to look at possible solutions for the future.

According to Robert Krause, vice president for institutional advancement, one possibility currently being considered is the reopening of Van Zile, which was closed four years ago. Along with Van Zile's reopen-ing would be the possibility of redesigning and restructuring Boyd and Putnam halls. "We're looking to pick up 200 to 250 spaces (from among the three halls)," Krause said.

"At this point in time, the University is not interested in building a dormitory for a large number of students," he said.

Frith said it would be impossible for the University to increase housing capacity by the next academic

"We must decide what percentage of the student body we should house," he said. "On campus, we can't possibly have more housing by next year. About 4,100 students will be housed in 10 residence halls and about 600 apartments which are designated for family housing.

Elsewhere in Manhattan, the housing situation is almost as tight. Barb Robel, adviser for Greek Affairs, said that greek housing is filled nearly to capacity. According to Robel, fraternities

Despite continuing problems with the two elevators in the new Chemistry/Biochemisty Building, the structure will open today for the first time to classes.

Vincent Cool, the associate director of facilities planning, said the elevators occasionally shut down. "They have a mind of their own about when to work," he said. The new building will house the Chemistry and Biochemistry departments' teaching laboratories and a portion of the research labs.

Although classes will be able to begin, Joseph Paukstelis, the chairman of the building committee, said not all of the offices and research labs have relocated from Willard Hall to the new building.

The delay in many of the moves, he said, has been caused by a string of little problems.

There have been the normal back orders and items not delivered on time. We received the wrong color of tile for one portion (of the building)," he said.

Construction was completed before Aug. 1, but Paukstelis said he expects it to be another month before all of the offices are moved in.

The more than $10 million building has the most sophisticated labs on campus, Cool said. The labs, Paukstelis said, have been needed for some time. "The main reason we wanted to move the research labs was to improve safety standards," he said. An ineffective ventilation system in Willard Hall restricted researchers in some instances from conducting full-scale experiments, Paukstelis "The ventilation was totally

More than 400 killed in Indian earthquake

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India - A powerful earthquake rumbled through the mountains of Nepal and eastern India before dawn Sunday, triggering landslides and floods, destroying houses and killing at least 377 people, officials and news reports said.

More than 2,500 were injured in the quake, which seismologists called the deadliest to strike the Himalayan region since 1950.

Indian officials said at least 125 people were killed and 2,000 injured in the eastern state of Bihar. Government television put the number of dead at more than 300.

State-run Radio Nepal said at least 252 people were killed in towns near

The quake also jolted parts of northern Bangladesh and the capital of Dhaka, but there were no reports of casualties or damage.

The Seismological Observatory in New Delhi said the quake occurred at 4:40 a.m. and measured 6.5 on the Richter scale. The quake lasted for about one minute and aftershocks continued for about an hour, observatory director H.N. Srivastava said.

Srivastava said the tremor was centered about 40 to 50 miles northeast of Darbhanga, a town of about 800,000 in Bihar. The location puts the epicenter almost on the India-

A comprehensive study released by the Kansas Department of Health and Environment in June described Tuttle Creek Reservoir as having low levels of pesticide contamination and sedimentation due to abundant rainfall, run-off and land use.

Pesticide residue levels and other sources of non-point pollution such as agriculture, construction and disposal are monitored by the KDHE. Non-point pollution consists of contaminants present in lakes and streams because of weather and environmental conditions.

The report on Tuttle Creek attrishows lake pollution buted the presence of pesticides to the high percentage of land devoted to agricultural cultivation in the state. Use of agricultural pesticides leads to an increased concentration of these chemicals in surface water.

"The lake is impaired, in that it is just not desirable (for recreational use)," said Vic Robbins, environmental engineer with the KDHE. Robbins added that although the water may be safe, the "dirtiness" of the lake definitely affects its

The level of pesticides in the reservior is not dangerous to humans, he said.

The Kansas River transports a high amount of pesticides through Kansas, according to the report, and the Big Blue River, impounded by Tuttle Creek, is a major tributary of the Kansas River and could be a major source of pesticides. Tests for pesticides in Tuttle Creek, its tributaries and the upper Kansas River found chlordane, heptachlor, epoxide and diedrin, according to the state-sponsored survey. "You can swim in it, but I wouldn't go out and drink the water," Robbins said.

The turbidity and siltation rates are high, but not high enough to harm swimmers.

The major pesticides detected in the lake and its tributaries were atrazine, alachlor and metoachlor. The report said that samples were taken from Tuttle Creek, the Black

Vermillion River, Fancy Creek and the Big Blue River. Although pesticides were not found in specific water samples, fish taken from the upper end of the lake had higher concentrations of chlordane and 4,4'-DDE than fish taken from the lower end. The report attributed the higher concentrations to the higher sedimentation rates at the upper end of the

Although the report lacked a specific list of possible future effects, it did say "the continued presence of these agriculturally related toxic substances in Kansas surface waters poses an unknown longterm risk."

The World Israelis prepare spy satellite

NEW YORK - Israel is preparing to launch a surveillance satellite into low Earth orbit, giving it a potential advantage in any military confrontation with its neighbors in the Middle East, Time magazine reported Sunday.

Citing unidentified intelligence sources, the magazine said the Israelis plan first to launch an experimental satellite designed to last less than a month. If successful, Israel then would put up a satellite with a life-span of about two years.

The magazine said Israeli defense officials are divided over whether to launch the satellite as soon as possible, or to wait and avoid adding fuel to the region's arms race. The Israeli inner cabinet is expected to make a decision within the next few weeks, Time said.

Last summer, the Geneva-based International Defense Review magazine reported that Israel had test-fired a medium-range missile capable of carrying a nuclear warhead. The Time report said a second purpose of the launch was to test Israel's ability to launch a surveillance satellite.

Campbell's signature and those of other celebrities were included in the "Do Az. I Do" promotional series, said state Tourism Director Victor Heller.

But Heller said he feared the public might confuse Campbell's opinions for those of the state. Campbell is supporting a conservative Republican seeking a seat in the Arizona House of HOUSTON - Singer Willie Nelson says he is angry that the president of Baylor University canceled his benefit concert at the school's new center in Waco.

"Some pressure was applied or maybe the guy felt sanctimonious, like his hallowed hall was too good

Nelson, a country singer and movie star who is no stranger to trouble, said his concert promoter was told by Baylor president Herbert Reynolds that the concert was canceled this week because of protests that Nelson's concerts have drawn from

His concerts in Rhode Island were picketed last month by police who objected to Nelson's benefit last year for an American Indian convicted of killing a federal officer. The officers stopped picketing after Nelson promised to do a benefit for both Indian and police causes.

To keep the new benefit alive, Nelson has made arrangements to move the concert to the Heart O'Texas Coliseum, a county-owned arena. The concert will benefit residents of Leroy, Texas, trying to recoup money lost in a bank closure.

New Union service takes place of cash

By Rich Broadfoot Staff Writer

For those students, faculty and staff members who don't like carrying cash, a new service is being offered at the Union.

The Wildcat Card, a non-interest bearing account, can be used anywhere in the Union to purchase a variety of goods and services. Depositors can present the card, which requires a minimum opening deposit of $5, to the cashier with any transaction.

The purchase is then automatically deducted from their prepaid balance.

People wanting to open a Wildcat Card account can do so at the Union business office. The balance of the account is 100 percent refundable at the end of the spring semester or if account holders show acceptable proof they are leaving K-State before that time. Otherwise, the holder is charged a $10 cancellation fee.

Money collected from depositors goes directly into the Union's general account.

Union Director Jack Sills said offering the service has been under consideration by Union administrators for several years.

"This system was not newly designed for us. It's a proven system that has been in use at other universities for years," Sills said. Similar systems are used at Colorado State University and the University of

The service, called Vali-Dine, is provided by Griffin Technology Inc. In return, the Union pays more than $4,000 in rent per month for the service and equipment, Sills said. Payments will decrease as the equipment depreciates in value. The Wildcat Card has replaced the meal cards which were used previously in the Union cafeteria and should speed up the lines at cash registers, said Vera Carr, associate director of the Union.

To help promote use of the Wildcat Card, the Union is offering discounts for the next few months to individuals who deposit $250 or more in their account. From Aug. 17 to Aug. 28, they will receive a 5 percent discount on most items at the Union Bookstore.

Student fees set by correct group

During registration, some students were surprised with their $681.40 in-state tuition bill. The bill reflects a $15.75 increase over what students paid for the spring semester.

The state takes $610.75 of each student's tuition. The $70.65 remaining pays for student services.

Only the Student Senate can alter the amount of money charged for student services. Not even the president of the University can add or subtract money from the fees withou: the Senate's approval.

While some students may not like all the services the Senate approves to finance, they can be thankful that only one body controls the special fees, and all budget meetings are open for public debate. This semester, some of the services the special fees will pay for are: KSDB-FM, 85 cents; K-State Union, $17; recreation program, $3; and student publications, $4.80. Some of the special fees are spent on revenue bonds. This semester all in-state full-time students paid $8.25 for Bramlage Coliseum bonds and another $22.25 to refund other bonds.

The Senate is the best body to look after the special fees. It is made up of students elected by other students. And if the people doing the electing do not like how their money is being spent, they can try again during the next election.

Many may say this is a simple argument. After all, only a few people know exactly how much money is being spent where. In addition, only a minority of students vote in the

Advice for freshmen How to be hip in college

Upon becoming a freshman here at K-State, I became the recipient of a gamut of advice from a wide range of sources.

My grandfather told me: "Don't take any wooden nickels," and "A penny saved is a penny earned," etc. My mother was more concerned with my study and eating habits. She said, "Study all you can," and "Don't gorge yourself on junk food just because I'm no longer there to stop you." I took all this advice and stored it away in my subconscious for later use. It remains stored there.

Yet it seems that the older we get, the more our past keeps sneaking up on us. Lately, all of the advice I was given as a freshman has been creeping back into my head and forcing me to re-examine it.

One bit of advice is particularly persistent, and I am reminded of it again. It was given to me by a fraternity brother named Bart Bryce, who had already experienced a year of college life and, thus, was wise to the ways of the world. It was powerful advice and it changed my entire life.

"D.L., there are only three things you have to know to be considered hip in college. You should write them down," he said.

I quickly dug into my new book bag and readied a pen and notebook.

Rule Number One: "Use only one strap of your backpack. Never use both straps," he

I stopped writing. "Why not?" I asked. "Don't they put two straps on there for a purpose?"

"Of course they do," he said. "The straps act as Dweeb-Detectors. Only dweebs use conformist thing we all do. I highly recommend that you do it, too. Hip people shouldn't stand out in a crowd."

"I see," I said, though still confused. Rule Number Two: "When walking to and from class, don't look at anyone. Especially women," my wise friend told me.

"Why not?" I asked. He said: "Well, if you look at guys they might think that you're ... well, you know ... '

"Yeah, I know," I said. "And if you look at women they might think you want to go out with them," he said.

I stopped writing again. I said, "But — " "I know, I know, 'What if I want to go out with them?" he said.

"That's right," I said.

"There's nothing wrong with wanting to go out with them, but letting them see that you want to go out with them is social-life suicide," he said. "Women only want to go out with men who don't want to go out with them. If you don't want to go out with them badly enough and treat them rudely enough, they'll flock to you in ... well, in flocks."

"Oh," I said as I underlined the word

Rule Number Three: "Scuff up those new tennis shoes you're wearing," he said. "Nothing identifies you as a freshman quicker than having new tennis shoes."

I said, "But I am a freshman." "Being a freshman is no serious stigma," he said, "but looking like a freshman is devastating. "Remember: You've got to act hip to be hip," he said.

"Yeah, you're right," I said. "Dare to be hip, D.L.," he said. "Dare to be

"I will, Bart! I will be hip!" I said. I immediately took Bart's advice to heart and since that day have made myself the hippest person on campus. Oh, there have been some sacrifices. Nothing comes easy without

was worth it. I have to buy my own shoes now, too. My parents said that if I was going to scuff them up every time, then I could buy the damn things myself. It is a bit harder to bring myself to scuff them up now. I guess they do cost a lot, but it's worth it.

One more thing: since I could never look at anybody, I never made many friends. I never had a date, either. I was as rude to women as I could possibly be. But I wasn't rude enough, I guess. That's why I'm sitting here in this dark, windowless room typing this column into a word processor instead of out having "fun," I suppose. It is a lonely life in a way, but it's all worth it. I'm hip.

I recommend that everyone heed Bart's advice. We all want to fit in, don't we?

Letters are the readers chance to question and they are the essence of the paper.

The best are the juicy ones that are as scandalous as whispered gossip. Some are full of praise. Most are not.

This is a good way to guage what some readers are thinking about the world, the campus and the paper. It also helps to keep a few people humble — like writers and administrators.

The policies are listed in almost every issue. Those who have more to say than just 300 words are encouraged to submit their letter in the form of a guest column.

Finally, each page has a cartoon. It is the comic relief that every editorial page and every mistress — needs to keep her sanity.

It also decorates the page. What mistress would be successful without something to draw the eye to her?

The policies as they will continue to appear are:

LETTERS pertaining to matters of public interest are encouraged. Letters should be kept as brief as possible. All letters are subject to editing on the basis of space and style considerations.

GUEST COLUMNS are also encouraged. The column should be no longer than two double-spaced typed pages, and the author will be photographed.

Solidarity union calls strike

By The Associated Press

GDANSK, Poland — Solidarity activists on Sunday called for a strike at the shipyard where the outlawed trade union was born, asking another 10,000 workers to join what already is the strongest wave of labor unrest since 1981.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa earlier had offered to suspend his call for a Gdansk shipyard strike if the government agreed to talks on the labor

But the offer went unheeded and Solidarity leaders formally called for a shipyard strike to begin on Monday.

The week of unrest already has idled at least 76,000 workers at coal mines, shipping ports and transportation depots in southern Poland and the port city of Szczecin.

Walesa, speaking at St. Brygida's Church to about 3,000 supporters of the independent union federation, said authorities had approached him through unofficial channels about holding talks, but he gave few details.

He said he expected the government's reply to be delivered on the national television news Sunday evening. But the hourlong evening news, devoted mainly to the existing strikes across Poland, carried no mention of Walesa and no hint about talks.

Instead, the commentator suggested the strikes would continue.

"Tomorrow Poland will enter the second week of strikes, and we will continue estimating the losses for our economy," said TV news announcer Waldemar Milewicz.

Rather than use chemicals that could have proven harmful in improperly ventilated areas, Paukstelis said researchers have had to eliminate steps from their work.

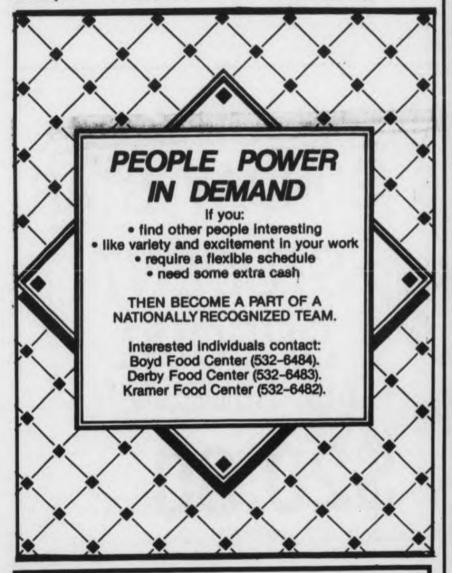

"We have tried to eliminate the danger and make the experiments acceptable under the circumstances," he said.

"We do not believe we were putting the students at risk, but we (were) limiting the possibilities for research," he said. "And that's totally unacceptable in the long run." The second phase of the building is on the University's five-year plan, but has not been approved for construction, Paukstelis said.

"We have put together a very good team that is very familiar with the architect for this building. If we wait a long time (to start planning for the second phase), then we will have to start all over again," he said.

Cool said, however, that the latest Board of Regents recommended budget for construction has been approved through 1994. The second phase for the Chemistry/Biochemistry Building was not part of that recommendation.

Preliminary plans for the second phase include classrooms, lecture halls and additional labs.

Bar owners change policies

By The Collegian Staff

There are some doormen in the Aggieville bars who might want minors to come down and try to drink a beer, or even just try to get in, because the doormen could make money from it.

At Brother's Tavern, if a doorman catches someone underage drinking or trying to use false identification, that doorman will get a $5 bounty, said Steve Covert, partowner of Brother's.

"This past week, since everyone has come back, the doormen have been making $60 to $70 a night,"

Covert said.

An increase in the size of the minor crowd has forced bars that want their business to make some policy changes, said some bar owners and managers.

"We usually charge $3 at the door for (minors) to get in, but it fluctuates," Covert said. "We are not really worried about the underage drinking because we feel the doormen can handle it. If (minors are) drinking, they're out."

In an attempt to stop minors from drinking, Kite's Bar and Grill has started having everyone who comes to the door, sign their name so the doormen can check the signature against their identification.

"We haven't had that much of a problem," said Chris Jackson, assistant manager of Kite's. "(Minors) are welcome to come in, but we can't have them drinking."

This week Kite's will decide whether they are going to allow minors in the door on Friday and Saturday nights, Jackson said.

The Bushwackers Comedy Invasion has been admitting minors and has remained pretty clean, said Daron Brown, head doorman at Bushwackers.

K-State student arrested Saturday

By The Collegian Staff

Riley County Police arrested a K-State student Saturday in Haymaker Hall.

Michael L. Isaacson is being held in the Riley County Jail on charges of aggravated battery, burglary and attempted burglary.

K-State Police were unable to provide any information about Isaacson's class standing or major.

Also charged in the incidents leading to Isaacson's arrest are Alex E. Mathew, address unknown, and David K. Washburn, of Leawood.

Mathew is charged with aggravated battery, burglary, attempted burglary and criminal damage to property. Washburn is charged with attempted burglary and burglary.

The 1987 Campus Directory lists a David K. Washburn of Leawood as a freshman in psychology. His address for 1987 was listed as 508 Sunset
Ave, which is the address for the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Washburn was released from the Riley County Jail after posting a $1,000 bond.

The aggravated battery charges stem from an incident Saturday in which a Manhattan resident alleges he was assaulted by three males who struck him with a crowbar.

The burglary and criminal damage to property charges relate to an incident Thursday at My Place Tavern. Taken from the tavern were beer advertisement signs and a radio cassette player.

The total loss in the burglary was listed at $205. Property damage to the tavern amounted to $1,500.

Arraignment in the cases will be held today 1:15 p.m. at the Riley County Courthouse.

Richard Hayter, director of the Kansas Energy Extension Service, has been appointed part time, temporary legislative liaison for K-State.

In announcing the appointment, President Jon Wefald cited Hayter's service in local spend time with the Legislature in Topeka government and his experience as a University administrator as qualifications for the appointment.

As legislative liaison, Hayter will provide link between K-State and the Kansas

The appointment to the paid position became effective Aug. 19, and will run through June 30, 1989, when a permanent legislative liason will be chosen. Hayter said he will not become the permanent liaison

First up was That Statue Moved. The band played their usual sampling of college-oriented, alternative music, including material from The Cult, U2 and REM, as well as some original material.

The four-member band consists of Darren Keller, fifth year senior in public relations, on drums, Steve Guiot on lead guitar, bassist Kurt Starks and Marty Mosier on rhythm guitar and lead vocals.

ESP, the second group, has been playing locally for about two years. All of its members are Manhattan residents. The band described its set as "agressive, straight-ahead rock 'n' roll."

"We're not a heavy metal band by any means," said Mike Goodwyn. The group, including Todd Weber on bass, Ken Heaton on guitar, Goodwyn singing lead vocals, John Mark Kennedy on alto sax and Alan Keithly on drums, performed an energetic, if not well-practiced set in the midst of the midday sun.

Even The Rainmakers could not conjure up a little temperature relief, but the crowd did not seem to mind at all. Everyone managed some enthusiasm as the group performed songs from their first album, "The Rainmakers," and their second, "Tornado."

"One More Summer," from "Tornado," seemed to epitomize what lead vocalist Bob Walkenhorst describes as the group's sound, "rock 'n' roll with some intelligence."

While the song does not pretend to deal with complex issues, it deals with a simple one in an intelligent way, while at the same time maintaining a hard rock 'n' roll beat. The other members of the band are Steve Phillips, lead guitar and vocals; Rich Ruth, bass and vocals; and Pat Tomer, drums.

Walkenhorst writes the majority of the music for the band, and he seems to take his task very seriously.

"Rock 'n' roll as an art form can be a lot of things, from plain fun to an emotional outlet," he said. "It can communicate anything from religion to partying, sex to death ....

The group has played the Welcome Back Concert twice before, during its third and fourth years, as the band Steve, Bob and Rich, and they said they're excited to be back in Manhattan.

The Rainmakers spent the summer playing festivals.

Federal Reserve officials to increase interest rate

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — By an 8-3 vote, Federal Reserve policy-makers decided in late June to push interest rates up further in an effort to fight inflation, according to minutes of the discussions released Friday.

The further credit tightening was approved with the three dissenters complaining that they believed the central bank was moving too quickly in its inflation-fighting efforts.

The majority of Fed officials, however, called for the central bank to "increase slightly" its restraint on the reserves held by commerical banks. Lowering the amount of cash that banks will have available to back loans drives up the interest rates charged on those loans.

Since late March, the central bank has engaged in a series of credit tightening moves in reaction to a surprisingly strong economy which has made job markets tighter and increased inflationary pressures this year.

Last week, the central bank boosted its discount rate by one-half percentage point to 6.5 percent. An increase in the discount rate is the most dramatic signal the central bank can send of its intention to drive interest rates higher as a way of dampening demand and thus fighting inflationary pressures.

The increase in the discount rate was approved on a unanimous vote. However, back in late June, Fed policy-makers were divided on what their next step should be.

Board governors Wayne Angell, Martha Seger and Edward Kelley Jr. opposed the tightening move, arguing that the Fed should wait to see the impact of its earlier tightening efforts before going farther.

But the majority contended that further immediate tightening was needed, arguing that there were "substantial risks" involved in not moving forcefully to combat inflation. Some Fed members argued for an even bolder tightening step than the one taken, arguing for an immediate increase in the discount rate, an action the central bank eventually took on Aug. 9.

Fed policy-makers met again behind closed doors on Tuesday to assess monetary policy. The minutes of that meeting will not be released until Sept. 23. But many private economists believe the central bank decided to continue pushing interest rates higher in an effort to slow an economy where demand pressures are bumping up against tight labor markets and capacity restraints.

These analysts, however, are not looking for a further boost in the discount rate until after Nov. 8 because of election-year pressures.

The Fed tightening so far has pushed up a variety of interest rates, including banks' prime lending rate, which is now at 10 percent, the first time it has been in double-digits in three years.

Labor leader Chavez ends 36-day fast

By The Associated Press

DELANO, Calif. — Farm labor leader Cesar Chavez ended his 36-day fast at a Mass Sunday by breaking bread with the children of Robert Kennedy as thousands showed their support for his boycott of California table grapes.

"Today I pass on the Fast for Life to hundreds of concerned men and women throughout North America and the world who have offered to share the suffering," Chavez said in a statement read by his son Fernando Chavez.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson attended Sunday's Mass along with Ethel Kennedy, the widow of the late senator who had dramatically shared a Roman Catholic Communion that ended Chavez's first major fast 20 years ago. Also attending were three of her children, Kerry, Rory and Christopher.

Jackson said he would fast for three days starting Sunday to lend his support to the boycott called to protest the use of certain pesticides on table grapes. At a rally a week ago, Jackson also urged others to fast for two or three days.

Jackson and Kennedy stood in apparent shock at Chavez's weakened condition as he was assisted to the Mass with his arms draped around the necks of two other sons, Anthony and Paul Chavez.

Thousands of union supporters, including movie stars and politicians, attended the Communion held outdoors under a giant white tent in near 100-degree heat.

Chavez, 61, kept up the wateronly fast, his longest, despite doctors' advice that he was endangering his health. He conducted a 25-day fast in 1968 and a 24-day fast in 1972.

Since he began the fast July 17, the United Farm Workers union president lost at least 31 pounds and suffered from escalating bouts of nausea, vomiting, dizziness, and cramps.

Officials said most of the deaths occurred in Darbhanga, Munger and Madhubani districts. More than 25,000 houses in those areas were destroyed, they said.

V.K. Sharma, a deputy secretary in the Bihar government, predicted the death toll would rise because many people were seriously injured.

Landslides knocked out communication links on both sides of the border, preventing officials from obtaining information about casualties or damage from the remote, hardest hit areas.

"The tolls have come in only from urban areas," Sharma said in a telephone interview from Patna, the Bihar capital.

The monsoon rains, which hit the subcontinent in late June and usually continue through September, also were hampering rescue operations. More than 50 villages were flooded after the quake shifted embankments.

In Nepal, Shailendra Kumar Upadhyaya, a Foreign Ministry official, said at least 500 people were injured and thousands of houses collapsed from the quake's impact.

"Most were buried alive under collapsed houses," said Indra Shrestha, a social worker involved in the rescue operations at Dharan Bazar, a township of about 100,000 people about 18 miles from the Indian border.

In the ancient township of Bhaktapur, about 11 miles south of Katmandu, Mayor Assa Kazi Basakala surveyed the damage.

"The Germans came and helped restore most of this town to its original, traditional splendor (in 1960)," he said. "I don't know how we'll rebuild now."

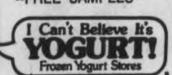

Officials in both countries were rushing medical teams, clothes and other relief material to the disaster aras. Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi planned to visit the region Monday to survey the damage.

Most of the victims were asleep in their beds when the quake struck.

Cocaine, cash valued at $402 million seized in 'Just Say No to Drugs' bags

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Authorities seized about 5,000 pounds of cocaine and $2 million in cash, much of it stashed in bags marked "Just Say No to Drugs," in one of the largest drug hauls in the United States, authorities said Sunday.

The cocaine had an estimated street value of $400 million, officials

A man identified as the local leader of a Colombian drug ring was arrested after agents raided a small early Sunday.

Arrested with two other men at the apartment was Hernando Grajales Rizzo, 39, a citizen of Colombia and a leader in the Cali drug cartel, said Robert M. Stutman, agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration's New York office. The men were unarmed and did not resist when about 20 drug agents and police officers moved in, Stutman said.

Stutman would not say when or how the smugglers brought the drugs studio apartment late Saturday and into New York but said the raid followed several months of surveillance.

> "I hope it will have an impact (on the cartel's activity), but the amount of the drugs coming in is very, very large," said Raymond Jones, chief of the Police Department's Organized Crime Control Bureau. "The problem is that a 2-pound, 2-ounce package, a kilo, can be broken down to about 14,000 vials of crack. That is our major problem."

Rizzo and the other men will be arraigned this week, authorities said.

Forest fires spread in Yellowstone Park

By The Associated Press

Gusty winds spread fires to at least 350,000 acres in Yellowstone National Park, while 1,100 soldiers were trained Sunday to reinforce firefighters battling a 110,000-acre fire advancing toward two Montana communities.

The 60 mph winds that whipped the fires into 100-foot walls of flame and 30,000-foot columns of smoke Saturday calmed down somewhat by Sunday but were expected to reach about 25 mph, park spokeswoman Joan Anzelmo said.

"We have an intense fire situation in Yellowstone," Anzelmo said. About 3,000 firefighters have been fighting fires for several weeks in Yellowstone.

Eighteen instructors from the Boise Interagency Fire Center trained troops at Fort Lewis, Wash., to relieve civilian firefighters and free expert crews for more complex work, fire officials said.

The soldiers were to board Army transport planes Monday morning for flights to Bozeman, Mont., where they will be assigned to the Clover-Mist fire in Yellowstone, said Chuck Tarver, a civilian installation operations officer at the Army base south of Tacoma.

The winds in Yellowstone forced evacuation and closure of the park's south entrance as well as the Grant Village area, which contains a hotel, campground and housing for park staff. Several stretches of road inside the park, as well as the Norris, Pebble Creek and Madison campgrounds, also remained closed Sunday.

On Sunday, several hundred resi-two communities in Montana near Yellowstone, considered evacuating because the 100,000-acre fire was within six miles of their homes, said Hays Kirby, owner of the Grizzly Lodge in Silver Gate.

"Some residents are packing and we have alerted elderly people," he said. Most of the residents, mostly summer people, will stay and fight, Kirby added.

In Montana, firefighters battled blazes across the state that totalled more than 115,000 acres, the worst fires in the state since 1984 when more than 250,000 acres were charred.

In Southern California, firefighters brought under control a 1,237-acre brush fire on the rocky north slope of the San Jacinto Mountains on Saturday, while a 300-acre fire in the San Bernardino National Forest was contained, officials said.

Hot, dry winds Sunday plagued 200 firefighters in northern Idaho's Nez Perce National Forest, where a 320-acre fire burned in inaccessible terrain 11 miles north of the Salmon River.

In Montana, about 1,900 firefighters encircled about 80 percent of the pesky 35,200-acre Warm Springs fire in the Elkhorn Mountains about 10 miles southeast of Helena, said Bob Krepps of the Department of State Lands.

The fire, which has burned 10 homes and cabins since it started Aug. 9, did not threaten any structures, Knepps said. National Guard transport planes from California and Wyoming will continue to drop retardant on the fire, he said, while crews dents of Silver Gate and Cooke City, try to finish encircling fire lines.

Two killed, 12 others shot by Israelis during clashes

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli soldiers fatally shot two Palestinian teenagers Sunday and 12 other Arabs were wounded during bloody clashes in the occupied lands, hospital officials said.

Meanwhile, Israeli police announced the arrest of four men in connection with a bomb attack that wounded 25 Israelis near a crowded sidewalk cafe in Haifa.

Palestinians observed a general strike Sunday to mark the 19th anniversary of an arson fire that ravaged a mosque in Jerusalem.

In the village of Tubas in the occupied West Bank, soldiers shot and killed 17-year-old Rajah Hamad Hamdan during a clash, according to officials at Al Ittihad Hospital in

In Gaza City, in the occupied Gaza Strip, a military spokesman said the army put a curfew on the Bureij refugee camp after 18-year-old Nael Hamad was shot to death during a clash with soldiers.

Haifa Police Chief Yaacov Haviv said he is certain terrorists staged a Saturday night hand grenade attack in Haifa.

He announced the arrest of four men from the occupied West Bank suspected in the attack, which wounded 25 Israelis in a crowded shopping mall in the northeastern port city.

Haviv said eight others were being detained for questioning. Fifteen more Arabs were questioned and freed overnight, he said.

Among the casualties of the attack were two children. Dan Meir, 8, lost both feet, and his brother, Yonathan, 2, was wounded in the abdomen, said officials at Rambam Hospital in Haifa. Five other family members, including a 5-year-old sister, were slightly injured.

The boys' father, Maryan, told army radio:

Haifa Mayor Aryeh Gurel said the attack appeared aimed at harming Jewish-Arab ties in a city that has become a symbol of coexistence.

"They will not succeed in their goal of upsetting Jewish-Arab relations," Gurel said in a statement.

Haifa's population of 243,000 includes 20,000 Arabs who hold Israeli citizenship and many of whom live in mixed neighborhoods with Jews.

In the West Bank and Gaza Strip, Palestinians shuttered stores and stayed home from work in a dozen major cities in a strike called by Moslem fundamentalists.

Hospital officials said 12 Palestinians were admitted Sunday to a hospital in Nablus, the largest West Bank city with a population of

At least nine were shot during clashes with troops, but three from the Askar refugee camp on the city's outskirts were shot by unidentified men in civilian clothes, an Arab reporter said.

The army said it knew of only three men being wounded.

Troops maintained curfews on three refugee camps in the West Bank and three in the Gaza Strip, Israeli news reports said.

Car explosion injures 18 in west Beirut

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - A Mercedes packed with explosives blew up Sunday near a Syrian army checkpoint in Moslem west Beirut, wounding 18 people and damaging cars and buildings, police said.

No group immediately claimed of responsibility for the bombing in the seaside Raouche district, which came during a confrontation between pro-Syrian forces and hard-line pro-Israeli Christians over the election of a new president.

The cream-colored Mercedes, packed with an estimated 88 pounds of TNT, detonated at 8:40 a.m. only six feet from the checkpoint opposite a fish restaurant, police said. It was not known whether the bomb was detonated by remote control or a timing device.

Police said three Syrian soldiers at the sandbagged checkpoint were among the casualties. Most of the other wounded were Lebanese civilians, including women and children.

At least eight cars parked nearby were destroyed. The restaurant's glass front was blown in and windows in several neighboring buildings were shattered.

Hours later, police said another car rigged with two rockets was safely defused in south Beirut's seaside Ouzai district.

The car was parked in front of a bakery about 50 yards from a Syrian checkpoint.

Police said the Merecedes that exploded was parked Saturday evening near the restaurant, atop a cliff overlooking the Mediterranean on a winding hilltop road popular with morning strollers.

Several unexploded hand grenades and a mortar shell were found in the wreckage of the car, police

Quick drought relief unlikely

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The chances of the nation recovering from the drought in the next couple of months are a real long shot, say federal weather experts who put the odds as high as 1,000-to-1 against it in some areas.

Rain could provide short-term relief here and there, but meteorologists say the prospects of getting enough rain to return moisture to normal levels are very slim.

"Calculation of the probabilities associated with the precipitation required to end the drought ranged from 1 in 500 for central Iowa to 1 in 1,000 for the Cascades in Washington," said the weekly drought advisory of the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, N.C.

Even those odds may be optimistic, if history is a guide.

Never in the nearly 100 years that records have been kept has rainfall in August, September and October been enough to end a major drought of the current magnitude, the center

The center found the outlook bleak in four drought areas it examined this

In central Iowa, it said, the amount of rain needed by Oct. 31 to end the drought totals 22.42 inches. That much rain in August through October can be expected only once in 500 years, it said.

Richard Heim, a meteorologist at the data center, said the odds of declaring the drought broken by the end of October were twice as long - one in 1,000 — in the other three areas

Troops bury soldiers killed by IRA

By The Associated Press

OMAGH, Northern Ireland -British troops prayed Sunday for eight fellow soldiers killed by an IRA bomb, and authorities seized bomb-making equipment in the basement of Belfast's largest hospital.

Members of the First Battalion of the Light Infantry and their families remembered the dead at a private service at the army barracks in the town of Omagh, near where the bomb went off Friday 50 miles west of Belfast.

Soldiers also prayed at the Sir John Moore barracks in Winchester, south of London, where the eight dead soldiers trained.

Local residents placed two simple wreaths on a fence post near the bombing site.

Meanwhile, 27 soldiers injured in Friday's blast remained in the hospital Sunday. Six were in serious condition, the army said. Two of the injured troops were in Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital, where police and British soldiers seized the equipment used for making bombs, four handguns and ammunition in a basement Sunday.

No explosives were found, and patients had not been in danger, said a city police official on condition on anonymity.

Security forces have not linked the arms cache to a particular group, the spokesman said.

Soviet rocket falls from orbit, crashes in Canada

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A Soviet rocket crashed in northeastern Canada Sunday morning after lighting up the sky from New Mexico to Michigan as it fell out of orbit, a Defense Department spokesman said. No injuries or damage were reported.

The craft, which plummeted to Earth at about 1 a.m. EDT, was launched by the Soviets on Aug. 18 to carry a Gorizont communications satellite into orbit, said Maj. Alex Mondragon, spokesman for the North American Aerospace Defense Command and the U.S. Space Command, speaking from Peterson Air Force Base near Colorado Springs.

He said the rocket was probably an SL12, one of the Soviets' workhorse models.

"It's not unusual for a rocket body not to stay in orbit," he said. "There's nothing to keep it there."

The craft was tracked by officials at the U.S. Space Surveillance Center at Cheyenne Mountain in Colorado, Mondragon said the rocket had "no connection whatsoever" to the # Prison escapees

By The Associated Press

FORT STOCKTON, Texas -Two Kansas prison escapees have been charged with capital murder after a Pecos County lawman was killed while chasing a speeding van, authorities said.

Charles Edward Smith, 22, of Deerfield, Kan., and his 31-year-old cousin, Carroll Bernard Smith of Houston, were held without bond Sunday in connection with the slaying of Pecos County sheriff's deputy Tim Hudson, 60, of Fort Stockton.

The suspects were arrested after two men fired at West Texas lawmen who had set up a number of roadblocks and enlisted the aid of a helicopter in the chase.

Hudson was killed Saturday moming while pursuing a van that matched the description of one carrying two men who pumped $22.50 worth of gasoline and then sped off without paying, authorities said.

Charles Smith was serving a one to five-year term for convictions in Finney County, Kan., on charges of aiding a felon, burglary and theft, said Leo Taylor, director of the Kansas State Reception and Diagnostic Taylor said authorities had given incorrect information Saturday night on the length and nature of Charles Smith's convictions.

Carroll Smith was serving a 7- to 25-year term for burglary, theft and criminal damage to property convictions from Finney County, Taylor

The men also face escape charges, Taylor said.

Hudson, who was a lawman for more than 30 years, died almost immediately after he was shot, said Fort Stockton is town of about 10,000 residents in extreme west

According to Wilson, an attendant at a service station in Bakersfield, 35 miles west of Fort Stockton, called police saying two men pumped gas and didn't pay.

Hudson spotted the vehicle about 12:10 a.m., and began the chase on Interstate 10. Five miles west of Fort Stockton, the deputy attempted to pass the van on the left.

"They would not stop," Wilson said. "He was going to pass them, but when he got beside them, they started shooting."

At least three bullets from a .357-caliber Magnum revolver were fired at Hudson's patrol car, authorities said. Authorities believe the van and possibly the gun were stolen in the Houston area.

"He took a bullet in the right shoulder, then it went into his chest," the sheriff said. "He ran into the median and hit some cedar trees, but never did roll over."

Hudson did not fire his weapon and was unable to radio for help, authorities said. Moments later, other deputies found his body at the scene, Wilson said.

In the next few hours, law enforcement agencies from around west Texas, including a helicopter unit from U.S. Customs in San Angelo, joined the chase.

At 4:30 a.m., Reeves County officers radioed Wilson that a tractor-trailer had slowed approaching a roadblock. Officers gave chase after the vehicle made a U-turn.

The rig had been stolen at Coyanosa, where the van was abandoned and set afire, officers later discovered.

"They still wouldn't stop," Wilson said. "And they ran another roadblock — were firing rounds at officers. The officers were returning fire."

The vehicle was stopped in a pasture five miles west of the last roadblock, Wilson said.

One man was arrested at the scene, while the other was found about 8:30

Outdoor Equipment Rental Services is expected to reopen today after being closed since an Aug. 5 fire that caused more than $9,000 damage to the building in the L.P. Washburn Recreational Area.

The Manhattan Fire Department listed the cause of the fire as unknown.

The fire was discovered at 9:30 p.m. when smoke was found coming from the roof. The building is used to store camping and canoeing equip-Pecos County Sheriff Bruce Wilson. ment, among other rental equipment.

The damage is estimated to be approximately $5,000 to the contents and $4,500 to the structure.

"Overall we were very fortunate. The fire was contained to an area of only 6 to 8 feet," said Raydon Robel, director of Recreational Services.

Lost in the fire were two plastic canoes, a grinder, an air compressor and various rental equipment including tents, sleeping bags and life

Also stored nearby were several gallons of gasoline and Coleman lantem fuel, Robel said.

Things are heating up all over

Staff/Jeff Stead

Wide receiver Lawrence Tolbert tries to cool off with a popsicle during a hot afternoon football practice. The football team is using many unusual methods to deal with the heat.

Trainers, players fight heat illness

By Chris Wilhelm Sports Writer

If working out in 100-plus temperatures can help transform a group of young men into a winning football team, then K-State should be a team worth watching this season.

"This is by far the hottest season I've coached," Wildcat coach Stan Parrish said. "When dealing with the temperatures we've been practicing in, it's important to be smart and humane. The kids know that it's hot, but they also know what needs to be done and they do it."

"When dealing with the temperatures we've been practicing in, it's important to be smart and humane. The kids know that it's hot, but they also know what needs to be done and they do it."

> -Stan Parrish, head football coach

And thanks to the combined efforts of the coaches and the trainers, none of the players have been impaired by serious injuries or sustained any heat illness since practices opened Aug. 15, said Carl Cramer, head athletic trainer and director of sports medicine.

'(Football) is an athletic activity. We are (practicing) twice a day and it is a sport that involves a lot of pain," Cramer said. "Doing all the running we do, their legs are going to get tired, but that is expected.

"The heat has been a factor in our training, but heat illnesses are totally preventable and we're doing what we can to prevent any problems that might arise due to the high temperatures."

While some teams radically alter practice schedules to avoid heatrelated illness, the 'Cats have only moderately changed their regimen.

"We have changed our routine a little but not that drastically," he said. 'Our changes involve breaks for the players every 20 or 30 minutes to let them cool down and monitoring our players very closely before and after practices.

"When it gets to be a furnace out there with a heat index of 110 degrees, that's when you hear about people getting very, very sick, going to the hospital and sometimes even

While the coaching staff is concerned with the heat, measures taken to prevent heat-related illness have been totally effective to this point. Players are allowed a five-minute break every 20 minutes during which they are allowed water and ice. Sometimes, during their last break, the players get popsicles.

Another tactic used to combat the heat is moving the afternoon practice to a later time when it's cooler. The 'Cats have not rescheduled their practice times for fear of increased injuries from not enough rest between practices.

"In our later practice, there is a lot of (players saying) 'Why do you go in the hottest part of the day?',' Cramer said. "If we go later, then there's the question of are we giving their legs enough rest between practices? If we go at 8 p.m., and they go home, eat and go to bed, they're back up here at 6:30 or 7 a.m. and they are back out on the field at 8 a.m.. They may not get enough rest in their legs and that's when you see muscle

"We have not seen the muscle strains this year. This might be partly because of the heat. We're more elastic, but the rest can't hurt."

The monitoring of players includes weighing the players before and after practices to make sure their weight does not fluctuate too much. Under normal circumstances a player is allowed to lose 2 percent of his body weight during a session, Cram-

"We have had to have players sit in the training room and drink water for the first ten minutes of a practice session to replace the water that their body has lost," Cramer said. "They might feel a little uncomfortable running around with water sloshing around in them, but we haven't had any heat illnesses and that is really what is important."

Olympic finalists lose first

By The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. -Reggie Miller scored 20 points and Isiah Thomas had 15 Sunday as an NBA Select Team handed the U.S. Olympic finalists their first loss in five games against professional competition, 90-83.

The game was the first played in the Palace of Auburn Hills, the new home of the Detroit Pistons, who were represented by five members of the team which lost to the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA finals last season.

David Robinson and Dan Majerle led the Olympic finalists with 13 points each, while Danny Manning had 12, Charles Smith of Georgetown 11 nine during a second-half rally - and Vernell Coles 10.

The Olympic finalists two players must be cut before Sept. 2 — had won their first four games on the tour that continues Monday night in Oklahoma City. The tour concludes with games against NBA players in Denver and Las Vegas, Nev., and a final game in Los Angeles against Athletes In Action.

The 1988 finalists fell behind early and were never able to contend inside with the first opponent on the tour that had the look of a real team.

The Olympians trailed 47-34 at halftime and things got worse in a hurry as the NBA players outscored them 12-3 over the opening 5:25 of the third period for a 59-37 lead, the largest of the game. Miller, who plays for the Indiana Pacers, had four points in the run, as did Thomas, who also had a nice assist in the run on a pass to Piston teammate Dennis Rodman, who finished with 12 points.

The Olympians pulled within seven points on four occasions but could get no closer. The Olympic team put on tremendous pressure to force turnovers during the run,

KC's Gubicza eyes 20-win milestone

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND - Now that he's made it to 15 wins for the first time in his career, Kansas City's Mark Gubicza is allowing himself to look toward 20.

"I feel if I can stay consistent and give us a chance to win, that's a possibility," the Royals' righthander said Sunday after he pitched a six-hitter to beat the Cleveland Indians 3-1.

Gubicza, 15-7, was the beneficiary of three Cleveland balks, two of which led to Kansas City runs. Indians reliever Rod Nichols balked in the tie-breaking run in the sixth inning.

"I'm glad we won, but you hate to see guys lose a ballgame because of balks," said Willie Wilson, who scored all three of the Royals' runs.

The victory pushed Kansas City to five games over .500 for the first time since the All-Star Gubicza improved to 3-0 in three starts against the Indians this year, walking one and striking out four. It was his fourth complete game.

"It's been fun this year," he said. "Being around the plate makes it more enjoyable to pitch and easier for the guys in the field, because they know they don't have to wait around for me to throw strikes."

The 26-year-old has won 10 or more games in each of his five major-league seasons, with his previous high coming when he 10-2 since May 31.

"He's got a funky arm motion, and it's hard for right-handed hitters to pick up the ball," Cleveland manager Doc Edwards said. "He's a young fellow, and he seems like he's coming into his own this year."

Nichols, 0-4, balked in Wilson to break a 1-1 tie in the sixth, after Wilson beat out a single to short, continued to second on shortstop Paul Zuvella's wild throw and moved to third on a forceout.

The 23-year-old Nichols agreed that he had failed to come to a stop in his stretch motion. "I don't know. It was just a mental lapse," Nichols said. Kansas City added a run in the eighth. Wilson reached on a forceout and George Brett walked, and the runners advanced on a double steal before Pat Tabler singled in Wilson. Brett was thrown out at the plate by center fielder Joe Carter.

Wilson led off the game with a single off Indians' starter Bud Black, moved to second on a balk, took third on Kurt Stillwell's sacrifice bunt and scored on George Brett's groundout.

The Indians' only run scored in the fourth when the Royals' shortstop, Stillwell, misjudged Willie Upshaw's pop-fly double and Brook Jacoby followed with an RBI single.

Edwards limited Black to five innings because Black, who has been troubled by a sore elbow, was making his first appearance went 14-10 in 1985. He has gone since coming of the disabled list.

Watson winning

By Chris Wilhelm Sports Writer

The K-State football team's "quarterback war" is heating up as the season opener with Tulsa looms less than two weeks away.

The three candidates fighting for the starting job are freshman Paul Watson, senior Gary Swim, who started eight games last season, and sophomore Carl Straw.

Watson, who was redshirted last season, finished spring drills No. 1 on the depth chart and remains the top candidate in what is probably the most competitive positional battle on the squad. Straw is currently second with Swim following closely behind.

"The quarterback war is doing real good right now," Watson said. "It's getting more and more competitive. We had a scrimmage (recently) and all of us looked pretty good out there.

"It's pretty close in every aspect. I don't think any one of us has a particular advantage over the rest. I think it will probably go down to the last week before they name one of us (as the starting quarterback)."

While K-State's top prospect for starting quarterback is a redshirt freshman, all three prospects have combined to give the team solid leadership at the position.

"I think (the competition between quarterbacks) is good," Coach Stan Parrish said. "All of the quarterbacks had at least one touchdown drive in our (recent) scrimmage. We need that. We need them to press each other. We need the great competition to be there and we need more than one guy to be ready."

With less than two weeks before the season opener, the quarterbacks are hard at work getting focused on their positions, whether as starter or backup.

pressure on them, but it's the most competitive position we have on our team right now," Parrish said. While not conceding the starting role for the season, last year's starter Swim has accepted the challenge of learning the role of backup quarterback.

"This team has got to change something. We've got to win," Swim

"We are trying not to put too much said. "I have got to be behind Paul for the team that we are all so closely and Carl and they have got to get behind each other. We are all confident that each of the rest of us can do the job.

"Whoever starts at quarterback has to be prepared but he also has to realize that there are guys backing him up that will be ready. A lot of people would like to see one guy come out on top but I think it's better matched in talent."

The outlook for the Wildcats at the quarterback slot is very promising, especially if the offensive line remains healthy.

"If we've got somebody who can step in and back up the starter and the confidence is still there, we will be a lot better off," Swim said. "We can

Non-revenue sports need financial aid

K-State needs a non-revenue sports scho- those voting had to concur, regardless of the larship fee.

With that rather controversial statement having been made up front, let's take a walk down memory lane and review what happened in February 1987 when K-State students were faced with such a fee proposal.

On Feb. 11, K-State students voted 2,165 to 1,518 in favor of the following question: "Shall a fee of $6.50 a semester/full-time students and $3 per semester/part-time students, collected in the spring and fall semesters, be implemented beginning in the 1987 fall semester for the use of scholarships for nonrevenue intercollegiate sports for a period of three years, subject to renewal according to student fee regulation?"

Yes, you've read correctly to this point. K-State students did indeed vote in favor of this proposal in 1987. One small problem existed: not enough students voted in the referendum for the proposal to pass.

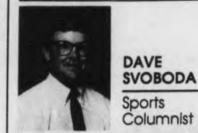

It was established prior to the vote that for the proposal to pass either one-third of the student body had to vote with one-half of those voting concurring, or two-thirds of total number of votes cast.

Simply stated, that old dreary K-State election beast called apathy reared its ugly head and shot down a proposal K-State students appeared to favor. It was tragic that only 3,683 students voted on the measure, but the pattern seems to be par for the course at K-State, which can't even seem to muster decent vote totals for a student body presidential election.

When 59 percent of any voting body regardless of how small - votes for something in a normal election, it's usually enough to get the job done. But not here. No sour grapes are necessary, and that referendum is dead and buried. It's time to work toward a new and better proposal.

Larry Travis, who was the athletic director in 1987 and was responsible for pushing for the proposal then, is gone now. He's been replaced by Steve Miller.

Having Miller, a former Wildcat track and cross country coach who has seen the plight of non-revenue sports at K-State and elsewhere firsthand, leading the crusade for a Svoboda on Sports new fee should be a big plus. Miller, in addition to having rare insight as to what such a proposal would provide, is also at least three times the motivator Travis was. Simply put, if you're not in favor of the idea of an athletic fee right now, give Miller a listen and he just might change your mind.

It isn't so much the notion of having to change the minds of the student population, however, that should worry Miller. Miller must — and this is an absolute must — bring more students to the polling booths if such a proposal has a snowball's chance in the Union parking lot in August of passing.

He also must work closely with the Student Senate in the initial process of drafting a new proposal. In August 1986, the Athletic Fee Task Force, which was appointed by the Senate, began researching the feasibility of the measure. It was brought to a vote six months later.

Miller must not - and this is another absolute - attempt to shove his views down the throats of a Senate that is probably in favor of such a proposal in principle.

Once a new proposal is drafted that is acceptable to all, Miller and his staff must work tirelessly, taking the merits of the proposal to the student body through visitations and heart-felt lectures during stumps around the campus. He's got to sell not only the fee, but the programs the fee would support as

Since beginning his new job earlier this summer, Miller has harped on how important he believes it is for K-Staters to accentuate the positives of what they do have rather than the negatives of what they don't.

volleyball, men's baseball, and men's and women's golf, track, and cross country must show that their programs are worthy of student financial support at a time where Farrell Library is seriously underfunded and money is tight across the board.

And if such a proposal should, by chance, be defeated, Miller must not attempt to bypass the students and go straight to the Kansas Board of Regents with a similar proposal. You need the students here, Steve. Don't ever forget that.

As a long-time supporter of K-State athletics and a student still paying fees, I would wholeheartedly support a new athletic fee proposal similar to the one defeated in Febru-

Keep an open mind, do your homework and vote when the proposal is presented, as it no doubt will be in the coming months. Here's hoping that your vote will be in favor of moving K-State's non-revenue sports to the forefront nationally.

Remember the thrill of the men's basketball victory over Purdue in the NCAA tour-Those involved with women's tennis and nev? K-State's non-revenue athletes deserve the chance to provide similar thrills.

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS - Greg Louganis, the defending gold medalist in springboard and plat-form diving, finished first and Bruce Kimball lost an intense three-way battle for the other platform spot on the Olympic diving team Sunday.

Louganis, who missed getting a perfect score on an inward 11/4 somersault pike when one judge gave him a 9.5 to go with six 10s, won the 20-dive event with 1,331.19 points.

Patrick Jeffrey, who was fifth with four dives remaining, moved past Kimball, Mike Wantuck and Matt Scoggin to finish second with 1,261.71 points.

Wantuck placed third at 1,254.72, followed by Kimball, whose participation was the subject of protest by a group of Brandon, Fla., residents, was fourth with 1,244,43. Scoggin, second heading into the finals, slipped to Brandon. goeic money into 50 - 80-

Florida State really wanted to be No. 1 at the end of last season, but the Seminoles won't object to starting at the top this year.

"It's given my kids a great incentive, and it will be interesting to see how they respond to it," Coach Bobby Bowden said after learning that Florida State had been ranked No. 1 in The Associated Press preseason college football poll.

"But what have we done? We came in second last year. We're used to reading about the Oklahomas, Alabamas, Southern Cals - folks like that. It's a privilege to be thought of in that light, and we accept the challenge. We want to get our program where we're up there with the big guys."

The Seminoles thought they were the best team in the country a year ago but finished second because of an early-season, one-point loss to eventual national champion Miami.

With 10 teams receiving at least one first-place vote, Florida State was a runaway choice over Nebraska, with 1987 champ Miami finishing eighth. Florida State and Miami open the season against each other on Saturday night, Sept. 3.

The Seminoles received 44 of 60 first-place votes and 1,161 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

It marks the first time Florida State has been ranked No. 1. The Seminoles' previous high was last year's runnerup finish as well as a No. 2 ranking in the final regular-season poll of 1980.

Nebraska, No. 6 last year, received two first-place votes and 952 points. The Comhuskers open the season against 10th-ranked Texas A&M in the Kickoff Classic next Saturday night.

Oklahoma was a close third, followed by Clemson, UCLA, Southern California, Auburn, Miami, Iowa and Texas A&M.

The Second Ten consists of Michigan, Georgia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan State, West Virginia, Tennessee, LSU, South Carolina and Penn State.

The AP poll originated in 1936 and the first preseason vote was taken in 1950. Since that time, the preseason No. 1 team has won the national championship just seven times - Tennessee in 1951, Michigan State in 1952, Oklahoma in 1956, 1974 and 1975, Alabama in 1978 and Oklahoma again in 1985.

Oklahoma, the preseason No. 1 in each of the past three years, finished third this time, the same spot the Sooners wound up last season after a 20-14 Orange Bowl loss to Miami. Oklahoma received two first-place votes and 946 points.

Three first-place ballots and 929 points went to fourth-place Clemson, No. 12 and champions of the Atlantic Coast Conference a year ago. Syracuse, last year's No. 4 team, did not make the preseason Top Twenty.

UCLA, which finished ninth in 1987, is fifth with two first-place votes and 818 points. Southern Cal, the Bruins' crosstown rival and the defending Pac-10 champion, received three first-place votes and 775 points after finishing 18th last Like Oklahoma, Auburn begins 1988 in the same position where it ended 1987. The seventh-place Tigers received 769 points.

Miami was a unanimous choice for the 1987 national championship but the Hurricanes received only one first-place ballot and 747 points in the preseason balloting.

Iowa, No. 16 last year, is ninth with one first-place vote and 736 points. Texas A&M, which rounded out the final 1987 Top Ten, is again 10th with 659 points.

Redskins, Williams rout Raiders

By The Associated Press

Doug Williams and the Washington Redskins have emphasized anew a basic NFL lesson for the Los Angeles Raiders — teams that have quarterbacks will be winners; teams that don't ...

Williams, MVP in the last Super Bowl, completed 7 of 9 passes for 62 yards and two touchdowns as the Redskins improved to 2-1 by routing the Raiders 45-27, the third straight loss for the quarterback-poor Los Angeles team.

"I thought I was going to play longer tonight, but things went so well we were fortunate enough to get all four quarterbacks in," Williams

The Raiders' quarterbacks threw five interceptions, three by Vince Evans and two by Steve Beuerlein, who may be the starter despite having never thrown a regular-season NFL pass. Four of the interceptions led to touchdowns.

There were similar contrasts in other NFL exhibition games Saturday night.

Phil Simms completed 14 of 17 passes for the New York Giants as they remained unbeaten with a 28-17 win over Pittsburgh, whose two quarterbacks - Bubby Brister and Todd Blackledge — went 10 for 32.

The 3-0 Giants looked close to their 1986 Super Bowl form as they outgained Pittsburgh 352-196 and got outstanding performances from Simms, tight end Zeke Mowatt and running back Joe Morris.

Mowatt, filling in for holdout Mark Bavaro, caught six passes, two for touchdowns, and Morris ran 18 times for 74 yards as the offensive lines provided holes for the first time this season against the 2-1 Steelers.

Pittsburgh got most of its yardage on kickoff returns by Rod Woodson, whose 70-yard return of the opening kickoff set up the first score as Pittsburgh took a 10-0 lead before Simms and Mowatt got hot.

That came after the Rams missed two late chances to win in regulation. Mike Lansford missed a 44-yard field goal with two seconds left, after missing from 41 yards moments

Allen Pinkett carried 11 times for 83 yards for Houston, and Curtis Duncan had five receptions for 106 yards. Warren Moon was 15 of 24 for 187 yards in his first extensive outing of the preseason for the Oilers.

Whatever happens on the field, all three agree that whoever gets the starting nod will have their total support.

"When I get my chance, I've got to produce," Swim said. "I know the coaches are going to put the people on the field that they feel can win. Whoever starts at quarterback, the important thing is how the team does."

After playing in all 11 games last season and was the starter in eight,

Swim threw for more than 1,300 yards in his initial year at K-State after transferring from Snow (Utah) Junior College.

Among his accomplishments last season was an 81-yard touchdown toss to John Williams against the University of Oklahoma, a string of 57 straight completions without an interception, and was picked off just 11 times in 235 attempts, which means he threw just one interception every 21 attempts. Straw saw limited action in four games last year after spending his initial season here as a redshirt freshman. As a senior at Fair Lawn (N.J.) High School, he completed 109 of 170 passes for 1,790 yards.

Watson was one of the top quarterback prospects in the country in 1986 after passing for more than 5,000 yards and 52 touchdowns in his varsity career. He completed 69 percent of his passes during his varsity prep

"Come one, come all," coach Mike Clark said. The baseball team is expanding this season with the addition of the first freshman and junior varsity squads at K-State, Clark said, and the team has room for growth. "There's at least 20 spots open on the freshman and JV squads and two or three for the varsity," Clark said.

BROOKLYN, Mich. - Davey Allison took the lead with 46 miles to go and pulled away from Rusty Wallace and Bill Elliott for his first Winston Cup victory of the year Sunday in the Champion 400 NASCAR race at Michigan International Allison, 27, from Hueytown, Ala., grabbed the lead in his Ford Thunderbird after a chaotic pit stop in which Sterling Marlin's Oldsmobile Cutlass caught fire. It was the 22nd lead change of the race.

Marlin's gasman, Gerald Oakley, sustained third-degree burns on his left wrist. He was to be treated after returning home to Elliott, the pole-setter who had won six of the last nine races at Michigan, including the previous three August races, was running a close third before the final pit stop. But Elliott, after changing four tires on his Thunderbird, took off before all the lug nuts were tightened and he had to be called back in.

Sindelar elected to finish out the hole — as he is allowed to do - and made a 20-foot putt to go to 17 points, four in front then dashed for shelter. He then had to wait out a 45-minute delay before finishing off the round with a one-putt per on 18 and a medal score, which has no bearing in this unusual format, of 64. It included a 31 over the back.

'Fish Called Wanda' eases summer blues

By Brad Atchison Collegian Reviewer

Before I get to the review of "A Fish Called Wanda," I would like to inform you that I am a bitter reviewer.

Film Review

My bitterness stems from the Manhattan summer movie doldrums. From when the majority of students left in May until things started to pick up a few days ago, Manhattan saw only a handful of good movies. Shows moved into the local theaters and grew roots.

I am telling you about my summer movie blues to contrast with the abundance of new Rambo-free films that have made their way into the local theaters. One of these films is a painfully funny comedy titled "A Fish Called Wanda."

"Wanda" marks the return of English comedian John Cleese to the land of feature films - a land inhabited by several giants from his past.

Giants such as "The Life of Brian" remind us of Cleese's work with Monty Python's Flying Circus, but "Wanda" assures us that this great comedic mind is as creative as ever.

This is a fresh comedy, so don't go to this movie expecting to see Although Cleese wrote the screenp- circus.

lay, Python humor does not dominate

One of the fresh aspects of "Wanda" is the motley, talented band of lead actors. I never thought I would see Jamie Lee Curtis in a movie where she didn't get hacked to pieces or Kevin Kline in the role of an atrociously ugly American, but gosh dang it, I did.

Curtis plays the part of Wanda, a scheming American beauty who has a thing for Otto, a psycho CIA goon played by Kline. But, then again, Wanda also has a thing for Archie, a subdued English barrister played by Cleese. OK. OK. Wanda has a thing for just about everybody, and all of these things are complicated by her overwhelming, all-consuming thing

Wanda's adventures take us through a bank robbery, several love stories (occuring simultaneously), and a series of assaults on three tiny terriers by Wanda's buddy Ken, played by former Pythoner Michael

"Wanda" made me laugh like I have not laughed in a long, long time. It made me laugh at the English, it made me laugh at ugly Americans, and, above all, "Wanda" makes great and "The Holy Grail" will always fun of the ever-present, allconsuming, male mystique.

Rubberman

We may never again see another Monty Python film grace the screen, but "A Fish Called Wanda" is emperical proof that dry English humor is still alive and well in America, courrehashed Monty Python bits. tesy of John Cleese and his flying

All-day drinking allowed

By The Associated Press

LONDON - The bartender's dreaded cry of "last orders" will not ring out in English pubs this afternoon for the first time since World War I.

Instead, thanks to new laws that permit all-day drinking, pubs that open at 11 a.m. can continue serving beer and spirits until closing time at 11 p.m.

"We're hoping for a big crowd," said Mick McCoy, assistant manager of the Hog In The Pound pub near the Oxford Street shopping district. "We're stacked up (with beer). We've taken on a couple of extra people, just in case."

Other pub owners who have lost trade to fast-food restaurants will expand their lunch menus. One even most popular leisure activity, said plans to sell tea and scones.

Under the old system, pubs were forced to close from 3 p.m. until 5:30 p.m. The bartender's warning at 2:50 p.m. created a rush for one last pint, and 10 minutes later, to the cry of "time, gentlemen, please," the fun was over.

The government imposed the rule in 1915 to curb drinking by munitions workers. Scotland went to allday drinking in 1977, but the restric-

Welsh pubs until today.

The British Medical Association opposes the extended hours, fearing increased alcohol-related illness and drunken-driving accidents. But no increase in alcohol abuse or surge in consumption was detected in Scotland.

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd, the Cabinet minister responsible for liquor laws, likened the old restriction to a "corset, a straitjacket, which has no particular rhyme or reason."

Parliament agreed, and voted overwhelmingly in April to do away with the 21/2 -hour afternoon dry period on Monday through Saturday, which has frustrated Britons and tourists alike.

Next to TV-gazing, dropping into the neighborhood pub is Britain's Kenneth Dunjohn, spokesman for the Brewers Society, representing most of Britain's 117 breweries.

The pub is where neighbors, still more men than women, congregate to play darts, work the slot machines and argue about soccer and politics.

It's also the original fast-food outlet. In addition to a smorgasbord of beer, from light lagers to strong, dark ales and other alcohol, pubs serve traditional English food like steaktion held in the 68,000 English and and-kidney pie and bangers and

But pub attendance has been falling since 1979, when a recession hit Britain's heavy industries and cut blue-collar spending power, Dunjohn said. Faced with competition from fast-food chains and wine bars, which arrived in Britain in the same period, the beer market has gone flat.

Pubs will expand their food service to meet the afternoon trade, predicted Joe Boyle, marketing manager for brewers Ind Coope Taylor Walker Ltd., which operates more than 700 pubs in London. The British Tourist Authority expects 50,000 new jobs will be created in pubs and the catering trade.

Only those pubs in busy tourist or commercial areas are expected to take advantage of the new hours, while those in residential areas will continue to close in the afternoon.

The Sherlock Holmes pub near Trafalgar Square plans to serve full cream teas - scones, strawberry jam, the works - every afternoon.

"As far as I can see, the house (pub) will be more of a coffee shop in the afternoon than a drinking house," said John Williams, who manages the pub with his wife, Jean.

High temperatures cause problems, lower attendance at Midwest fairs

By The Associated Press

Reeling livestock, sizzling sidewalks, ice cream through a straw these are a few of the added detractions at Midwest state fairs in a summer of killing heat and devastating

The fairs still feature Ferris wheels and funhouses, midway crowds of farmers in coveralls, girls in summer dresses, swarms of eager kids - and corn on the cob, cotton candy and snow cones.

But it's not the same.

"You don't feel like eating," said Don Carlson, 66, of Belvidere, at the Illinois State Fair in Springfield. "You want something, but you don't."

"And the ice cream melts so fast," said his wife, Vi.

On Tuesday, when the temperature hit 102 degrees in Indianapolis, "there were four fatals in the poultry division," said Indiana State Fair spokesman Jeff Fisher. The owners, he noted, had left their entries in cars "with the windows rolled up."

By Thursday, five rabbits, two hogs and eight chickens died from the 97-degree heat, and livestock exhibitors were taking extra precautions to keep their animals comfortable in fairground barns.

"They're packing some down with ice, they're putting ice in front of fans to blow cool air," Fisher said.

last year, attendance was down 7 percent for the first 12 days. Free tickets went out to some drought-stricken farmers to squelch rumors of cancellation.

Missouri State Fair director Bill Waddell said rain would help the state reach its goal of 350,000 visitors to the 11-day fair that ends Aug. 28 at Sedalia - with airconditioning for indoor activities.

Relentless hot weather "could hurt us, but it always seems to rain during the fair," Waddell said.

Officials of the Michigan State Fair, which begins its 140th run Friday, said entries were down only slightly.

"We've set aside an area with a large tent and nice cool water and lemonade," said fair manager Bernie Lennon, "It will be a little oasis."

Officials at the Iowa State Fair were optimistic about attendance as the fair began its 11-day run Thursday. Butch Webb of Wichita, working in 104-degree heat Wednesday to prepare the fairgrounds, said that while this summer was "a little bit extreme, I don't remember setting up ... and not being covered with sweat."

Spokeswoman Kathie Swift recalled a 108-degree reading at Iowa's 1983 fair.

The Wisconsin State Fair, which ended Aug. 14 at West Allis, drew 821,819 people — down nearly 6 percent from last year.

The Kentucky State Fair, which began Thursday, has 14 acres of airconditioned space, said spokeswoman Brenda Frank, who predicted that teen-agers would be outdoors on the midway, whatever the weather.

"I don't think they know how hot it is," she said. "We won't tell them that."

Israeli work week cut

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM — The Cabinet on Sunday shortened Israel's work week from six days to five, granting public workers a twoday weekend for the first time, a government spokesman said.

The plan, part of a long-term wage agreement, will affect about 400,000 public sector employees, including teachers, government and health workers, a Finance Ministry spokesman said. Public workers constitute approximately one-third of Israel's labor force.

"We do not expect financial gain from this, but if the whole world has discovered the secret of a five-day week, there must be a good reason," said spokesman Yitzhak Feinberg.

Israeli workers currently work a 45-hour week, with full days Sunday through Thursday and a half-day on Friday. Saturday is the Jewish Sabbath.

The week will gradually be reduced to 421/2 hours, spread over five days, and then to 40 hours, Feinberg said. The plan will be implemented in stages and is expected to be fully in effect by the end of 1989, he said.

Soviet troops arrest protesters

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW - Troops charged hundreds of demonstrators and pushed them out of a central park Sunday when the protesters began chanting "Prague, Prague, Prague" in memory of the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia 20 years ago.

Several dozen people, some shouting "Fascists!" at police, were taken away, but the exact number was not known. No injuries were reported among the 500 demonstrators and onlookers or the 500 national guard soldiers and police.

The protest was called by the Democratic Union, an unsanctioned political party that Soviet officials have denounced as illegal.

About 100 demonstrators staged a second rally later Sunday along the Arbat shopping mall, said Democraev. He said police chased them and arrested an unspecified number who Soviet television carried a report on the nightly news program "Vremya" showing a relatively quiet scene in Prague. The announcer said few residents of the Czechoslovak capital heeded calls to demonstrate on the anniversary. There was no mention of the Moscow demonstrations.

But reporters in Prague said an estimated 10,000 people marched through the city shouting "Freedom!" and "Russians go home!" They said the march began after a rally in Wenceslas Square.

Police did not interfere for about 30 minutes but then blocked the marchers. At least five people were reported detained.

The crackdown was in keeping with the Kremlin's steadfast defense of the Warsaw Pact invasion of Aug. 20-21, 1968, although some Soviets have suggested the "Prague Spring" reforms crushed in Czechoslovakia resemble those now being tried in the Soviet Union.

In the first protest, busloads of uniformed police and troops surrounded the park across from Pushkin Square and shouted over loudspeakers: "Leave the designated area or you will be detained." The crowd responded by chanting the name of the Czechoslovak capital.

'Dandy' dies at age 61

By The Associated Press

PARIS - Jean-Paul Aron, a philosopher and self-proclaimed 'dandy" who announced last year he was suffering from AIDS, has died at the age of 61, hospital officials said.

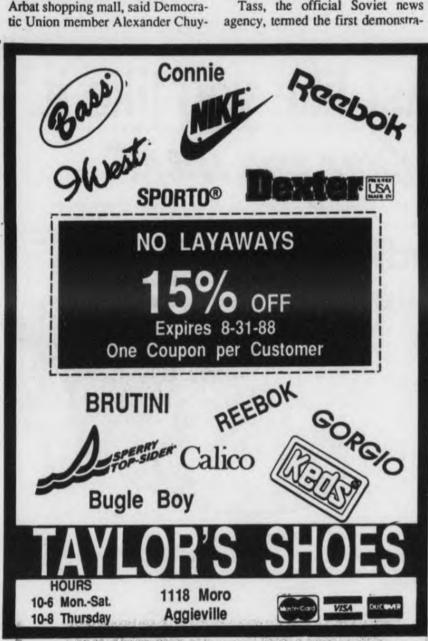

"Nothing in the world would have made me talk publicly about my homosexuality," if he had not contracted AIDS, Aron said recently.

Officials at Claude Bernard hospital would not disclose the details of the illness that led to Aron's death Saturday morning.

In an interview on French television, Aron said he felt an obligation to break the "taboo" surrounding acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which attacks the body's immune system.

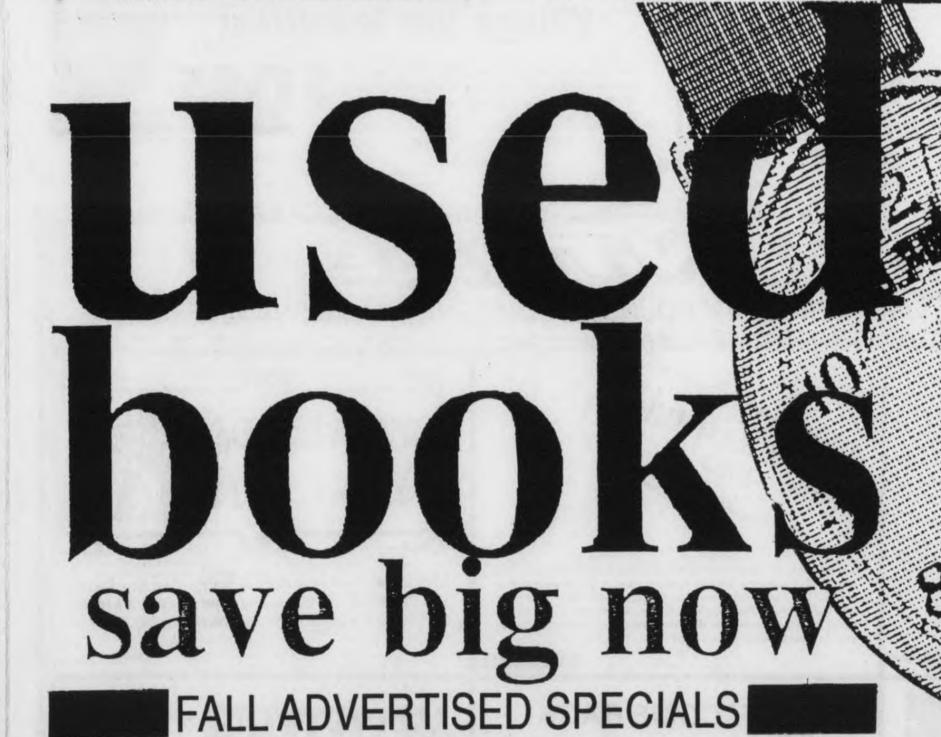

AIDS is spread most often through sexual contact, needles or syringes shared by drug abusers, infected blood or blood products, and from infected pregnant women to their offspring.

"The silence about this illness must be broken," he said. "The intellectual, whose duty is to truth, can recount better than others the great stakes."

Museum dedicated to dying, displays antiquated rituals

By The Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. - Death may be a constant but the rituals change with the times, as a museum dedicated to dying and bereavement illustrates.

Old embalming tools, a 1917 Ford Model-T hearse that doubled as an ambulance, intricately braided wreaths of human hair and a 1,500-pound glass casket are some of the memorabilia in Fred Hunter's funeral museum, one of a handful in the United States.

"If we can teach a little to a student, and help families understand the history, that death is natural ... this helps them understand there's a heritage to this process. The whole funeral process is a part of growing, of letting go," said Hunter, president of National Selected Morticians, a 965-member trade group.

A third-generation funeral director and antique enthusiast, Hunter inherited some displays from his father and grandfather. After he bought a large collection in 1986, there was no longer room to show them off at his business. The museum opened last year next to Hunter's funeral home.

The 1,200 visitors have included mourners who stopped by after a funeral, tourists who have stumbled death," she said. upon it and students from local high schools or community colleges.

"A lot of times, people sitting here will see the museum and we'll open it for them. It answers a lot of questions," said Steve Plescia, grief counselor at Hunter's.

Learning funeral history is a good way to brace for the future, said Roberta Halporn, director of the New York City-based Center for Thanatology Research and Education, a non-profit group that studies dying, death and grieving.

"This is a death-denying culture. So when it happens, the pain is almost double. People without experience tend to want to eliminate everything - no funeral. But each part of the ritual has significance," she said. "When these rituals are established and practiced, it starts the bereavement process going in a healthy way.'

Kay Anderson, a career guidance teacher, agrees. She has taken Piper High School students considering health careers to Hunter's for years.

"As weird as it sounds, it really is a good learning experience. Part of managing a career is understanding death. It's a good thing, because kids at this age have no experience with

For Hunter, the museum reflects the changes in American culture.

At the turn of the century, funerals were still family reunions. Morticians visited homes to prepare the body, often laid out in parlors, and built made-to-measure coffins.

As people moved to cities, wakes moved out of houses and funeral homes were born.

During the Victorian era, wreaths were fashioned from hair, generally that of the deceased, and a family might weave a huge multi-hued wreath over several generations.

Hearses once regularly doubled as ambulances, a practice that ended with regulations that ambulances be painted white. That was hardly appropriate for a funeral vehicle, Hunter said, stroking his gleaming black Model-T, which won first prize - as an ambulance - at the Antique Automotive Club of America's 1982

Other funeral museums include a small display owned by T.J. Beggs and Sons Funeral Home of Madison, near Tallahassee, and a traveling museum run by the Illinois Funeral Director's Association of Springfield.

VA alters health claims

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Veterans Administration managers frequently made wrong decisions on veterans' disability claims in their haste to "make themselves look good" and win pay bonuses for meeting production quotas, House investigators said Sunday.

The House Government Operations Committee said the VA tried to cover up its mistakes by deliberately under-reporting the error rate to committee investigators.

The panel suggested that Congress end a 55-year-old prohibition and allow veterans who are denied benefits to appeal their cases in federal court. Their present last resort is a VA appeals board, where veterans won less than 13 percent of the time under the nowabolished quota system.

A committee report released Sunday cited testimony by a former VA official that some disability cases were processed in a scant 7.8 minutes to meet production

The panel said an internal study by VA attorney Ronald B. Abrams in 1984 blamed many errors squarely on VA managers "trying to make themselves look good for ... the agency's internal personnel evaluation system."

The VA doles out $11 billion in disability benefits annually to 2.5 million veterans, widows and children. While some veterans were improperly denied benefits under the VA's error-plagued system, others may have received money to which they were not entitled, according to committee staffers.

The VA said in a statement it "has not been provided with a copy of the committee's report and is obviously disadvantaged by the fact that it was released to the media before it came to us. We intend to review it."

Nine of the 15 Republicans on the 38-member committee filed dissenting views disagreeing with the recommendation for court appeals.

"While we share the committee's concerns about ... practices such as production quotas ... we cannot support the committee's inference that the (appeals board) does not have the best interests of the veterans in mind," they said.

Faculty-student ratio may cause cutbacks

By The Collegian Staff

K-State's low faculty-student ratio has created a negative image of the University that needs to be changed, according to some members of Faculty Senate.

Members of both the Kansas Board of Regents and the Legislature have expressed concern about the University's low faculty-student ratio. K-State averages one faculty member to every 14 students, compared with Oklahoma State University's average of one faculty member to every 26 students.

At the Aug. 16 Senate meeting, Mark Lapping, dean of the College of Architecture and Design, said he was concerned that the number of full professors may be cut in favor of hiring teacher assistants. Thus, the ratio would be increased.

Reducing the number of professors could have negative repercussions on the quality of education students receive, he said.

"The quality dimension is very important," Lapping said. Anthony Jurich, professor of human development and family studies, said the issue should be a priority, emphasizing the urgency of tackling this problem.

"This is an issue we are going to be living with over the next three or four years," Jurich said. "If there is a priority of things we take on, this is one of the most important."

The Senate also appointed Richard Gallagher, professor of biomedical engineering, as head of the General Faculty Grievance Board. The Board

In a final note, Faculty Senate President Comelia Flora, professor of sociology, anthropology and social work, urged members to attend the All-University Convocation lecture to be given by John Slaughter at 10:30 a.m. Thursday in McCain Auditiorium.

Slaughter, a K-State alumnus, is president of Occidental College in Los Angeles, and was chancellor of the University of Maryland.

Polish strikers face sanctions

444444

WARSAW, Poland - The plants and clamped curfews on three provinces hit by proweek of the worst labor unrest since 1981.

The illegal strikes raised a "specter of anarchy" over Poland and were a "glaring violation of peace and order," said Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak.

The army general, appearing in uniform on national television, said it was the duty of Poland's leaders not to allow the country to return to "the situation before Dec. 13, 1981" — the date that martial law was imposed to suppress the outlawed trade union federation Solidarity.

Kiszczak, also commander of was his duty as interior minister to "assure elementary discipline."

Even before he spoke, strike stormed two strikebound streetcar three months." depots in Szczecin and a bus depot near the city, evicting the man of the strike committee at the workers and detaining at least 150 of them in the first police action in the week of labor unrest.

In addition to authorizing curfews in the provinces of Szczecin, Katowice and Gdansk, Kiszczak said he ordered law enforcement forces "to strengthen external protection" around factories and to prevent outsiders from being present in the plants. Kiszczak said the army was asked to allot troops to "assure the continuity of city transport everywhere it has been immobilized," and misdemeanor courts were advised to jail violators in summary proceedings rather than merely fining them. Katowice is the southern province where miners in Poland's Silesian coal fields have been striking for a week for higher pay and recognition of Solidarity. Hundreds of workers at the Lenin shipyard in Gdansk - the birthplace of Solidarity - joined the strikes Monday, seizing the main government Monday ordered gate of the facility, chanting the troops to secure major industrial name of the banned union and waving Polish flags.

Kiszczak said the strikes were Solidarity strikes following a being carried out by only a minority of workers at the affected plants, but had dire consequences for the economy.

Sit-in strikes were in effect Monday in 13 state enterprises employing more than 90,000 workers.

"Depending on further developments of the situation we shall reach for appropriate measures which are available within the existing law," Kiszczak said, speaking in deliberate tones for between five and 10 minutes, and making no mention of the police raid in Szczecin.

Wroclaw opposition leader the nation's police forces, said it Jozef Pinior said after hearing the speech on television that "the authorities may succeed in pacifying the strikers now, but the wave organizers said riot police of strikes will return in one, two or

Romuald Ziolkowski, chair-Dabie bus depot in Szczecin, said that during the raid, the riot police were throwing strikers "into police vans like pigs."

"There was crying and screaming there," he added.

Raids also occurred at streetcar stations and at the bus depot in Police, a city outside of Szczecin, about 7 p.m., Ziolkowski said.

About 100 people were at each of the three depots, and 50 to 70 people were detained at each site, he said.

Before the police action in Szczecin, authorities had detained at least 10 people nationwide and threatened criminal charges against strike organizers.

"We must fight for reforms. We must fight for Solidarity. There is no other way," Solidarity leader Lech Walesa told a crowd of young workers at the 10,000-worker Lenin shipyard.

Halls overflow

By Christine Doll Features Editor

When Sean Lance, freshman in architecture, drove to Manhattan Wednesday, he was planning how he was going to move all of his things into a small dorm room.

But the news he received at Marlatt Hall put an end to his big moving plans. The residence halls were full, and he did not have a room.

He would be placed in temporary

He and five other men would be sharing Marlatt's music room. The piano and instruments were moved out of the green, basement room and three metal bunk beds were hauled in and placed side by side.

Instead of decorating his room with a truckload of stuff, Lance put the items he absolutely needed in a laundry basket and moved to college.

When he moved in, he held the 11th position on the waiting list for room assignments. As rooms became available, he moved up in the list, but students are still moving into the residence halls, said Thomas Frith, director of housing.

Other students are staying in Putnam Hall's study rooms. At the end of last week, Goodnow Hall also being assigned a room Monday.

Two of Lance's temporary roommates were assigned rooms when other students cancelled their contracts or did not show up. The remaining roommates wait until other residents move out.

Waiting is difficult. The room is crammed full of beds, sofas, suitcases, boxes, books, towels and hanging clothes. There is no place to study. "I'm going to go to the housing people and say, 'Be up front with me. Is there a realistic chance I can get a room within a week?""

On Monday night, Lance's number was up. A room was available in Haymaker Hall, and he could move in at any time. His new roommate, however, smokes cigerettes - a habit he prefers to live without. He hopes arrangements can be made to allow him to move in with a nonsmoker.

The Department of Housing is making accomodations to place those without rooms. For the first time, residents who belong to fraternities have the opportunity to move out of the halls and into the fraternity

Bush calls running mate

By The Associated Press

Vice President George Bush on Monday defended his besieged running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle, as a patriot who served honorably in the National Guard and at least "did not go to Canada" to avoid the Vietnam

And Quayle told a veterans group in a hastily arranged speech that he pulled no strings to get into the Indiana National Guard.

"I want you above all others to know the facts," Quayle told a convention in Chicago of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. "I asked no one for special treatment and none was needed because there were vacancies in my unit before, during and after the time I joined the Indiana National Bush, who spoke earlier to the VFW group, strongly defending his running mate, said he wants to speak out for Quayle because "I want to get that (campaign) focus where it belongs, which is Bush-Dukakis, and that's what I tried to do." The Republican National Convention boosted Bush to a narrow lead over Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, 46-40, according to a CBS News poll released Monday. The same poll, however, revealed serious reservations about the choice of Quayle as a running mate.

Half the respondents in the survey said they did not believe Quayle has the experience to be a good president, and another 28 percent were unsure. Thirty-nine percent said they wished Bush chose someone else.

Bush, in his speech, recalled his own record as a bomber pilot in World War II and said he had strong feelings for those who "fought in the rice paddies" of Vietnam.

"I hardly ever walk by the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington when I don't get a lump in my throat or a tear in my eye," he said. "But many others served, too, some in the Army Reserve, some in the National Guard - people who were not sent overseas."

"True, he didn't go to Vietnam, but his unit wasn't sent," Bush said. "But there's another truth: He did not go to Canada, he did not burn his draft card and he damned sure didn't burn the American flag. And I'm proud to have him at my side."

The vice president said his running mate was the victim of "shrill, partisan attack." He also charged Dukakis with wanting "unilateral cuts in our defense."

If the United States had embraced the nuclear freeze movement, as Dukakis had, "it would have locked in Soviet superiority in a range of strategic areas," he said.

Dukakis told reporters in Lowell, Mass., that Quayle's qualifications obviously would be an issue to

Group to discuss higher education

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

The traditions of land grant universities and their relationship with and influences upon opportunities in higher education are the subjects of tonight's Pre-Convocation Forum.

The forum, "The Land Grant Tradition and Educational Opportunity," will be at 7:30 p.m. in Union 213.

The first fall University Convocation will be Thursday at 10:30 a.m. in McCain Auditorium. John Slaughter, president of Occidental College in Los Angeles and a 1956 graduate of K-State, will deliver his address "A Case for Celebrating Diversity in Higher Education.

Slaughter's address will focus on cases of racism on college campuses, on the liberal arts core curriculum, and the relationship between the two.

Peg Wherry, chairwoman of the University Convocation Committee, said the purpose of the Pre-Convocation Forum is to provide background for the University Convocation.

"In the forum, the panel will raise some questions that Dr. Slaughter's talk will raise and maybe answer," Wherry said.

Wherry said one of the main questions regarding a liberal arts core curriculum is: "Why are required courses required? "In some cases, a core curriculum is presented as a list of things to know and in other cases as a list of ways to think," she said. The concepts and values represented and propagated by a certain core curriculum may serve as an influence on the political and social realms, Wherry said.

The land grant tradition as it relates to these issues also will be explored and discussed.

The panel will consist of Anne Butler, an associate in the Office of Minority Affairs; Sue Zschoche, assistant professor of history; Michael Donnelly, associate professor of English; John Steffen, associate professor of administration and foundations of education; and Mark Lapping, dean of the College of Architecture and Design.

BERLIN - An East Berlin woman who eluded armed guards as she swam to freedom through a polluted river says she's three months pregnant, officials reported Monday.

Four East Germans swam across Berlin's Spree River on Sunday evening while an East German patrol boat stopped nearby as they scrambled onto the West Berlin bank near a government building.

One of the four was Maiga Adryan, who told people she was three months pregnant, said West Berlin city spokesman Hans Birkenbeuel.

"We have no reason to doubt her, even though no medical test has been conducted here so far," Birkenbeuel said.

Adryan, 22, broke a foot during the escape, he said. The river, filled with industrial wastes, is about 260 feet wide and under constant East German patrol at the point where the four swam across it.

Anaconda devours child

SAO PAULO, Brazil - A 3-year-old boy playing along the bank of a river in the western Amazon jungle was crushed and swallowed whole by a 45-foot anaconda, newspapers reported Monday.

They said the boy's father tried in vain to save him from the jaws of the anaconda, a long, heavy South American snake of the boa family.

"The boy, Daniel Menezes, had accompanied his father, Joao, to the river to catch fish. With fish in hand, the father started walking to his small wooden shack a few feet away when he heard screams. He looked back and he saw his son's neck in the jaws of the snake," said Jorcene Martinez, a reporter for O Estadao newspaper.

Martinez spoke to The Associated Press by phone from the jungle city of Porto Velho, 2,045 miles northwest of Sao Paulo. He quoted the father as saying the incident occurred Aug. 8 along the Jaru River.

"It took the family two weeks to travel the more than 185 miles to Porto Velho, where they told us what had happened," Martinez said.

He said the father rushed to his home, grabbed an old rifle and "ran back to the river in a desperate attempt to save his son. But when he got to the river he saw the anaconda had already crushed his son's bones and had started swallowing the body. There was nothing left to do."

Menezes is an impoverished peasant who plants "manioc root and hunts and fishes to feed his family," Martinez said. The Jaru winds through thick jungle and is infested with man-eating piranha, alligators and snakes, Martinez said. The anaconda, one of the world's biggest non-poisonous snakes, kills by crushing its victims, then swallows them whole.

Rolling Stones may reunite

LONDON - Could it be that the Rolling Stones can't get no satisfaction from playing apart? Former Stones vocalist Mick Jagger says the splintered band is planning a reunion.

"We are talking about (a reunion) for 1989," Jagger told a reporter Monday at Heathrow Airport en route to Australia from his home in New York.

Jagger refused to give details, but when asked what the essential element of such a reunion would be, he answered, "Pleasure."

The Rolling Stones' last album was "Dirty Work" in 1985.

Man suspected in 60 rapes

COLUMBUS, Ohio - A suspect in a four-year string of attacks attributed to the "handcuff rapist" faces charges in as many as 60 rapes, police say.

Robert Biddings, 34, of Columbus, was arrested Friday and was being held in the Franklin County jail on a single rape count.

Police spokeswoman Denise Pangborn said Biddings is a suspect in a series of attacks dating to 1984 and attributed to a person nicknamed because he used handcuffs in early attacks.

Pangborn said evidence against Biddings would be presented to a Franklin County grand jury, accompanied by requests for indictments on 60 counts of rape and more than 100 other miscellaneous felony counts.

Police Capt. Antone Lanata said Biddings was arrested as a result of an attempted rape Aug. 11. The victim gave police a partial license number of her attacker's car, and police used it to arrest Biddings.

Lanata said Biddings had so far been been linked to 19 additional attacks.

"The victims have picked him out of a photo display, or by physical evidence - fingerprints," Lanata said. Interviews with victims were continuing, he said.

Officials asked to step down

TOPEKA - Mayor Doug Wright asked City Attorney Ed Johnson and Deputy City Attorney Rich Jones on Monday to resign their positions, citing a lack of trust in the office.

"We felt there was a lack of trust and confidence in that office, both among members of staff and on the city council,"

Chief Administrative Officer Ron Miller said problems involving a lawsuit brought against the city over development of property on Kansas Avenue were at least "a factor" in the request for the resignations.

Neither Johnson nor Jones had any immediate comment, although Johnson did say he had agreed to submit a letter of resignation, effective Sept. 16.

Wright said Miller would oversee the day-to-day operations of the city attorney's office until a new city attorney could be

Police led to woman's remains

SALINA — One of two men suspected in the attempted murder and rape of a Salina woman led law officers Monday to the skeletal remains of a woman, according to news reports.

The Salina Journal reported in Tuesday's editions that officials believe the remains found in Kanapolis State Park may be those of Darlene Burkholder, a Salina woman who has been missing for about three weeks.

A pathologist and a dentist worked to identify the remains and a positive identification is expected today, the newspaper said.

The two men were expected to be charged today in the kidnapping, rape and attempted murder of a 20-year-old Salina woman, authorities said. The woman, who was attacked early Saturday, had been last seen at Ziggy's, a Salina nightclub.

It was at that same nightclub that Burkholder had last been seen before she disappeared on July 31. The woman attacked on Saturday was found walking nude, with her throat slashed and her face beaten, along a Saline County road later in the day.

TOPEKA - Gov. Mike Hayden said Monday he was pleased with a meeting he had earlier in the day with attorneys and representatives of the insurance industry about the medical malpractice situation in Kansas.

In July, Medical Protective Co. of Fort Wayne, Ind., the last insurance company providing liability insurance for individual doctors, announced it would no longer write new policies. A few days before, Medical Defense Insurance Co., based in Springfield, Mo., notified 410 Kansas doctors that it would no longer provide any coverage at all as of Sept. 1.

However, also on Monday, Insurance Commissioner Fletcher Bell announced that a 33 percent rate increase had been approved for Medical Protective Co., prompting the company to continue to do business stand ready to work toward finding a in the state.

'The company has agreed to remain in the Kansas professional liability insurance market for the forseeable future," Bell said.

Havden said following the meeting with attorneys and insurance representatives that "discussion of various options to address the problem took place."

Those various options include a phase-out of the health care stabilization fund, which pays parts of some malpractice awards; a possible constitutional amendment that would place a cap on the size of damages a jury can award in some cases; the state's requirement that doctors have malpractice coverage, and the size of that mandatory coverage.

"It was an extremely positive meeting in that all parties involved agree that the problem is severe and solution," Hayden said.

"I think it was unanimously agreed that there is a problem," said Dale Pohl of Eureka, president of the Kansas Bar Assocation. "I wouldn't say anyone was at fault. I'm firmly convinced reasonable minds can always find a solution."

Hayden has said the malpractice insurance crisis particularly hurts the quality of medical care available in small towns and rural areas.

"I think it's very encouraging to have all the parties at the same table," said Kim Yelkin, a spokeswoman for St. Paul Fire and Marine Co. "The governor seems to be committed to finding a solution."

Lawmakers have been wrestling with the issue of medical malpractice for some time.

Foreigners tour state's dryland farms

from Staff and Wire Reports

Researchers from 29 countries toured farms Monday near Garden City and heard from a K-State agronomist to learn how U.S. farmers use dryland farming methods.

Australian researcher and farmer Jeff Esdaile said a lack of rainfall and high irrigation prices are forcing Australian farmers to search for new methods of conservation tillage. He said the problem is compounded because Australian farmers do not receive government subsidies.

Australia averages eight inches of rain per year, making several Australians on the tour envious 16 inches of rain per year.

In Garden City, they heard from Charles Norwood, an agronomist with K-State Extension. He explained experimental methods designed to aid farmers who switch from irrigated to dryland farming. "I (explained) the type of crop-ping systems and dryland farming we use ... how to conserve water and make do with the rainfall we have," Norwood said. The price of the natural gas that powers irrigation pumps is rising, rompting some farmers to change to dryland systems, he said.

Norwood works with studies that use of limited water, so far-back to complete dryland farming. The experiment station in Garden City was started as a dryland station in 1907 and later began experimenting with several irriga-tion methods that Vary depending on the amount of water available, Norwood said.

The researchers also toured the farm of Ted Wiebe, 25 miles northwest of Garden City. Wiebe grows continuous sorghum, using a limited irrigation system, along with dryland wheat and sorghum.

Earlier, the researchers toured farmland in Texas and Oklahoma. The group will complete their tour of the U.S. dryland area in Denver.

Student jobs to be offered at coliseum

By The Collegian Staff

Bramlage Coliseum officials expect to create jobs for about 100 students with the opening of the coliseum in early October.

"The number of workers will depend on the size of the event," said Charles Thomas, coliseum director. "But we expect to have a pool of 75 to 100 students to work part time." "(The students) will be all the patron service staff," he said. "That includes ticket sellers, ticket takers and security guards.'

Students will also be used for stage hands, truck loaders and concessions workers.

"There are so many people battling for students' attention right now that we are going to wait for it to die down before we begin hiring," Tho-

In addition to the athletic events, students will be able to work at concerts and other activities planned in the coliseum.

George Strait will be in concert Oct. 15.

Bush, Dukakis act like 'Andy Griffith' characters

friend recently remarked to me that Republican presidential candidate George Bush reminds her of Deputy Barney Fife on "The Andy Griffith Show." Like Fife, Bush is a somewhat silly, jabbering, second-in-command who can't wait to be a big wheel. He tries to talk tough and shoot from the hip, although he usually ends up with a slug in his foot.

To continue the Andy Griffith analogy, Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis seems rather akin to Floyd, the lethargic and aloof barber caught up in his little world of scissors and hair tonic. He's a bit uncommunicative and obtuse, though he will occasionally mutter something agreeable like "Opie's such a nice boy."

Take it from someone who watched a lot of TV this summer: if you want to learn about the candidates and where they stand, don't watch the news. TV news has about as much to do with issues as mountain oysters do with seafood. If you really want to get to know George and Mike - watch Andy Griffith.

I watched the big speeches at both conventions this summer, but that was as much convention watching as I could take. Everything else was just too tragic.

Journalists dug hard for anything interesting, but were forced to ask convention delegates, possibly the most unappealing people in the free world, questions like: "Where'd ya get that crazy hat?" and "Can you show the camera what your T-shirt says?"

The one mildly interesting development at the Republican National Convention was that their platform was five or six times longer than the Democrat's platform. Most of it, however, amounted to nothing more than locker-room boasting, as the Republican's platform wasn't any better.

While the Democrats put forth a few indisputable platitudes that everyone would have to agree with, like "good jobs at good wages," the Republicans took a more piecemeal approach by offering every thing for every Both were attempts to fool all of the people all of the time, and betray the truth about both parties and their candidates. Bush will say anything to get elected, while Dukakis would rather say nothing and win. Both approaches are equally unappealing and demonstrate just how cynical the two parties have become towards the electorate.

As George Bush delivered his acceptance speech Thursday, I watched in amazement as he reeled forth enough confusing argumentation and factual misrepresentation to fill a National Enquirer. Given enough rope, this man could easily hang hirself.

For example, he blasted Dukakis as an advocate of an all-powerful federal government that would tell state and local governments what is right. Governor Dukakis, that is. Does Bush think any governor would preCommentary fer a philosophy that goes against the grain of his life's work with state and local government?

Five minutes later, Bush promised to push for capital punishment, school prayer and a ban on abortion if elected. It sounds to me like a big federal government coming in and telling state governments what is right on issues traditionally left to the authority of the states and the courts

ush attacked the Massachusetts governor's weekend furlough program for imprisoned firstdegree murderers, apparently not realizing that 42 other states have the same program. The Massachusetts program was started by a Republican governor, and another Republican — by the name of Ronald Reagan — had a similar program as governor of California. too blurred with attempts to accommodate

And there Bush goes again, knocking state governments and, supposedly, thinking the federal government should make the calls.

Bush also feigned great anguish over the fact that Dukakis vetoed a bill which would have required recitation of the "Pledge of Allegiance" in classrooms. Dukakis made the decision in accord with a state Supreme Court ruling (with three Republicans in the 5-2 majority) as well as an earlier U.S. Supreme Court decision that declared any such law unconstitutional. So what's the big deal?

Does Bush mean to say Dukakis should have defied the supreme law of the same land that we are supposed to have pledged allegiance to? Or does he mean to say that Dukakis doesn't believe in "liberty and justice for all." Certainly not. That would be an inexcusable insult.

But he would obviously like to create that impression with the sort of wink-wink, nudge-nudge innuendo that can only further his standing as a wimp. Or as Barney Fife.

But Bush's main problem isn't that he is a wimp. It's that he is, according to one Washington insider, "Groveling George." Bush is so busy accommodating the rightwingers and Fallwell fascists with talk of Dukakis the criminal-coddling commie, that his real beliefs have become hard to discern.

His campaign rhetoric lacks the clarity to be what Bush calls his "vision thing," as it is every faction of his party. A willingness to yield to interest groups is needed for success in politics, but too much of this quality in a president is unacceptable.

"Floyd" Dukakis is stubborn and detached enough not to succumb to any pressure from various factions of his party. He has selected a number of issues that everyone can agree with, put his campaign on auto-pilot and headed off for a land of good will and rosy scenarios.

To hear him talk about good jobs, good wages, clean environment and a strong defense is to get the impression that he thinks there must be someone out there opposed to these ideas. He seems unwilling to get more specific, mostly out of the attitude that nobody needs to know. Unfortunately, this creates the wrongful impression that he has some sort of secret "ultra-liberal" agenda.

hough the real politics of both candidates rest in the middle, the extreme differences in their personalities often contort the presidential race into a clash of gross and comic characters, not unlike a TV sitcom.

One way to remedy this would be to hold a campaign that focused on the real issues, even though it would be boring when compared with stories of dangerous liberals and feel-good sentiment. Or, we could just forget about the issues and watch "The Andy Griffith Show." The choice is ours to make.

Christ's image unhurt by 'Temptation' film

A fair man. Probably, no one would argue with the claim that Jesus Christ was a fair man. He probably wouldn't judge people or situations without getting to know the people or what was involved in the circumstances.

He would demand the chance to judge things for himself, and he would not trust the opinion of others.

And moviegoers should have the right to do the same with Jesus' life.

"The Last Temptation of Christ" is under heavy ridicule from conservative Christian leaders who say that it re-interprets the Bible.

What an absurd statement.

Each person who reads the Bible interprets it in their own way and may re-interpret it each time they read it.

If, indeed, Jesus was the greatest man to walk the earth, one film will not ruin his reputation.

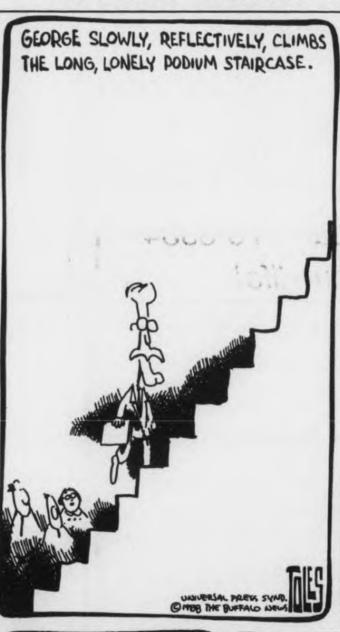

And who is to say that the film is negative, anyway?

The scene that seems to cause the most objection is one in which Jesus, while being crucified, hallucinates having sex with Mary Magdalene. Director Martin Scorsese said that the scene is being misinterpreted by critics and, when taken in context, shows a man who resists his last temptation, which is to become fully human and live a normal life with a wife and children.

Yes, he resists the temptation.

What is so bad about showing Jesus as someone who humans can relate to? Wasn't that the theme of his life and the purpose of his being? His having the same temptations as other humans, and his resisting these temptations, makes him more noble and more respectable than if he simply used divine power to resist temptation.

Choice of fund aids cancer center

By Janet Swanson News Editor

An "indelible link" between Cincinnati and Manhattan grew stronger this month when the Don Marrs Cancer Fund was selected to become part of a statewide fundraising program.

The fund, named after Don Marrs, a U.S. Postmaster, was selected by the Greater Kansas City Federal Executive Board of the Combined Federal Campaign Fund for their 1988 campaign.

Marrs, a native of Cincinnati, died July 16, 1987, after a sevenyear battle with cancer. In 1981 Marrs walked from Carlyle, Ill., to the San Francisco Bay in a 2,200-mile trek lasting 97 days.

Established at the Center for Basic Cancer Research in 1981, the Don Marrs Cancer Fund provides money for grants which are given to undergraduate students interested in conducting cancer research.

All of the money raised through the campaign will be given to the Center, which is located on the K-State campus, for additional undergraduate research grants, said Terry

"None of the faculty, staff or overhead are paid from money donated to the fund. It all goes to scholarships. If that's not unique, then it's rare," he said.

The Center works in conjunction with the Division of Biology and other K-State departments on research projects.

"We're interested in attracting bright young people to cancer research," he said. "Students need to get beside instructors and work with them to find out everything there is to know about their field."

Every year, he said, there are more applicants than grants available. In order to receive a grant, students must find a faculty sponsor willing to subcontract part of their ongoing research to the student.

"It's not a long or difficult application, but we want the students to get used to competing for funds. It's very competitive," Johnson said. About 30 faculty members volunteer each year to sponsor a student, he said.

"More often then not, faculty members will tell students that even if they don't get the grant, they can still work together," Johnson said. "The student could then get class credit for his work."

"The important thing is that the contact between a faculty member and student has been made."

Last year, sixteen $500 grants were awarded. Two of those grants were sponsored by the Don Marrs We feel very close to the Marrs family," Johnson said. "We knew we would have to be very committed to the fund and its cause, but we didn't realize how involved our hearts would also become."

Marrs' walk, which became known as his "Marathon of Hope," was inspired by Terry Fox, a 22-year-old Canadian who attempted a similar feat in Canada. Fox died before he was able to complete his trip.

When Marrs, who was in the hospital at the time of Fox's death, learned about the attempt, he was touched in a special way, he said.

"I know that my life was touched in a special way," he wrote in "A Story to Tell, a Song to Sing." "Terry and I became friends that day. I did feel Terry gave his life for me and for every other person with

It was during Marrs' crosscountry walk that he met Dave McBride, who was at that time the postmaster at Ottawa, Kan.

Johnson said McBride was the main reason for the fund's selection by the executive board.

"He was really the moving force behind all of this," Johnson said.

Dance auditions slated

By Collegian Staff

It's time to dance.

Auditions for the K-State Dance Company will be at 4 and 7 p.m. on Aug. 29 in Ahearn Field House 304. These are general auditions, and are open to all students, said Luke Kahlich, assistant professor of dance and leisure studies.

"There is no preparation needed for the auditions, and non-dance majors may audition in both sessions," he said. "Auditioning in both sessions makes it easier for us to choose our dancers because we see them perform twice."

He said 15 spots are open, and dancers who make the team are eligible to audition for the traveling K-State Repertory Company.

Laura Donnlley, a graduate of the dance program, will work on the Repertory Sept. 3 to Sept. 8, Kahlich said.

Donnlley founded the Clive Thompson Dance Company of New York and is now the choreographer for the New York Greek Drama

The first performance by the dance team will be Sept. 25.

Mets, Yankees subway Series chances lessen

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK - If these are the dog days of August, then the New York Yankees and New York Mets, who once hoped to meet in a subway World Series, have been bitten to the

The Mets, still leading the National League East, carried a four-game losing streak with them into Los Angeles Monday night.

They were batting .159 over that stretch and had managed exactly one hit in 31 at-bats with runners in scoring position, losing Sunday when Mookie Wilson grounded into a double play with the bases loaded and one out for the final outs of a 1-0 loss in San Diego.

The drought followed a 13-6 victory in the first game of the road trip at San Francisco, a win in which New York scored nine runs in the first inning. Since then, they have scored just three runs in 37 innings.

"I've seen more enthusiasm from teams that are already out of it," said Manager Davey Johnson, whose team still holds a 31/2 -game lead in the National League East. "I want my guys to stop worrying so much."

The Mets, at least, are in first place. The same can not be said for their neighbors from the Bronx, who drifted six games behind Detroit in the American League East after dropping three out of four games over the weekend against the lastplace Seattle Mariners.

After Sunday's 4-2 loss, the Yankees' 15th in the last 23 games, first baseman Don Mattingly, who "guaranteed" a pennant before the season, exploded in a clubhouse tirade.

"You get no respect around here," said the usually placid Mattingly, frequently the subject of owner George Steinbrenner's goading. "You get money and that's it. They think money is respect. Money is not

"I think there are a lot of unhappy players. Call us babies. Call us anything you want. When you're a man, if you don't give me respect, I have no respect for you. I don't want to work for you.

"It's hard to come to the ballpark when you're not having any fun. This is the first season I've had to fight myself to play the game every day. There is no excitement at all, and we're in the middle of a pennant race." Steinbrenner responded with a statement issued Monday through Yankees' public relations director

"The Boss," Steinbrenner said, referring to himself in the third person, "is really confused. "I'm not making errors in the field, I'm not leaving men stranded in scoring position time and again. I'm not carrying a 5.30 ERA since the All-Star game. I was 2,000 miles away when we lost three out of four games to the Seattle Mariners, of all people."

Of Mattingly, Steinbrenner said: "He's a young man who is upset and frustrated because he 'guaranteed a pennant' for the Yankees last winter, the team is playing very poorly and he himself is having a disappointing year by his own admission."

Mattingly wouldn't back off. "I meant what I said," he said. "I don't regret it one bit. I don't know why I did it yesterday. It just came out, but it's been in my heart a long

Meanwhile, on the other side of town, Johnson is worried about the attitude of drudgery in his clubhouse.

Johnson held a 15-minute meeting before Sunday's game, urging his team to "have fun, enjoy yourself a little more. Remember, we're in first

That, however, is less their own doing than the shortcomings of their pursuers. After closing to within 31/4 games of first place, third place Montreal has lost eight straight. With the Mets 4-6 over the last 10 games, second place Pittsburgh has managed to pick up just one game in the standings and is 31/2 back.

The Mets opened the season at 30-11. Since then, they have been a .500 team at 41-41. That, though, is a pennant pace compared to the way the Yankees have been going. After reaching May 31 at 33-16, the team has drifted along at 33-39. The Yanks are 26-27 since Piniella replaced Billy Martin as manager June 23.

Strangely, Mattingly's outburst, in the midst of his own 4-for-23 slump, came at a time when Steinbrenner has not been particularly critical of the team. The owner's last outburst came at the All-Star Game but he quickly patched things up and, except for abruptly changing pitching coaches, he has left the team alone lately.

Despite their summer struggle, the Yankees crept to within 21/2 games of first place in the middle of last week. But with AL West leader Oakland arriving in town Monday night, a 4-6 stretch had dropped the Yankees closer to fourth place than they

Junior Maurice Henry practices his defensive skills Monday afternoon after switching this season from tailback to outside linebacker. Coach

Stan Parrish asked Henry, who carried the ball 46 times last season, to make the switch to bolster the Wildcats' defense.

Former tailback enjoys linebacker duties

By Chris Wilhelm Sports Writer

Someone once left Maurice Henry with an interesting thought when it comes to football: Offense sells tickets. Defense wins games.

With that thought in mind, Henry said he has enjoyed the switch from tailback to outside linebacker to help the Wildcats, who open the season Sept. 3 against the Tulsa Golden Hurricane.

What started out as a joke became reality when Henry was asked to make the switch.

"Right after Christmas we started workouts and (the coaches) said something about it," Henry said. "At the time it was pretty much of a joking matter. I said I can go over there on defense and make a couple tackles. I was tired of getting all these dogged touchdowns scored on us.

"When spring came, coach (Stan) Parrish and I had a talk and he said they wanted to try me on defense. I said that's fine. They liked what they saw during spring drills and here I am (on defense).

Some of Henry's offensive back coaches had a harder time dealing with the change than Henry did, though he had less than impressive statistics in 1987.

In nine games last season, Henry carried the ball 46 times for 166 yards and caught three passes for 26 yards. While these aren't earthshattering statistics, they are respectable when realizing Henry was used in a complementary role behind tailback Tony Jordan and fullback Rick Lewis, K-State's two leading rushers.

"The switch from offense to defense was really no big deal to me," Henry said. "The plan (the coaches) had at first was to just try me on defense and still keep me on

When coach Parrish decided to make the switch, some of my position coaches were reluctant to lose me from the offense but they told me He's one of our best athletes and that they held a coaches' meeting and that the defensive coaches wanted as a defensive player.' me so they voted to move me to defense."

The switch shouldn't be a difficult one for the 6-foot-0, 220-pound junior as he played both ways at Salina Central High School.

"I played middle linebacker in high school and I had pretty much fun back there. I'm really excited about playing defense in the Big Eight against some really outstanding offensive teams," Henry said.

"Coach Parrish decided he wanted his best players on defense. I don't mind what I play. I'll be happy as long as I can help this team win," he added.

Parrish said one of the reasons for the switch was the number of talented tailbacks on the Wildcat squad.

"We have a lot of really good, young tailbacks," Parrish said. 'Maurice is a real force on our team.

we're hoping he will benefit us more

While Henry looks forward to a season of tackling instead of being on the receiving end of a hit, he is somewhat apprehensive about the remaining talibacks' size. When I look over on the offense and see the tailbacks, they all look kind of small to me," Henry said. "But I guess it's really not their size. ... What really matters is how well they get the job done on the field." One difference that doesn't bother Henry is the possibility of less recognition. Personal gain is the least of his

"When you play offense and you have a good game, everybody knows that you were the 'All-Star' or the MVP but that's not what's really important," Henry said.

"It doesn't bother me that I won't be in a position anymore where I could get a lot more attention as long as we win. That's what's important."

Harvey Greene. Cyclones' coach lacks patience

By The Associated Press

AMES, Iowa — Iowa State's Jim Walden has a running back with star quality, two terrific receivers and, from all appearances, some momentum.

But one thing he does lack is patience ... patience with anybody who judges everybody in the Big Eight against those perennial titans named Nebraska and Oklahoma.

"I couldn't care less about those two schools," the Cyclones' secondyear head coach told Big Eight Skywriters Monday. "As far as building this program to the level I want it, I am not going to let my people or anyone else force me into anything by saying, 'When do you think you'll be able to get your program as good as Oklahoma or Nebraska."

Two reasons Walden is so sensitive could be the 42-3 and 56-3 lickings the Big Reds handed his Cyclones a year ago. But Walden also recalls coaching Washington State from 1978-86 when UCLA and USC dominated the West Coast the way Oklahoma and Nebraska stampede through the Big Eight year after

But Walden's first Iowa State team went 3-8, better than many expected. And this year he's back with some badly needed experience and a promising freshmen class.

"The difference between USC and UCLA and Washington State in 1978 was one whole heck of a lot greater than the distance between Oklahoma and Nebraska and Iowa State is now," Walden said. "They may beat me more. But that is not a criteria as Big 8 Skywriters Tour Iowa State Cyclones

Stengths: Running back, receiver, a seasoned offensive line;

Weaknesses: Defense, particularly the interior. Quarterback could be a minus if neither DeGennafo nor Oberg comes through. Next stop: Nebraska, far as I'm concerned."

Everybody, Walden has decided, "seems to lock into" the Oklahoma-Nebraska comparisons.

"That's why there's been so many damn coaching changes in the Big Eight Conference, because too many people keep asking that of coaches who are not even able to match them in numbers."

Fully expecting another shellacking at the hands of the big boys, Walden nevertheless feels he's made progress. The mountain is still there to be scaled. But at least the Cyclones have reached base camp.

"I think this will be a better football team when all the parts come together than we had a year ago," Walden said. "The only word for us to use is improved."

In Joe Henderson, the Cyclones possess a running back who might be gaining national fame if he were playing for a national contender. Last year the senior emerged from obscurity to rush for 1,232 yards and earn first-team all-conference honors. "If he does what he did last year, he probably should win the Heisman Trophy," Walden said. "He will have rushed 2,500 yards on a team that only had 50 guys last year and sometimes only had 26 offensive guys on scholarship, and against the competition we play against. I promise you, someone like Lorenzo White or whoever wins it couldn't put up those kind of numbers."

But even if Henderson surpasses his 1987 harvest, Walden knows he will remain largely unnoticed.

Henderson's Heisman chances? "None," Walden said. "He doesn't play at Notre Dame, and he doesn't play for a team that's going to win 10 or 11 games."

But the Cyclones may win a few. In addition to Henderson, Iowa State has two stylish receivers in wide receiver Dennis Ross and tight end Mike Busch. In addition, the offensive line, a raw and untested area a year ago, will return every starter. In addition, place kicker Joe Shudak returns after winning all-Big Eight honors by hitting 20 of 25 field goal attempts, including two gamewinners.

Shudak, only a sophomore, ranked third in the nation last year.

The defense may be trying to protect a lead if Henderson has another big year. The 6-0, 200-pound Chicago native agrees that his chances of national recognition are slim in

"I guess the Heisman Trophy is every running back's dream," he said. "But I think I'm realistic enough to know there's no way. Maybe if I was at Notre Dame or Oklahoma or a place like that."

Just who will be handing off to Henderson is another major question. Before a foot injury hobbled him, the job seemed to belong to senior Derek DeGennaro. But DeGennaro could be challenged by junior college transfer Bret Oberg.

His non-conference schedule includes Tulane, Baylor, Iowa and Division I-AA power Northern Iowa. There may not be a victory over Nebraska or Oklahoma in the near future. But as for the distant future ...

"Our objective is simple - to improve, to get 500 yards more in total offense and have some individuals accomplish more than they did. If we can do that, we still might be hardpressed to win more than three games."

Thanks to some late-afternoon cloud cover, and a heavy rain which cut short Monday's practice session by 10 minutes, K-State's football team received a break from the searing heat that has accompanied fall practices since they opened Aug. 15. Beginning Friday, the public sale of meat products in Weber Hall will resume.

The meat lab and sales counter closed more than two years ago when Weber Hall was shut down for renovation and expansion. The Department of Animal Sciences and Industry is in Weber Hall.

Students who study slaughtering, meat cutting and meat producing processes use the lab and sales counter to see the meat industry and its commercial operations firsthand, said Bob Danler, manager of the meat lab.

The lab offers 15 different processed meats, including beef, pork and lamb. The meats are wrapped in white butcher paper and sold in fresh frozen form, Danler said.

For a limited time, the lab will offer veal because some lifestock that was used for a research project on muscle growth in animals was available, he said.

The meats will be on sale every Friday from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. in Weber 103.

The counter is only open on Fridays because the meats are sold in the same room as they are processed and packaged, Danler said.

"During the week we have to get our work done (there)," he said. Students in the lab work to keep the products stocked and ready to sell. "Plus, (being open on Fridays) is tradition. It has always been that way. Weekends are the time people have more time to fix a nice meal ... it facilitates the customers," Danler

Weber is completed around the end of September.

Ground beef, beef patties and pork sausage will be on sale at the Dairy Bar in Call Hall during their regular business hours. After the smokehouse is finished, a few processed meats like summer sausage also will be sold there.

The Department of Animal Sciences and Industry started working with the people at Call Hall because "ground beef and those types of items are things that people need day to day, so we're making those available more often," Danler said.

Danler hires 10 to 15 students as part-time help to assist in the meat production process.

"It (working at the counter) gives the students interaction with the customers which is really a valuable education," he said.

Dealing with customers helps the students learn how each cut of meat is best utilized by the customer. For example, if a customer would want meat to use on shish kebobs, the student would learn which type of cut to suggest, Danler said.

Students also learn how to deal with customer complaints. "Interaction with people is education and experience everyone needs," he

The livestock used for the lab are raised at the University and given to the department of animal sciences for use in their classes and laboratories, Danler said.

"We basically slaughter 100 cows, 100 lambs and 250 hogs in a year's time - with the old facilities," he said.

That number could increase with the new facilities, but only slightly,

Danler said. The profits from the meat sales are used to cover the cost of the

Eastern countries open Nazi war files

By The Associated Press

TORONTO - Romania and the Soviet Union opened their files to the Simon Wiesenthal Center to help track down pro-Nazi war criminals now living in Canada and America, the center's Canadian representative said Monday.

Sol Littman, who spent several weeks this summer in Bucharest, Romania, and Vilnius, Lithuania, said he has forwarded 44 names to the Canadian Justice Department's war crimes unit and the Office of Special Investigations in Washington.

He said the names would not be released publicly until U.S. and Canadian authorities had time to investigate the allegations.

Littman said the lists include 16 suspected members of the Romanian Iron Guard who are thought to be living in Michigan and elsewhere in the United States and seven believed to be in Canada. Another 21 people are suspected of being Lithuanian police militiamen living in Canada, according to Littman.

He said all the suspects are wanted in Romania and the Soviet Union for war crimes, including the murders of Jews and other civilians. Lithuania, a Baltic republic, was taken over by the

tracking down Nazi war criminals who have evaded arrest and help bringing them to trial.

Littman, Canada's leading Nazi hunter, said the files showed many Iron Guard members were imprisoned after participating in revolts in 1939 and 1941 in unsuccessful efforts to overthrow Romania's conservative government headed by Ion Antonescu.

He said Nazis stationed in Romania during World War II helped them escape and many entered camps for displaced persons before making their way to Canada, the United States and Argentina.

Romania became a partner of Nazi Germany during World War II and the Wiesenthal report said, "Frustrated by the (Romanian) army, which remained loyal to Antonescu, the Iron Guard turned on Romania's Jewish minority.

"In one of the cruelest pogroms in history, hundreds of Jews in Bucharest and Jassy were beaten to death on the streets, women and children mutilated, and the bodies of victims hung in abattoirs on meat hooks."

Rabbi Marvin Hier of the Wiesenthal Center said the former leader of the Iron Guard, whom he identified as Horia Sima, is now living in Spain.

These groups are still prevailing in the West, continuing to preach the same fascist ideology and raising a second and third generation," Littman said.

BANGKOK, Thailand - People filled the streets of Burmese cities Monday demanding an end to 26 years of military rule, and soldiers peacefully stopped protest marches in Rangoon, the capital, diplomats and news reports said.

The Japanese news agency Kyodo said hundreds of thousands of people, including children, demonstrated in the northern city of Mandalay in response to student calls for nationwide protest and a general strike. Some waved the peacock flag used in the struggle that led to independence from Britain in 1948.

Many train and bus operators joined the strike, halting public transport in Burma's second-largest city 350 miles north of the capital, Kyodo said. There were sketchy reports of demonstrations in other parts of the Southeast Asian country.

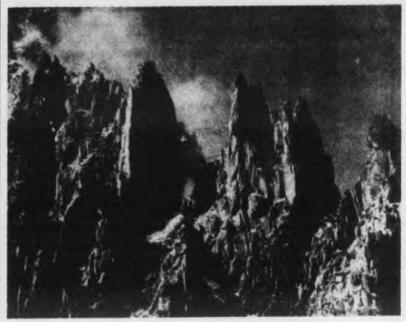

Diplomats in Rangoon said about 20,000 people gathered outside the Rangoon General Hospital, a center of protest, for the largest demonstration in the capital since the street protests of Aug. 8-12 that forced the resignation of President Sein Lwin, a former general. Security forces killed more than 100 people that shots could not be confirmed.

No violence was reported Monday. Witnesses said large numbers of soldiers, the most seen in recent days, manned barricades and armored cars patrolled the capital. Reports of gun-

A Western diplomat said 3,000-4,000 people shouted anti-government slogans outside the U.S. Embassy, but soldiers and barricades stopped them from marching down the street.

Rosanne Proite, assistant director of housing, said the housing department would probably let the students staying in temporary rooms break their housing contracts and move out of the halls also.

Before, residents could cancel their contracts only when they left school or under extreme circumstances. When students broke them without the approval of the department, they were obligated to pay rent and board for the rest of the year.

"What gets me is that I have to pay full rent," Lance said. "It's kind of a Catch-22. You have to sign a contract to move in, and after you sign, you have to pay full rent."

Residents in temporary rooms will receive a small reduction in room and board if they stay there more than a week, Frith said.

"Right now they are only paying $9 a day for room and board. You can't lower it much more than that,"

Paying full rent is not the only problem with living in a music room with six other people. The nearest bathroom is on another wing, room is not available for personal belongings and sleeping can be impossible.

"These two guys have snoring contests at night," Lance said pointing to two beds in the music room.

Commander certain shuttle safe

By The Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston -The commander of the next space shuttle mission said Monday the nation's manned space program could not survive another tragedy like Challenger and predicted it would not happen on his flight.

"I have great confidence in the machine; we feel it is a much safer machine," Navy Capt. Rick Hauck told the final news conference he and his crew will hold before their launching, scheduled for late September or early October.

"We clearly could not afford to lose another vehicle, much less another crew," Hauck said. "I don't think the manned spaceflight program could withstand another Challenger on STS-26 (Hauck's flight).

"That's high stakes, but I'm not concerned that that's going to happen. In the last year and a half, I've seen how we've modified the machine and how we've done business. So I feel very comfortable with the flight."

Hauck will command Discovery on the first shuttle mission since Challenger exploded 73 seconds after launch on Jan. 28, 1986, killing the crew of seven.

His crewmates will be Air Force Col. Richard Covey, the pilot, and mission specialists George Nelson, Mike Lounge and Dave Hilmers, a Marine lieutenant colonel.

Hauck said NASA has been hesitant to set a new date for the often-postponed launch because engineers are still troubleshooting two problems that developed during a test firing of Discovery's engines on the launch pad at Cape Canaveral on Aug. 10.

One is a small leak of hydrogen gas detected in an area where the orbiter is joined to the external fuel

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia The weekend protest against the 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia was hailed by activists Monday as "an important political moment" to a nation dulled for two decades by the bitter end of reform.

Sunday night's march through this capital city was the biggest protest against the Soviet-led invasion since 1969.

Racism, curricula debated

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

The relevance of core curricula to minorities in higher education was debated at the pre-convocation forum "The Land Grant Tradition and Educational Opportunity."

The forum, providing background to the convocation lecture of Occidental University President John Slaughter, also presented the issues on the debate over core curricula and racism and how they relate to a land grant university such as K-State.

The history of the conflicts of ideals that have surrounded land grant institutions was described by Sue Zschoche, assistant professor of history.

According to Zschoche, prior to the Civil War, there had been no debate over a college's curriculum because there had been basically only one. That curriculum is similar to what is known today as a Western liberal arts education. Such curricula were usually considered "impractical" and afforded predominantly only by white, upper-class men.

Zschoche said land grant institutions offered a more democratic and "practical" education that transferred the latest in knowledge and technology to the "common tolk. The dilemma for land grant institutions, Zschoche said, was whether they should become only vocational schools or offer something akin to the traditional liberal arts education as well. The result has been a compromise, she said.

"One was the notion of practicality (of a core curriculum) has always been an essential feature of the debate. ... However, the classical curriculum ... was widely perceived, particularly by Midwesterners, to be elitist. The elitism is what plagues these type of debates 120 years later," she said.

Zschoche said the debate today is over a different type of elitism — the question of whether there is more than one higher culture, and, if so, if there is more than one core curriculum.

John Steffen, associate professor of administration and foundations of education, raised the question of what a core curriculum is and of what concepts it might be based on.

He gave Stanford University, whose core curriculum is based on a certain set of books to be studied, and Harvard University, whose core curriculum is based on a "set of desired outcomes for which courses must be developed," as examples.

"Are the offerings in the liberal studies attractive to minorities? ...," he asked. "And why should they be attractive to them?" Steffen said that by the year 2000, a third of

In an effort to increase minority recruitment visibility, University officials invited area media representatives Tuesday to the Union for an overview and discussion of increasing minority student and faculty populations at K-State.

'We were engaged in a number of different initiatives, but until we put the whole (project) together we didn't realize the number of important developments taking place in the last year," he said.

Wefald emphasized improving the social climate for minorities in the K-State community. This can be accomplished, he said,

Polish laborers barricade shaft

By The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland - Some workers ended their strikes Tuesday, but 125 miners barricaded themselves in an underground shaft and vowed to stay until they won higher pay and recognition of the banned Solidarity trade union.

The government said it wouldn't negotiate "under the 'pistol' of a strike," and took measures to end Poland's worst wave of labor unrest since the 1981 imposition of martial law.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said at least 49 people have been detained by police nationwide in connection with the strikes, which began Aug. 16 and at their height affected about 100,000 workers at 20 sites.

On Monday night, Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak said troops would be sent to secure major industrial plants to prevent anarchy, although none were seen at the plants Tuesday. An 11 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew was imposed in Jastrzebie in Katowice Province, the site of many of the mine strikes.

Four columns of army and police vehicles left Krakow for Katowice, witnesses said. Two of the convoys consisted of more than 70 vehicles, including four trucks with water cannons and 10 truckloads of armed soldiers, the witnesses said.

On the road in Oswiecim, near the entrance to the coal-rich Silesia region, army roadblocks stopped cars and searched them.

Miners from the 30 Years of People's Poland Mine near Jastrzebie pledged they "will stay there until the end of their lives, until all the demands are met," said Wojciech Maziarski, a Solidarity spokesman in Warsaw. Striking dockworkers in Szczecin said they feared police were getting ready to move in on them Tuesday night. Police broke up strikes at two Szczecin streetcar depots and one bus depot on Monday night.

"The situation here is very assault at any moment, because movements of police vehicles have been spotted outside our perimeter," said Edward Rodziewicz, chairman of the Interfactory Strike Committee at the Baltic port.

At the 30 Years of People's Poland Mine, workers went down into the shaft, 580 yards underground, about noon Tuesday, according to the Inter-Mine Strike Committee in Jastrzebie.

They have decided to stay underground until the start of negotiations," said a communique issued by the committee. "Their health is in danger."

Mine strike leaders said they were not discouraged by the government actions and would continue their strike.

We have to continue to fight the Red bourgeoisie in the party," said Romuald Bozko, a worker at the Moszczenice mine who was interviewed at a church in Jastrzebie. Solidarity leader Lech Walesa simple now: we are expecting an appealed again for dialogue with authorities to end the strikes, but Urban dismissed the possibility of negotiations while strikes continued.

> There will be no political talks under the 'pistol' of a strike," Urban told a Warsaw news conference. The strikers have been demanding increased wages and recognition of Solidarity, which was outlawed in 1981.

Urban announced that a special parliament commission will meet Aug. 31 to review the government's economic policies and that it might make adjustments in its economic program after consultation with official trade unions.

He declined to explain what steps the security forces mentioned by Kiszczak would take at the strikebound plants. Kiszczak also said curfews were authorized in the provinces of Szczecin, Katowice and Gdansk, although the only place where one was imposed was in the Katowice town of Jastrzebie.

Discharged soldiers may pay state fees

By The Collegian Staff

A law that went into effect July 1 allows soldiers stationed at military bases in Kansas to pay in-state tuition at regents universities after their

The new legislation benefited between 40 to 50 K-State students who enrolled this semester but were stationed in Ft. Riley last year, said Donald Foster, K-State registrar. He will not know the exact count until the end of September when enrollment is complete.

Kansas, like most states, had allowed soldiers stationed in the state to pay in-state tuition while on active duty. But the problem started when their duty was over, and they had to pay out-of-state tuition to finish their education, said William Canelos, Ft.

Riley education services officer. The new law, which was passed by the Legislature during the last session, allows soldiers to waive the one-year waiting period required to become a Kansas resident so they can continue paying in-state tuition. Canelos said discharged soldiers can be eligible for in-state tuition if they establish their intent to become Kansas residents.

Richard Elkins, K-State director of admissions, said in order to waive the waiting period and immediately become a Kansas resident, soldiers must perform all the "normal responsibilities of citizenship" before their discharge. They must register their automobiles and receive Kansas drivers' licenses, pay taxes and register to vote here.

They must comply with the rules before their release from the Army, he said, or wait one year before becoming eligible for in-state tuition.

Canelos said the law was established to be fair to soldiers who started their education in Kansas and want to finish it here. But he also sees an economic benefit for Kansas.

"Some soldiers, when faced with (out-of-state tuition), didn't stay," he

LSD distributed at post office

WICHITA - A postal worker was indicted Tuesday on charges of possession and distribution of LSD at the main Wichita post office.

The federal grand jury indictment charged Samuel L. Jones, 26, of Wichita, with committing the offense on Dec. 11 at the U.S. Postal Service general mail facility.

Jones faces a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a $1 million fine.

Gov. Cuomo opposed to film

ALBANY, N.Y. - Gov. Mario Cuomo said Tuesday that the film "The Last Temptation of Christ" is offensive and he wouldn't see it.

But Cuomo, a Roman Catholic, said producers had a right to make the film.

"I don't see the point of my seeing it," Cuomo said in an interview with Albany public radio station WAMC. "The idea of profaning the Christ figure by showing him to be as human as the rest of us and leering at a woman and desiring her sexually is something that I find offensive to good taste.'

The film, which opened in theaters earlier this month, includes a scene in which a crucified Jesus Christ hallucinates that he has married Mary Magdalene.

Roman Catholic bishops have urged the country's 53 million Catholics to boycott the film. Other religious groups have demonstrated against it.

Tears not an act, Gretzky says

BURBANK, Calif. - Hockey great Wayne Gretzky says his tears were real.

A day after Gretzky was traded by the Edmonton Oilers to the Los Angeles Kings, the Edmonton Journal on Aug. 10 quoted the Canadian team's owner, Peter Pocklington, as saying: "He's a great actor. I thought he pulled it off beautifully when he showed how upset he was."

The remark "bothered me. I did a lot for him and the team," Gretzky said.

"I was a guest on a soap opera ("The Young and the Restless") in 1981, and obviously he never saw a tape of that," Gretzky said joking about his acting abilities Monday on NBC-TV's "The Tonight Show With Johnny Carson."

Since Gretzky's arrival in the entertainment capital, it has been speculated he might try an acting career.

"I'm sticking to hockey," said the eight-time National Hockey League Most Valuable Player.

Campaign ridicule continues

Democrat Michael Dukakis ridiculed Republican George Bush's call for a flexible budget freeze on Tuesday, likening the proposal to "a melting ice cube." Embattled GOP vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle labeled reports about him "just one bum rap after another."

Campaigning in Sacramento, Calif., Bush said he would stand behind his running mate. "I'm not going to let some insidious rumor-mongers drive me to change my mind," he said. "I'm standing behind Dan Quayle."

Earlier in Seattle, Bush began sounding impatient with continued questioning about Quayle. "I'm appalled you could ask that," the vice president snapped when asked about a report that Quayle had once propositioned lobbyist Paula Parkinson.

Goats fired for leaving jobsite

CHERRYVALE, Kan. - The city's goats were doing their job all right, but just couldn't seem to stay on the jobsite. City commissioners voted Monday to sell the three goats, who have acted as living lawnmowers for grass near the city's sewage treatment plant since July.

Mayor John Littell said the goats were not being fired because they did a bad job.

"They were eating the grass," he said.

The fence surrounding the area was not in good enough condition to contain the animals. When the fence is repaired next summer, the city may purchase new goats, Littell said.

For now, the goats probably will find a home with Archie Canon, the city dog catcher. Littell said Canon has made pets out of the animals, and gets a gallon of milk a day.

Shark bites diver in restuarant

METAIRIE, La. - A 6-foot tiger shark in a restaurant fish tank attacked a diver who had climbed in to feed other fish.

Wiley Beevers needed 75 stitches to close the bite on his arm, said Jack Dunn, one of the owners of Sharky's Reef Restaurant in suburban New Orleans.

The attack happened Friday as about 50 people were dining. Dunn said Monday.

"They got to see something a lot of people hope they'll never get to see," said Dunn said. "They were concerned for the diver, and were relieved to see he was OK."

Beevers left the aquarium on his own and was taken to East Jefferson Hospital, Dunn said. He was released a few hours

Dunn said divers routinely go into the 135,000-gallon aquarium to feed fish. The shark had never before bothered a diver, he said.

Officials: Killings unnecessary

GENEVA - Troops in Burma killed up to 3,000 demonstrators during a wave of protests two weeks ago, and authorities have failed to take measures to prevent "further unlawful killings," Amnesty International said Tuesday.

Citing reliable reports, the human rights organizaton said Burmese soldiers acting under a state of emergency killed 1,000 to 3,000 demonstrators, mostly unarmed and peaceful, in violence

Amnesty representative Ingrid Kircher told a U.N. human rights panel that the soldiers appeared to use "unreasonable and unnecessary" force against protesters and violated U.N. guidelines for the conduct of law enforcement personnel.

"The emergency remains in effect, and there are no clear indications of government action to prevent further unlawful killings should demonstrations resume," she said in a statement to the U.N. Sub-Commission on Prevention of Discrimination and Protection of Minorities.

Soldiers repeatedly fired into unarmed peaceful crowds and at protesters who turned violent when the student-led unrest peaked in the second week of August, Amnesty said.

The organization said the Burmese government admits 112 demonstrators were killed but publicly denies wrongdoing by

McCain series to begin in September

By Steve Walker Staff Writer

The McCain Performance Series will present a mixture of entertainment ranging from ballet and blacklight theater to the Vienna Boys Choir and Cajun bayou music.

"This year's program features some long-time favorites as well as a whole array of (other) artists that people will enjoy," said Richard Martin, McCain Auditorium director. "It's a good program that has balance and variety, and that's important."

The season begins Sept. 22 when the musical "Sweet Charity," by Neil Simon, will be performed by a national touring company.

On Oct. 14 Mark Peskanov, a violinist who emigrated from the

The Vienna Boys Choir will perform Oct. 23. They will present sacred and secular music, folk songs, an operetta and some solos.

"Every once and a while they will throw in something like Willie Nelson's 'On the Road Again' that will shock the audience," Martin said. "But their combination of charm and artistic excellence makes each tour a resounding success."

Local school children will be invited to audition for parts in the Tulsa Ballet Theater's performance of "The Nutcracker" on Dec. 10 and 11. Thirty youngsters will join the cast as mice, angels, rabbits, soldiers and clowns.

McCain will also be featuring a variety of musical groups such as Beausoleil, a Cajun band, The Harlem Blues and Jazz Band, and the Sydney Symphony Orchestra, which will be celebrating Australia's 200th birthday.

"The pianist (for the Sydney Symphony Orchestra) Shura Cherkassky is an old romantic-style pianist," Martin said. "His style of playing is one you don't hear very often and is one you should be exposed to.

'Variety has been a strong point of the McCain Series," he said. 'We don't want to put off students who think McCain is a stuffy place. One should not have to put on a suit to come to McCain.'

Tickets are available at the McCain box office Monday through Friday, noon to 5 p.m. and on the days of a performance.

Commissioners consider Aggieville improvements

By The Collegian Staff

City commissioners on Tuesday heard discussion by representatives of Aggieville businesses and considered their funding requests regarding Aggieville improvement projects.

Aggieville, created in 1889, will be celebrating its 100th anniversary and merchants are seeking to complete the improvement projects in conjunction with the anniversary.

The proposed budget for the improvement projects is estimated at about $2.3 million, and the Aggieville merchants proposed a 1/3 -2/3 ratio for paying the cost of improvements. One-third of the cost would be assessed to the Aggieville property owners and the other fraction to the City of Manhattan.

A consensus was reached by the Richard Hayter said.

commissioners on the ratio, but concern was expressed about the cost of financing additional parking. Debate centered on the feasibility of building a vertical parking facility or expanding parking lots into potential space for retail stores. "I have no problem with the (ratio) split ... ," Commissioner Gene Klingler said, "but I want more alternatives that bring in costs."

With the planned remodeling of streetscapes, right of ways and improved parking, the merchants estimate an increase in business that would result in a $52,000 per year sales tax return to the city, a figure of which the commissioners approve.

"We're going to be a partner as soon as we can agree to some agreeable amount," Commissioner

Two students selected

By The Collegian Staff

Works by two art students will be included in a program sponsored by the Association of Community Arts Agencies of Kansas to promote art in

One of the works, a watercolor painting of a daughter riding on her father's shoulders by Tony Ridder, was chosen to be used as a postcard in the Kansas Artists' Postcard Ridder, a junior in the bachelor of fine arts program, created his work from a photograph taken at the Octoberfest in Wamego.

Unfortunately, the photo was ruined by "a clown sticking his face in the camera and a woman with a back end bigger than you or me," Ridder said.

Ridder said he uses his photography in conjunction with his painting. They kind of chase each other - like a cat chasing its tail," he said. For his postcard size watercolor painting, Ridder received a $100 prize and 250 copies of the postcard. The painting will be added to the state archives.

"Basically, what it means is the state wants some art work; and they pick the best, and give you a $100 for it," he said.

Kathy Sisson, senior in fine arts, will have a watercolor titled "Susan's Bouquet" as part of the Kansas Artists' Postcard Touring Exhibit.

Sisson said the painting is based on a vase of flowers she had in her house. The title uses her daughter's together, are part of the excitement of watercolor painting, Sisson said. "Sometimes the surprises are better than what was planned," she said. Sisson and Ridder both said they were encouraged to submit their works by Oscar Larmer, professor of

President's ends justify his means Former couple of months back when President Zia addressed the nation on TV, a day before the federal budget announcement, he broke into tears over the pitiful condition of the poor and lower middle classes and the religious demise in Pakistan. How much was true sentiment and how much was fake is uncertain, but his unexpected death in a plane crash Aug. 17 has certainly saddened many, if not all, at home and abroad.

I vividly remember when President Zia seized power from Prime Minister Bhutto in 1977, not because I was promoted to the next grade without final examination since schools were closed, but because there were massive protests and rioting in the country and martial law was the only viable way to stop the extensive loss of civilian life and property.

The military intervention was, for the most part, justified. The problem was posed when President Zia failed to turn over the government to democratically elected public representatives.

It will be illuminating to probe into the political structure of Pakistan to assess the figure for eight years. role of President Zia's regime.

The Constitution of Pakistan calls for parliamentary form of government constituted by two houses, the National Assembly and the Senate. The legislatures are based on the rule of majority, which is different than the plurality system in America. The party securing the majority in the National Assembly elects the Prime Minister, a key player in the government. To run the government successfully, however, requires wider cooperation on the part of the opposition and the ruling

In this country of about 50 political parties, people are overwhelmingly ignorant and easily manipulated by shrewd politicians. It is not really difficult to understand why 24 out of 41 years, Pakistan was ruled by a military suppressed the opposition, and the people lost trust in their leaders after the turmoil of 1977. Personally I believe the latter has more weight. After all, I did not witness any widespread agitation againt President Zia's regime or unbearable human rights violations.

t will be unfair to judge President Zia's rule on the basis of legitimacy alone. Even the U.S. Government, the greatest proponent of democracy and human rights, did not. President Zia gave the country what it wanted stability - at a time when it wanted it most. Whether Pakistan would have been better off if President Zia had passed the power to elected representatives in 1977 is anybody's

During his rule, the economy certainly did not stagnate. The annual economic growth rate was 7 percent. The Gross National Product of Pakistan increased 21/2 times and the annual per capita income almost doubled during his era.

He pursued a very successful foreign policy. Negotiating with Soviets to withdraw from Afghanistan is a case in point. The institution which suffered most during his rule was the political structure. It will take outstanding ingenuity on the part of Pakistani politicians to erect the structure again and avoid making the same mistakes they committed in 1977.

he only politician who can claim to have some political power after President Zia is Benazir Bhutto, the daughter of late Prime Minister Bhutto. But she has some serious handicaps.

First of all, she is bidding to rule a Muslim country where women are not considered fit for this job. Second, she is far less experienced than other prominent politicians in the country. Third, and most importantly, she lacks the temperament necessary to be a successful politician. Her statement on President Zia's death, "I do not regret his death," shows her inability to put national interest above her personal enemity with the late president. Even if Benazir works her way to the throne, it will take a miracle to keep her there.

Unless there is some historic compromise among political leaders, my prediction is sustained military rule.

The public has no better political consciousness than Americans in the late eighteenth century. Political leaders portray the same attitude that was displayed by French politicians during the French Revolution. Both factors considered, the foreign policy of Pakistan is unlikely to be changed barring some symbolic changes in economic and domestic policies.

With the death of President Zia, a remarkable and unique chapter of Pakistani history has come to a close. By the very definition of the word, President Zia was a dictator - he was not democratically elected to the office.

But was he really a dictator, or a martyr? Perhaps the people of the world, especially Pakistanis, will have to redefine the word dictator to resolve this dilemma.

Political conventions serve only the media

This summer, delegates and leaders from both parties descended upon Atlanta and New Orleans for their respective national conventions. Meanwhile, back at home, reruns of "Wheel of Fortune" and "M*A*S*H" drew two to three times as many viewers as all three networks' convention coverage combined.

And who blames the TV audience? Convention coverage has come to emphasize the images being created, rather than the ideas being raised, making conventions more akin to staged media events.

Last week, 2,300 Republican National Convention delegates sat amidst some 15,000 journalists in New Orleans. This ridiculous ratio led to a strange, but all-to-common occurrence: journalists interviewing other journalists.

Nonetheless, such moments of self-reference or "meta-media" (the media covering the media) are not mere self-indulgence. It is a realization of just how vital the media have become to the success, or failure, of a candidacy.

But are we to simply blame the press for crossing the line between observer and participant? Probably not. The seeming overbearance of the press can, for one, be attributed to the increasing importance of the primary system in selecting the nominee. A void is abhorred in the political arena, and the surplus of reporters and shortage of stories over the long campaign often causes mountains to be made of molehills, as candidates are scrutinized on every aspect of their present and past behavior.

Back when nominees were selected at brokered conventions, this type of scrutiny took place in the infamous "smoke-filled rooms."

Now that nominees are selected in open primaries, the scrutinization must also be out in the open. This is not to say that such prying is right, only that it is a caveat of the primary system.

Secondly, campaigns are no longer run by people who believe in the candidate and what he stands for. Instead, consultants, who run campaigns for a living, do the job. Consultants are hired to win. They have more contact with the press than the candidate does, and what they say to the press is what they believe will help their candidate win, not necessarily what the candidate himself believes. The end result is messages from both campaigns that play to the polls and the media, creating two candidates with few noted differences, i.e., boring candidates.

Some are now calling for self-restraint from the press. Perhaps they are right. However, the problem lies much deeper than this. There is always talk of election reform. Maybe it is time to take it seriously.

Cooperation works

The Collegian's editorial of Aug. 22, "Student fees set by correct group," emphasized something of which K-State can be proud: the primary role that students play in setting special fees. In principle, the University president could disregard the students and the Student Senate by implementing a fee against our wishes; in practice, that has not been

The monarchs of Great Britian reign, but they do not rule. Similarly, University presidents in the past have chosen not to rule by overturning Senate decisions. Instead, they have reigned by maintaining a spirit of cooperation with the Senate and students. Though our methods may occasionally differ, the students and the administration both seek the same goal of improving K-State. Many of the improvements now being made on campus (to the Union, KSU Stadium, and Holton Hall, and our new Bramlage Coliseum, etc.) stand as testament to the wisdom of presidents in fostering cooperation with the students by giving them essentially full control over special fees.

Sexism unnecessary

Perhaps you, Jeff Schrag, Collegian Editorial Page Editor, are unaware of the University's policy on sexist language. More than likely, I suspect, you are fully aware that you should treat the sexes equally when writing about them, but are just as fully aware that positive male-oriented words like "secret amour," "lover," and "husband" would not get as strong a response as "mistress" and "wife" do in the context in which you used them in your column of Aug. 22, 1988, although the male terms would have been as applicable to your example.

However, comparing men or male roles to the paper and its roles has never been as dramatic a simile as women compared to the paper or a paper's "duties." Men, apparently, are not so useful or shapeable.

Navy accuses captain of neglect

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Navy has accused the captain of the USS Dubuque of dereliction of duty for failing to rescue a boatload of Vietnamese refugees who claim they later resorted to cannibalism to survive.

Pentagon sources said Tuesday it appears there were sufficient indications of hardship aboard the refugee boat when it crossed paths with the Dubuque and that the Navy warship should have taken the survivors aboard.

Capt. Alexander G. Balian, 48, of Los Angeles has been charged with two counts of violating lawful orders under a section of the Uniform Code of Military Justice that calls for "nonjudicial punishment proceedings," said Cmdr. David Dillon, a Pacific Fleet spokesman in San Diego, Calif.

As a result, Balian was ordered to appear at a closed "admiral's mast" today before Vice Adm. George W. Davis Jr., the head of all surface ships in the Pacific Fleet, the spokesman

In such a proceeding, Davis would serve as the lone judge or authority in considering the evidence. The admiral could take a variety of disciplinary actions, including stripping Balian of his command permanently, ordering a fine or issuing a letter of reprimand or censure.

However, Balian notified the Navy Tuesday that he was exercising his right to refuse the admiral's mast, according to Captain Peter Litrenta, spokesman for the U.S. Pacific Fleet.

Litrenta said that under military law, Davis now will have to decide whether to drop the matter or order an Article 32 hearing. An Article 32 hearing, similar to a civilian grand jury proceeding, is the first step in a full military court martial.

Balian was temporarily relieved of his command of the Dubuque on Aug. 13 while on patrol in the Persian Gulf pending the outcome of a Navy investigation. Davis is scheduled to retire Saturday, suggesting he will make a decision quickly.

Balian was charged with violating a general Navy regulation "by wrongfully failing to render appro-priate assistance to Vietnamese refugees found on the South China Sea on June 9, 1988, in danger of being

The second count accuses him of violating standing operational orders for the Pacific Fleet "which require a commanding officer to aid and rescue refugees encountered at sea in life-endangering circumstances."

That charge alleges Balian "was derelict in the performance of those duties in that he negligently failed to investigate sufficiently and render appropriate assistance ... as it was his duty to do."

A Navy official who asked not be identified said Balian informed the Navy of his decision to refuse the admiral's mast after consulting an unidentified civilian attorney.

help freshmen Class designed to

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

A class specifically designed to introduce students to the University is being offered for the first time this fall within the College of Arts and Sciences.

Jerome Frieman, chairman of the advisory board implementing the Freshman Seminar class, said the idea for the class was based on the "frustration and concern that students don't have a concept of what the University is ... and what the faculty do."

Frieman, professor of psychology, said the class' purpose is to help acquaint students with the "intellectual and cultural life" existing at K-State. He said the class is also intended to help ease the transition from a high school setting to a university atmosphere.

"There's an awful lot that goes on at a university campus that students are unaware of," Frieman said. "The idea is not to force them to go (to university events). It's to acquaint them with what's available. ... My impression is that many students have never been to an opera or a full symphony."

About 200 students were recruited for the class during summer enrollment sessions, he said.

The two credit hour class is offered on a credit/non credit basis. It is offered in 23 sections with no more than 15 students being allowed in each section.

The sections are deliberately kept

A main part of the course involves attending events that are occurring on campus each week. The students are required to prepare for the event and discuss it afterward with the faculty and other class members.

"This is a university," Frieman said. "You're allowed to have opinions here and are encouraged to express them."

Some of the events the classes will attend include a Landon Lecture and University Convocations; McCain performances by the Sydney Symphony, opera singer Samuel Ramey

Insects infesting crops

WICHITA - A pinhead-sized aphid is giving new meaning to the words "Russian menace" as Kansas farmers scout their fields for the insect.

Leroy Brooks, a Kansas State University entomologist, says the Russian wheat aphid is a crop pest that has been spreading since its discovery in Russia around 1900. It was in South Africa in 1978, Mexico by the early 1980s and crossed into the United States in Texas in 1985 or

"It's relatively rare to find a pest that is a completely new pest to the United States, or in this case, the western hemisphere," Brooks said.

Kansas fields first were infested in April 1986. During 1988, at least 49 central and western counties as far east as Saline County were affected. As of July, the insect had spread nearly to the Candaian border and had been spotted in 14 states including California and Washington.

"our neighbors" will be minorities, and the question is whether we want our neighbors to be well-educated.

A curriculum such as Stanford's that ignores the writings of women and people from non-Western cultures indicates to them a belief that no culture other than a male-oriented Western one can contribute anything to American thought and culture. Steffen suggested that such core curricula are both symbolically and politically oriented.

Ann Butler, director of educational support services, said the traditional core curricula based on Western male values has excluded both women and Third World citizens. "We have reached a point in his-

Butler also addressed the relevant question of why there has been an increase of racist acts on campuses across America. She said the acts seem to imply a reaction against a "lack of gratitude" by minorities for being allowed into a university. The feeling is accompanied by the perception of lowered standards and that the "mere presence of minorities has been somehow injurious to the institution," she said.

Clothes help control body temperature By Janet Swanson

Wearing more than one layer of clothing may sound unbearable, but according to Janice Huck, assistant professor of clothing and textiles, it might be the best way to stay cool. Huck said individuals can stay cool in the heat and comfortable in air-conditioned areas by wearing clothes in layers. Layers of clothing, she said, can be removed outside and worn inside.

"Clothing makes a big difference in retaining body heat. The less skin that is covered, the cooler you will be," she said. "It naturally provides an insulative material (which traps body heat)."

Huck said students might like to keep a light sweater or sweatshirt with them while attending class.

"Some people, when they first go inside, feel really chilled and cool by the air (conditioning). A sweater will help with that," Huck said. Despite the chilling effect that air conditioners have, Dr. Robert Tout, director of student health, said they cause very few health problems. "On an individual basis, some say that (air conditioners) cause colds, but it really depends," he said. "Ordinarily this isn't going to be a problem."

What could be a problem, he said, is when people stand in one position for a long time, such as during registration.

"When it gets real warm and people are standing in lines a long time, you're going to have some fainting. They may blame it on the heat, but it's really the inactivity," he said.

Other ways to reduce the amount of body heat that clothing traps is by wearing loose-fitting clothing and light colors, Huck said.

Light colors reflect the sunlight rather than absorb it, and loose clo-■ See COOL, Page 8

Topeka mythology

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - Folklore misses the mark at times. For example, Topeka has been called the home of the flyswatter.

It was actually invented in Weir City.

However, Topeka is the home of the phrase "swat the fly," which became part of the national vocabulary as part of a Kansas doctor's crusade for public heath.

His name was Sam Crumbine, sometimes called "The Fly-Swatter Doc," a frontier physician who treated gunfighters and gamblers in Dodge City and later campaigned against common drinking cups on railway cars and had "Don't spit on the sidewalk" chiseled into bricks. People who work outside need to take extra measures in the hot weather, Tout said.

"People who are outside working or walking, especially in this weather, ought to make sure that they are in a position to be taking in water every few minutes," he said.

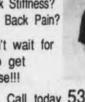

Raydon Robel, director of Recreational Services, said although the Chester E. Peters Recreation Complex is not air-conditioned, few problems have resulted from the heat.

"You're inside so it's going to be a few degrees cooler, but humidity is the largest factor," he said.

The permanent exhaust fans have been used constantly in the large gym areas, Robel said. In addition, smaller fans have been placed in the exercise and weight rooms.

"The problem is that since it's not air-conditioned, we're just circulating the hot air from outside," he said.

state fair Randy Travis to open

By Paula Selby Agri/Business Editor

The drought may have affected other state fairs in the Midwest, but Kansas State Fair Association officials anticipate a large turnout in Hutchinson.

"This year isn't any hotter than it usually is," said Elmer Denning, assistant general manager of the Kansas State Fair.

In fact, officials are hoping that the number of fairgoers this year exceeds the 1987 total. Last year 344,000 people attended the fair and Denning anticipates at least 350,000 this year. "We've got some good shows," Denning said, adding that all the exhibit booth spaces were full as of Monday.

Randy Travis will kick off the fair with a concert at 7:30 p.m. on Sept. 9, followed with two shows by The Oak Ridge Boys on Sept. 10.

Other "good shows" Denning refers to will be Chicago with two concerts Sept. 11, Reba McIntyre will perform Sept. 12, and REO Speedwagon is scheduled Sept. 13.

The Statler Brothers, Red Skelton, Charley Pride and others will appear later in the week.

The fair association recently finished a new building with stages in the Farm Bureau Arena. The building is designed for free entertainment purposes. The free stages will be located at Lake Talbott and in Poplar Eight major free shows will be on the Farm Bureau Arena stage, including Ricky Van Shelton, Danny Davis & The Nashville Brass, and The Shotgun Red Show.

The fair offers about 11,000 booths, both inside and outside, with 686 exhibitors leasing the space, he

"There will be all kinds (of booths)," Denning said, "all the way from fast-pitch artists to politicians to high-tech industry."

Fairgoers will find "quite a few food booths including Mexican, barbecue, chicken noodles and more," he said.

The fair has had a better demand for farm machinery this year than it has in several years, he said.

Denning said another positive indicator of the fair's success is the strong local economy.

FACULTY AND STAFF MEMBERS:

Don't be left out of the 1988-1989 K-State Campus Directory.

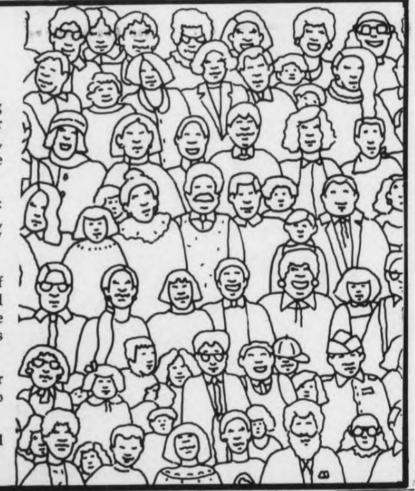

Be sure to get your 1988-1989 K-State Campus Directory listing updated. Personnel Services provides the faculty/ staff list for the directory and if individuals have not updated their records, the directory entry is inaccurate. We would like your assistance in updating the faculty/staff listings.

The following information is needed for individual listings: home address and/or telephone number, campus address, campus phone, faculty/staff title, and office/department/ division.

Please take a few minutes to check last year's directory. If anything has changed, form PER 39 must be completed and submitted to Personnel Services today. Today is also the deadline to submit individual "Personnel Appointment" forms (PER 38) for unclassified and classified individuals.

Anyone wishing to withhold his or her home address or telephone number from the directory must submit a letter to Personnel Services today.

If you have questions, please contact Sheila in Personnel Services, Employee Benefits and Records, 532-6277.

Kansas State Collegian ■ Wednesday, August 24, 1988 ■ Page 11

On a misty morning, a walk through campus, the basic form of mobility...

When beginning a fitness program, long walks at a moderate intensity three times a week will benefit the cardio-vascular system more than running. Consistency is important when involved with this program.

WALKING

Walking is the way to fitness, according to David Dzewaltowski, assistant professor of physical education and leisure studies.

"Achieving fitness takes dedication (to an exercise plan) over a long period of time," Dzewaltowski said. For beginners, a consistent walking program is better for the cardio-vascular system than running, he said.

"The key to getting in shape is developing consistency. And more people are likely to go out and walk than go out and run," he said.

The minimum work-out required for aerobic benefit is to exercise at a moderate intensity for at least 30 minutes three days a week, Dzewaltowski said.

During exercise, the heart rate must be up to a training level for at least 12 minutes without interruption, he said. The ideal training level is different for everyone, and is determined by a target heart rate based on the individual's size and weight.

The standard formula used to determine a person's

The standard formula used to determine a person's target heart rate is: (220 — your age) x .80 for those in the 18 to 30-year-old age group, said Dr. Guy Smith, the assistant student health physcian at Lafene Student Health Center's sports medicine clinic.

A person 20 years old should exercise at a pulse rate of 160 beats per minute for at least 30 minutes, Smith

Both Smith and Dzewaltowski said that short work outs won't help people get into better shape.

"Just running three times a week for 20 minutes won't improve your fitness level," Dzewaltowski said. Short, hard runs don't keep the heart rate at the training level long enough to get any aerobic benefit, he said. He added that long walks will.

"Walking is better (for the cardio-vascular system) because it keeps the heart rate at a training level for a long period of time," he said.

However, not everyone needs to walk, Smith said.

"Walking is easier on your legs, hips and feet, but it's also easier on your heart. For college age people, running, biking or swimming would be more beneficial," he said.

For those over 30 years old, walking is recommended, but those in the 18 to 30 age group need a more vigorous activity, Smith said.

Exercise is great, but it takes dedication. The biggest problem people have when starting an exercise program is sticking to it, said Dzewaltowski.

Most people quit exercising because they don't have enough self-confidence to stay on a regular program, he said.

Beginners don't follow the guidelines of consistency, and they try to compete with friends that are already in shape. They feel they aren't reaching their goals fast enough, and become frustated and quit, he said.

"The drop out rate is from 50 to 80 percent in the first eight weeks of training," he said. In order to succeed people must set their own goals when exercising, and not compare themselves to others, he said.

"People expect too much, too soon out of their bodies," Smith said. It takes at least 6 months to see results like weight loss and improved muscle tone, and that time factor is discouraging, he said.

Both Smith and Dzwaltonswki said exercise alone

Both Smith and Dzwaltonswki said exercise alone won't melt away extra pounds, it takes a low fat diet and regular exercise to lose weight.

"Exercise alone won't make you skinny," Smith said.

A person who works out all the time can still be overweight if they don't change their diet, he said. People who are on a diet and exercise program tend to find it's easier to lose weight.

"Exercise speeds up the body's basic metabolism so it burns more calories at rest and during activity," Dzewaltowski said.

He said it's better to increase caloric intake and exercise more, than to go on a low-calorie, low-carbohydrate diet and not exercise. When the body is short on carbohydrates it burns muscle mass for energy, not fat.

The body also suffers water loss which most people assume is a fat loss when they step on the scale, he said.

Starving the body with a low calorie diet also causes the metabolism to slow down and conserve energy or fat; therefore, the body burns less calories than normal

"It's like when an animal goes into hibernation. The metabolism slows down so it can store enough fat to survive the winter," he said.

A regular exercise program teamed with a low-fat diet is a winning combination, according to Dzewaltowski and Smith.

But it also takes dedication to get results.

udies out-district tuition

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA — The Legislature could greatly improve cooperation among Kansas' higher education institutions if it would do something about the present out-district tuition system, presidents of three western Kansas schools told a legislative study committee today.

"Out-district tuition is a barrier to cooperation now," said Edward Hammond, president of Fort Hays State University. "If you can help us with that, we'd be greatly appreciative."

"As we take our programs to other areas, we always run into the outdistrict tuition problem," said Jimmie Downing, president of Barton County Community College at Great Hammond, Downing and Anthony Tilmans, president of Kansas College of Technology at Salina, appeared before the Legislative Educational Planning Committee to report on how the Western Kansas Educational Compact is working.

They said it is working well and will improve educational opportunity for students in western Kansas, but would benefit from getting rid of or at least modifying the state's outdistrict tuition system.

Under that system, when students from one county attend a community college in another county their home county must pay out-district tuition to the county in which the school is located. It is an irritant to county commissioners, who often balk at

"County commissioners always find it difficult to understand why they have to pay (for their students attending colleges in other counties)," Downing said.

"I don't know the solution to it, but it looks like there's got to be some way to take education programs to other areas if you're going to be successful."

He said the Western Kansas Compact "is a real strength to us," and similar arrangements could help post-secondary schools in other areas of the state grow.

Hammond reviewed the initiatives of the Western Kansas Compact, which he heads as chairman.

The initiatives included: making it easier for students to transfer among the colleges; creating an electronic library connecting all the schools' libraries by computer; creating a data exchange network; share computer software; pooling resources to improve faculty development; cooperation in seeking federal and foundation grant money; improving cooperation among various disciplines at the schools, and enhancing economic development in western Kansas by training needed job personnel.

"Basically, the purpose of the compact is to provide quality education through cooperative effort," Hammond said. "Why we got together is to try to get along with less resources. If we are going to maximize our resources we have to cooperate. We looked at areas where we could combine efforts."

Tilmans said the compact is "extremely important for Kansas Tech and the entire state.

$500 settlement offered to Chrysler consumers

By The Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. -An estimated 39,500 people who own Chrysler Motors Corp. cars that were test driven with discon-nected odometers will receive at east $500 each under a nationwide settlement announced Mileage on affected cars probably ranged from 40 miles to 200 or 300 miles, and "When you put it in that context and consumers are getting $1 to $10 for every mile driven, plus a brand new warranty, we think it's a good settlement," Missouri Attorney General William Webster said in announcing the settlement.

Webster served as the lead negotiator in the $16 million-plus settlement with the automaker announced earlier this year. Attorneys general from nine other states assisted in the settlement proceeding filed Aug. 19 in U.S. District Court in St. Louis, he

The action was taken on behalf of consumers in 46 states, Guam and Puerto Rico. The states that did not participate in the settlement are Georgia, Kentucky, Nevada and South Carolina, Webster said.

In the program, new cars were driven by company executives as part of the testing process before the vehicles were shipped to dealers. Odometers on those cars were disconnected while the executives drove them, leading buyers to believe they had bought new cars.

U.S. to be tested for AIDS virus Babies in

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA - The federal Centers for Disease Control is sponsoring a program to randomly test the blood of up to one-third of the babies born in the United States next year for antibodies to the AIDS virus.

The tests will determine only whether the mother is infected. A positive result does not necessarily mean the child has or will get AIDS, said Dr. Timothy Dondero, head of trict of Columbia, and actual testing the sero-epidemiology branch of the CDC's AIDS program.

Although the conclusions of several studies differ, they indicate that and more in 1989. The study is part of from 30 percent to 50 percent of the newborns testing positive could eventually get acquired immune deficiency syndrome, he said.

Dondero said plans for the infant tests are in place so far in about 23 states plus Puerto Rico and the Dis-is under way in about half of those. He said he expects participation of about 30 states by the end of the year a $40 million package of programs to track the spread of the AIDS virus.

The virus attacks the body's immune system, leaving victims sus-

Quake death toll rising

By The Associated Press

DHARAN, Nepal - Police bulldozed teetering houses Tuesday to keep people from returning to homes left unsafe by an earthquake that killed at least 731 people in India and Nepal.

Officials in both countries expected the death toll to rise as relief workers reached remote towns that have been inaccessible since Sunday's devastating quake.

Some roads were flooded by heavy rains that continued Tuesday, while others had 3-foot-deep cracks or were blocked by boulders the size of houses in the Himalayan mountains and valleys.

At least 531 people were killed in Nepal, said Tek Bahadur Thapa, Affairs Ministry.

Prime Minister Marich Man Singh Shrestha visited Dharan, one of the hardest-hit towns, and surveyed heaps of bricks that were once threestory and five-story houses.

"This is the biggest calamity to strike Nepal," Shrestha said as he toured the town.

India reported an official death toll of 200, but the figure was disputed by news media and opposition politicians who put the Indian death count at anywhere from 400 to 1,500.

In Darbhanga, India on Tuesday, worshipers offered sweets, milk and coconuts to appease the Hindu god of destruction. Women dressed in colorful saris gathered at countryside temples in the quake-ravaged areas of eastern Bihar state to pray and present their offerings to Lord Shiva, the god of destruction in the Hindu

"If God is pleased, nothing will happen," said one woman, who refused to give her name.

The earthquake, which struck shortly before daybreak Sunday when most people were still asleep, registered 6.5 on the Richter scale. It was the deadliest quake in the region since 1950 when a temblor in the east Indian state of Assam killed 1,500 by official count and 30,000 by seismologists' accounts.

Dharan, 105 miles southeast of Katmandu, sits on a rolling plain at the base of a steep hill. At least 131 bodies have been found in the town of 100,000.

Polluters concern officials; state seeks attorneys' help

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - State officials are discussing the possible formation of a team of attorneys to identify polluters and to get them to pay for the cleanup of contaminated areas, Stanley Grant, secretary of health and environment, said today.

Grant said the idea has been discussed informally between officials in his agency, the Kansas Corporation Commission and the state Department of Administration,

Grant also suggested that the Legislature consider tightening up laws it passed last year, to make it easier for the Department of Health and Environment to control oil and gas operators whose practices may lead to the contamination of soil

"A lot of dollars can be recov-ered," Grant told the Legislature's Special Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. "An awful lot of them are not visible unless we have the resources available to attack the problem."

Currently, the state health department has identified 332 sites of soil, groundwater or surface water pollution, about half of them related to oil and gas operations.

which they want to begin cleanup activities this year. The 1988 Legislature created a $900,000 environmental response fund and voted to allocate $1.25 million in state lottery funds to such environ-mental projects.

"It's still a long way to go," said Rep. Ken Grotewiel, D-Wichita.

Grant said other states, such as New York and New Jersey, have created teams of attorneys to iden-tify polluters and seek compensation for cleanup efforts.

Pamphlet helps British motorists

By The Associated Press

LONDON - Help is at hand for British motorists in the United States to keep them from getting stuck on the dual carriageway with a bad silencer and not a spanner in the boot.

"Driving in the U.S.A.," a 32-page pamphlet written by two British journalists, aims to dispel some of the mystery of motoring the American way, and to protect this year's crop of self-driving British vacationers from death, speeding fines and big lawsuits.

The pamphlet is another of those occasional reminders that the potential for Anglo-American misunderstanding is enormous, especially on the highways. They drive on opposite sides and have little in common other than that both use miles instead of kilometers.

The dictionary alone takes up 11/2 pages: a trunk is a boot; a hood is a bonnet; a wrench is a spanner; a muffler is a silencer; a stickshift is a gearshift, a fender is a bumper; gas is petrol; a trailer is a caravan; a divided highway is a dual carriageway and a beltway is a ring road.

Some words don't even have a British equivalent. Thus gridlock is translated laboriously as a "traffic jam in all directions."

The booklet is filled with surprises as to how much Britons don't know about American driving, such as toll roads, the fact that cars with automatic transmissions "creep forward" if the brake isn't pressed, and that speeding can mean fines.

"You are not in Great Britain, where many drivers exceed the speed limit and appear to get away with it. You will not do so in the U.S. Every state has large numbers of patrol cars, with traffic police who know every trick."

The pitfalls are not obvious ones, such as driving on the right, but some that "are dangerously subtle," said co-author Tim Symonds.

"There are some very confusing things, like 'no standing' or 'speed zone' which don't mean a thing over here," he said in an interview.

The booklet advises British motorists how much insurance to take on a rental car to avoid damage claims astronomically higher than anything at home.

Under the heading "The American Policeman," motorists are told:

"Treated with courtesy and respect, the American 'cop' will be polite, even friendly in a wary sort of way. His (or increasingly her) job is to enforce the law, prevent crime and survive. American police, with good reason, fear for their lives."

So if stopped, just "leave your hands on the wheel while the police officer approaches," the pamphlet says. "Do not attempt to joke, do not get aggressive and do not be insulting or facetious. Avoid any comments of the 'It's-different-in-the-U.K.'

Symonds, 48, said he gained his expertise as a student in California.

Police get tough with protestors

By The Associated Press

ATLANTA - More than a month of demonstrations by an anti-abortion group trying to close local clinics have worn out the city's welcome mat, and Southern hospitality is being withdrawn.

During and just after the Democratic National Convention, police carried anti-abortion protesters to waiting jail buses. Now, more than 700 arrests and a dozen demonstrations later, they drag

"We're giving them the opportunity to walk the 10 feet to the bus," said police Sgt. Melvin Denson.

"We are no longer extending certain courtesies," says Sgt. Carl Pydrum Jr.

The jails are getting crowded, although corrections officials say they can manage, even if some demonstrators have to bunk on cell floors. And the cost of protecting the clinics and of arresting and holding the protesters has shot past $250,000.

Operation Rescue, a New York-based anti-abortion group, kicked off the protests July 19, the second day of the convention, when scores of activists who were not carrying identification tried to block access to a clinic where abortions and other procedures are performed.

Those arrested refused to give their names, identifying themselves as Baby Jane Doe or Baby John Doe to show solidarity with the fetuses. Some remain jailed; others have been identified or have won their release by giving their names. Comrades keep coming.

Authorities won't release those who refuse to give their names, saying they could not be sure the protesters would return for court

Mayor Andrew Young rejected a request last week by 44 congressmen, including the entire Louisiana delegation, to release the prisoners. He said the protesters could go when they give their names, and noted that Atlanta pays $10,000 a week in police overtime because of the protests. It costs about $50 a day to keep a person in jail.

The city's tactics in dealing with the activists have changed as the protests have dragged on.

The convention expedient of releasing arrested protesters on recognizance bonds is history; authorities now require cash or a surety bond ranging from $300 to $2,000.

About 300 demonstrators remain in city and Fulton County jails, now mixed in with the general jail population instead of being kept apart. Some demonstrators are being charged with felony obstruction counts instead of misdemeanor trespassing.

Vans taking protesters to the clinics have started getting traffic

But leaders of Operation Rescue continue urging people to come, block entrances to clinics and get arrested.

Scott Quaintance returned to K-State this week after a yearlong absence.

During the past year, Quaintance, a junior in biochemistry and French, suffered two bouts of malaria, visited the nations of Ghana and Bourkina Fasso, and found himself living in a country where people speak a form of French which was initially unfamiliar to him.

During the 1987-88 school year, Quaintance was an exchange student at the University of Abidjan located in the capital of the Republic of Ivory Coast, a West African nation between Ghana and Liberia.

Before he left for Ivory Coast, a friend who explained Africa to Quaintance said, "It's better than you'd ever expect, and it's also worse that you'd ever expect."

Quaintance said: "When I first heard that, it didn't make sense. Now that I've been there, it makes perfect sense."

Yet, the entire year was not full of bad times, Quaintance said.

'When you have a good day, it's indescribable," he said. "It's like a high. Everything went so well, and you mastered the day. It's incredible."

Quaintance first contracted malaria in November 1987 and will be taking medicine for the disease for three more weeks. He could be susceptible to a reoccurence during times of

"I may never have it again, or I may get it at finals," he said.

The symptoms of malaria are sweating, aching joints, nausea, diaherrea, and a high fever between 103 and 106 degrees.

Scott Quaintance, junior in biochemistry and French, was an exchange student at the University of Abidjan in the Republic of Ivory Coast from 1987-88. While there he suffered two bouts of malaria, and was robbed.

"Mine was 105 degrees," Quaintance said.

Another symptom of the disease which is transmitted through mosquito bites is extreme fatigue.

"(The fatigue) gets a little better when you have to go to the bathroom fast," he said.

While in the Ivory Coast, Quaintance earned the equivalent of $600 per month for teaching English at the International Language Center in the Hilton Hotel and at the Spanish Cultural Center, both of which are in Abidjan.

rent a room with a shower at the state-supported university he attended.

"A shower (in the home) for the working class would be very rare," Quaintance said.

At the same time, an Italian-style pizza, which does not include cheese but can include tomato sauce when requested, would cost as much as a month's rent.

"Abidjan is very expensive, if you live like a European," he said. The best memories for Quaintance

For $20 a month he was able to are of his trips to Ghana and Bourkina Fasso, which was formerly called Upper Volta.

They were the most consecutively good times," he said.

The Ivory Coast, which is on the South Atlantic, has high humidity throughout the year.

A visit to a rain forest in the Ivory Coast was also a highlight of his trip.

"It's so dense up high that the light doesn't come down for the plants to grow down low," he said. "All the growth is 100 feet up.'

Associate athletic director assumes new duty with youthful enthusiasm

By Bill Lang Sports Writer

For Veryl Switzer Sr., time is running out as far as the number of years he has left before retirement.

But that doesn't mean he can't bring new life into K-State's athletic programs.

Switzer, former associate vice president and associate professor of minority affairs, was recently selected as associate athletic director. It's a move Switzer says he is ready for.

"It will be a challenge. With some jobs you can get into a rut going to work day in and day out. But I'm looking at this as a new challenge for the next six or seven years and then maybe retire," Switzer said.

"I felt that the time was right for me to switch over," he added. "I have had a good working relationship with the athletic department for about 19 years. I've always hoped that we could turn things around for the football team. Now, I have a chance to support my efforts until I get to the retirement age.'

Director Steve Miller.

"We did a great job," Miller said of the selection. "I'm excited. He meets some very important needs.

"He will oversee the academic assistance program and he is a person who has expertise in that program. He has a link with the entire University community, and he is aware of the University's history and it's purpose," he added. "He is also aware of both sides of the University as an athlete and an administrator."

Switzer said administrative sup-

Switzer's choice excited Athletic port for K-State athletics was lacking until this year. This will make his tasks all that much easier.

"(President Jon) Wefald has expressed support ... and the choice of Steve Miller as athletic director has really been a boost," Switzer

But Switzer has ventured into a field ridiculed by the media as being discriminatory. That's something that hasn't bothered Switzer at all.

"I don't feel that it is a problem as far as I'm concerned," Switzer said. "However, most athletic departments across the country are somewhat traditional and more conservative. I know that I am one of the few across the country that is involved in the administration level."

Miller said the pressure some universities face in hiring minorities was never a factor in the decision to hire

"I sought him out when I got here. There was no pressure. It's a hiring that makes perfect sense," Miller

As for the immediate future, Switzer will oversee the volleyball, track and field, and women's tennis programs.

While the track program has already enjoyed national success, and the women's tennis and volleyball teams are starting to build their reputations as contenders in Big Eight Conference play, it's football that Switzer said he would most like to see improve.

Switzer played for the Wildcats from 1951-53, and went on to play in the professional ranks with the Green Bay Packers (1954-55), Calgary Stampede (1958) and the Montreal Alouettes (1959-61). And since K-State has had only three winning seasons since his graduation 25 years ago, naturally he is a bit concerned.

But one thing about the program eases his worry — a graduation rate of nearly 70 percent among the

"We're doing well in the classroom but we need to better on the football field," Switzer said. "We have enjoyed some success in those areas but we need to turn it around. We've had success in the other areas, maybe it's time we turn the corner and get things going.

"We need to make sure that not only a few sports are successful, but

Parrish switches hype from himself to Wildcats' efforts

Mid-Week Commentary

MOT PERRIN Sports Columnist

After two years, two victories and one tie, Stan Parrish is finished making the big promises.

No more hype. No more brash talk from K-State's football coach of how this is going to be the year that Wildcat fortunes finally take a turn for the better. No more guarantees of winning seasons.

This year, knowing that victories are the only thing that will sell tickets at KSU Stadium and potentially ensure his job security, Parrish is approaching this season with a straight-faced determination.

"We're in the bottom of the garbage can and we're just trying to crawl our way out," Parrish

In his efforts to keep K-State from plunging even deeper into the proverbial dumpster, Parrish is trying to divert much of the attention away from himself and place the spotlight on the efforts of the team.

"I think it's us versus the world. We started that (approach) last spring," he said. "We obviously don't have much of a support base, so we've got to draw upon ourselves."

With fan optimism at a new low and with a team stocked with young players, Parrish's new attitude makes sense. The less pressure, the better the performance. But after two seasons of hollow promises to fans and his credibility running low, it's not as if Parrish had much of a choice.

"I was under a lot of pressure to hype our program and sell tickets and I suffered because of that," Parrish said, explaining his approach of the last two years. "I'm not in the ticket business any more. The best way we can sell tickets is to win our opening game."

Parrish contrasted his situation with that of second-year Iowa State Coach Jim Walden. Walden, an established coach from Washington State, hasn't been burdened with the type of pressure that has dogged Parrish and appears to be turning the Cyclone program around.

"We want to play hard. That's the only goal we have."

-Stan Parrish head football coach

"I guess the big thing is that somehow we've got to play over our heads every week," Parrish said. "I think our best chance to do that is together."

In an effort to promote that kind of togetherness, Parrish is trying to bring himself and his staff closer to the team.

"They need that, I think they want that. They've got to know, more than anything in the world, that I'm with them," Parrish said of the players.

What Parrish seems to be aiming for is a type of overachieving attitude, one that could push K-State past weaker opponents like Tulsa, Louisiana Tech, Kansas and Iowa State and maybe inspire an upset somewhere along the

"We've got to be a team - deemphasize the individual and emphasize the team," he said. "We've got to develop a fighting spirit, a toughness to us. We're going to be an underdog 11 times.' With a week and a half left until the Sept. 3 season opener at Tulsa, all Parrish can do is hope that the quiet, workman-like strategy for improvement pays off.

'We have a lot of younger players and I don't want to put them on a pedestal and have them fail," he said. "I want our goals to be realistic to them because they're going to make a lot of mistakes early on.

"We want to play hard. That's the only goal we have."

Wildcats lose starter

K-State's football team went through a lengthy but costly scrimmage Tuesday when projected starting quarterback Paul Watson went down on the second play with a shoulder injury. Watson, a redshirt freshman, tore a ligament in his right shoulder and will be out four to six weeks.

Veryl Switzer Sr., associate vice president and associate professor of minority affairs, has recently been selected as the associate director of athletics. Switzer said he is looking forward to the challenges ahead.

The Wildcats went through a two-hour scrimmage and ran about 120 plays.

Olympic flame starts trek

ANCIENT OLYMPIA, Greece - The Olympic flame began its 7,000-mile trip to Seoul Tuesday, sparked by a blazing sun in a ceremony featuring folklore from Korea and Greece.

The flame will be turned over to South Korean officials in Athens Thursday. It will then be transported by jetliner in a lamp, resembling a camera telephoto lens and styled after an old Korean observatory, to Cheju Island, for the start of a torch relay through South Korea to the opening ceremonies in Seoul Sept. 17.

The relays in Greece and South Korea total 2,825 miles.

NBA coach introduced

MINNEAPOLIS - Bill Musselman, who used to tell the University of Minnesota basketball team that "losing is worse than death," was introduced Tuesday as the first head coach of the NBA expansion Minnesota Timberwolves.

Musselman, 48, was signed to a four-year contract at an undisclosed salary by the Timberwolves, who begin play in the 1989-90 season.

Tyson breaks bone in hand

NEW YORK - Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson broke a bone in his right hand during a street fight early Tuesday with former boxing opponent Mitch Green, the champion confirmed Tuesday night.

Tyson appeared at a news conference wearing a cast on his right hand, and said the injury was a hairline fracture of the third metacarpal.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, said he didn't know whether Tyson's Oct. 8 fight against Frank Bruno at London, England, would have to be rescheduled.

The cast, stretching from the hand to within about 4 inches of the elbow, is to be on for three weeks.

New attitude marks NU program

By The Associated Press

Staff/Chris Assaf

LINCOLN, Neb. — For the first time in three years, neither tragedy, scandal nor deeply felt bitterness hangs over the proud Nebraska football program.

It's as if Coach Tom Osborne had drawn a curtain around his Huskers and erected a "men at work" sign.

"I can definitely see the change," says LeRoy Etienne, a senior member of what could be the nation's finest linebacker corps, told Big Eight Skywriters Tuesday. "And we are very happy with our new attitude."

Most noticably absent is the outof-character braggadocio that kept the Huskers in the headlines all last season. Angered the year before in a bitter, last-minute 20-17 loss to Oklahoma, the 1987 Huskers underwent a stunning change in character.

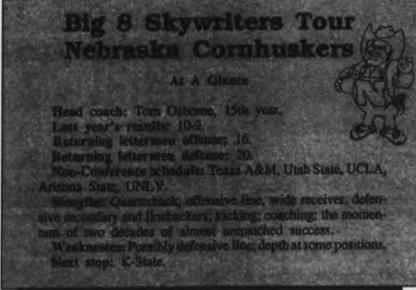

Many swaggered and bragged, giving the season nicknames and openly predicting they would not only slay the Sooners, but humble them. Some unflattering comparisons were drawn between themselves and Oklahoma players.

For the first time in Osborne's 14 years as head coach, the Huskers were noted for what they said more than for what they did. Reflecting their coach, Nebraska's teams had always been respectful, modest and businesslike.

All this pouting and strutting seemed as out of place as a sky lift in Omaha.

In the bitter end, even Osborne was drawn into the act. After Oklahoma beat them once again, 17-7, he said in an emotional news conference, among other things, that he was obviously not Barry Switzer's coaching equal.

All in all, it was an unbecoming time for Nebraska football. Coaches and players, separately and together, discussed the whole thing.

"There are guys here who wish they hadn't said some things they said. And there are some things I wish I hadn't said," Osborne said Tuesday.

Now, wiser for the experience, has his team undergone what amounts to a second personality change?

"I hope so," Osborne said. "I don't like that type of thing."

Linebacker Broderick Thomas, one of the talkiest of the 1987 crew, was asked Tuesday what catchy name they were calling this 1988 campaign.

"Football season," he said. "My goal this year is to be a nice guy," said senior quarterback Steve

Taylor, author of some of 1987's most inflammatory comments. Etienne defined this new attitude as a feeling of togetherness and unity of purpose. 'In previous years, some players had a difficult time getting along with other players," he said. "Now we're all mixing together."

"We're all thinking together," said Thomas. "Hopefully we can go out and play together."

The Huskers, ranked No. 2 in the pre-season Top Twenty, launch their 99th season of intercollegiate football Saturday night against Texas A&M in the Kickoff Classic. It could mark their first smooth, trouble-free beginning in four years.

Nebraska's pre-season camp in 1985 was shocked by the suicide of starting tight end Brian Hiemer. In 1986, an NCAA investigation later to fetch a one-year probation clouded the future.

And last year at this time, it seemed the Huskers could talk of nothing but their hatred of Oklahoma - the state, the football team and the university of.

Without elaboration, Osborne admitted there may have been a connection between all the talk and his team's failure to be successful."It was disappointing," he added. "They really had their hopes built up that we would win the championship. And we didn't do it."

Osborne also admitted he visited with the players about the error of their ways, terming the conversation "kind of personal between us."

"A lot of times, when you read what you said even though the quote's accurate, it doesn't read quite like you said it," Osborne said. "But I hope they'll maintain a good perspective on what they say."

The Huskers shouldn't need anyone to plead their case. Taylor, an extraordinary run-pass threat who threw five touchdown passes in one game last year, owns several team quarterback records.

"He probably has the most athletic skills of any quarterback that I've coached," Osborne said. "I'm not saying at this point he's necessarily the best quarterback, but he's very good."

Three returning starters bolster the offensive line, and Taylor has outstanding receivers in Dana Brinson and Richard Bell.

The Huskers' greatest strength could be a defense anchored by linebackers on the order of Thomas and Etienne.

"Texas A&M has publicized rather extensively that they've shown they have the best linebacking corps in the country," Osborne said. "I hope they're not a whole lot better than ours, or we're in bad trouble. These guys represent some of our very best athletes. We feel we realy have seven very fine athletes.

"The secondary figures to be somewhat better than last year, but a concern is the defensive line. It's not an area of great weakness, but it's probably not as experienced or as solid as the other spots."

Osborne says never to take preseason rankings seriously, even his present No. 2 slot. But only one prize has eluded him in a brilliant career that now reads 147-34-2 and counting. Maybe the new maturity - the new attitude the players speak of will bring Tom Osborne's first national championship.

"I don't know right now how good we are," Osborne said.

Iran, Iraq accuse each other of threatening the cease-fire

By The Associated Press

NICOSIA, Cyprus - Iran on Tuesday claimed Iraq was massing troops along the central and southern sectors of the border in preparation for new military actions in violation of the cease-fire.

Iraq, in turn, accused Iran of moving a regiment into what was previously a no man's land between the opposing forces in the central front. It said the Iranians withdrew after Iraq adopted the "necessary measures."

appeared at a ceremony to commemorate the death of a Shiite Moslem saint in the 7th century. It was his first public appearance since the Persian Gulf truce went into effect Saturday. Khomeini, however, made no remarks. Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati sent an urgent message to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar advising him of "the Iraqi regime's intentions to launch military operations against qis have massed troops facing Fakkeh on the central sector of the border.

It also quoted Brig Gen. Asghar Jamali, deputy commander of Iran's ground forces, as saying that United Nations observers watched an Iraqi armored brigade move up to the western bank of the Nahr Anbar

The agency reported Jamali said the Iraqis dug in and were facing Iranian forces on the other bank of the river in the southern sector.

Peace talks between Iran and Iraq open Thursday in Geneva.

Coloradoans seek area help

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - Colorado officials came calling on Gov. Mike Hayden Tuesday, soliciting Kansas' political support in its effort to land the superconducting super collider scientific project that Kansas lost

The Colorado delegation visited Hayden in his office, then held a Statehouse news conference with Harland Priddle, secretary of the Department of Human Resources, to explain how Kansas can help.

Mainly the Coloradoans want a show of political unity from a sixstate region for their proposal. They also are lobbying Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming and Utah.

In return, they offer the prospect of Kansas workers landing jobs in construction of the super collider, and the advantages to Kansas' university scientists of having the project next door in Colorado.

The western visitors did not offer to release more water into the Arkansas River in return for Kansas' cooperation. Kansas has gone to court trying to force Colorado to turn on the spigot in the Ark River, claiming that state is illegally keeping the water for itself.

Priddle said Kansas is backing Colorado's proposal, because of its proximity and because none of the six other states still in the runnning has asked for its support. "I think Colorado is the only state proposal that would benefit Kansas in any way," Priddle said.

Tim Schultz, executive director of the Colorado project, asked Hayden to accompany the Colorado delegation to Washington on Oct. 5, when it makes its final presentation at federal Department of Energy hearings. DOE is expected to select its preferred site by December.

Townspeople upset about AIDS shelter

By The Associated Press

ESTELLA, Pa. - John Edkin stood on the front porch of the home he built with his own hands, jabbing his finger in the air and complaining angrily about a farmhouse just 1,000 yards away that's been proposed as a shelter for infants with AIDS.

"Hey, it's right in my backyard!" exclaimed the 67-year-old retired woodsman. "I feel that we don't need them here. Sullivan County is a nice clean county and we'd like to keep it that way."

Like Edkin, many of the 630 residents of Elkland Township, of which Estella is a part, oppose the idea of the home, which would care for up to six Philadelphia-area children aged 2 and under until foster homes can be

Elkland Township residents and officials deny discrimination charges filed by the home's operators, Best Nest Inc. of Abington, Pa. In its complaint with the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission, Best Nest accused the town of trying to block the home by amending the building code and a toxic waste ordinance and by "excessive and burdensome review."

Edkin says his biggest concern is property values in Estella, a central Pennsylvania town so small it has more deer than people and includes only a dozen homes, two churches, a country store, a nursing home and the cabins that seasonal residents use for hunting and weekend getaways. It is about 200 miles from Philadelphia.

"I talked to a real estate agent after this thing first come in," said Edkin. "And I said to him, 'If I told you today I'd take $30,000 for my home, what would you say to me?' He said, 'I'd tell you I'd give you 15.' The value of property is gone right in this farming and lumbering region, was once a home for emotionally disturbed teen-agers. It now has a temporary license to house three infants. A 3-month old girl lives there now with her foster mother.

To take in more than three young children would require costly renovations to comply with additional state and township regulations. Township supervisors amended the building code to place any group home whose income is more than $15,000 a year into a tougher fire safety classification, mandating sprinkler systems, fire walls, emergency lighting and fire escapes.

The 100-year-old house has none of these, and Pennsylvania officials and Scott Eldredge, the social worker who directs Best Nest, agree such renovations might be prohibitive.

Townspeople and officials suggested Best Nest is a family venture out to make a buck through the $197 to $227 a day it would receive in government funds for each child and through a tax-exemption it sought as a non-profit corporation. The exemption was denied, according to Kenneth Levitzky, the county solicitor, after Best Nest failed to prove eligibility with financial data.

"I haven't been paid a dime for what I've done," Eldredge said. "I grew up in a home where there was emphasis on helping other people."

Residents say they are being painted as the bad guys when their concern is the children's safety. The nearest hospital is an hour away, they Clinics and doctors, however, are available nearby, and state officials say it has not been clearly demonstrated that medical care would be a problem.

The question of the children's race arose at a town meeting,

"My Life as a Dog" is an exceptional film about children that is not merely a film for children. Set in Sweden, in the late 1950's, the film chronicles the experiences of 12-year-old lagemar who is shipped out during his mother's illness to stay with relatives in the country and the series of horrifyingly funny disasters that plague his young life. Lasse Halstrom's acclaimed film is most of all about perspective—the relativity of the trivial and cosmic, the painful and the comic. (In Swedish with English subtitles).

Crisis averted; standoff ends

By Paula Selby Agri/Business Editor and Janet Swanson News Editor

A standoff between Riley County Police Department officers and a 15-year-old boy which lasted more than four hours ended peacefully Wednesday night after two officers entered the boy's home.

The officers convinced the boy to leave his room, where he had locked himself in, and move into the family room to talk.

He later agreed to leave the home and accompany the officers to the police station where they could talk on "neutral ground," said Col. Les Bieler, Riley County police officer.

About 5:29 p.m., the Riley County police received a report of a domestic disturbance from Helen King, the boy's mother.

When police arrived on the scene in the 1100 block of Ratone, King left the house with the officers: and police attempted to contact the boy by knocking on the door.

Officers then cordoned off 10th Street from Bertrand St. to Claflin Ave. and began attempting to contact the boy by voice and by phone. "Just move your bedroom curtain. Can you open your curtains? Are you OK in there?" an officer shouted into the house.

"Will you answer your phone? All I need is a few minutes of your time," he said.

Although the officers were able to open a side door to the home about 6:30 p.m., they didn't immediatley enter the home.

Despite early reports by neighbors and police officers of gunfire, officers who entered the house about 9:40 p.m. found the boy sitting on his bed with his dog, ■ See STANDOFF, Page 16

Enrollment up; Wefald pleased

From Staff and Wire Reports

President Jon Wefald announced Wednesday an 8 percent increase in fall enrollment during a news conference in the Kansas Statehouse at Topeka.

At the beginning of classes Monday, 16,325 students had enrolled, compared to 14,912 enrolled at the same time in the fall semester of 1987.

According to a news release from the University, Robert Krause, vice president for institutional development, said enrollment for the fall could exceed 19,000 students.

"If our historical pattern of enrollment increase between preliminary head count and 20th day final total holds," Krause said, "the University should exceed 19,000 head count this fall for the first time since 1982."

Wefald said the increase represents the largest for K-State since 1946. He also pointed out that the increase further reverses the trend of declining enrollment the University experienced from 1980 to 1986.

'Some people got the idea this was irreversible," Wefald said.

The total number of students in the increase is approximately 1,400. Wefald said University officials had expected an increase of 700 to 800 students.

According to the news release, Wefald said the increase would help to improve the academic quality at K-State.

"Having experienced a major increase in our enrollment for each of the past two years serves as proof that K-State has gained the momentum and is viewed as one of the top universities in the region," he said.

"In addition, exceeding our enrollment goals will be a critical factor in our being able to gain additional funding to maintain and improve the academic quality at K-State," Wefald said.

Pat Bosco, associate vice president for institutional advancement and dean of student life, said the increase was due to the work of all members of the University community.

"This kind of extensive increase is a direct result of a University-wide, all-out effort," Bosco said. Bosco complimented faculty and students for their work toward bringing about the increase.

"Without a quality faculty and excited and enthusiastic students, these types of increases would not occur," he said.

Bosco said the University-wide effort included such people as secretaries who give students their first impressions of the University when they answer the phone.

Slattery talks policy

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

A Central American policy that "reflects our legitimate national security interests, and not our insecurity" was the expressed hope of Jim Slattery, D-Kan., during an address to the Manhattan Alliance on Central America Wednesday in St. Isidore's Chapel.

The subject of the speech and discussion concerned U.S. policy toward Central America in the post-Reagan era. Slattery said any predictions on the issue will depend on who wins the presidential election.

"You can't help but be overwhelmed by the problems facing the next president (concerning Central America)," he said.

Those problems include dealing with Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega, the issue of drugs coming into the United States from that country, and our national interest in the Panama Canal.

Other problems include Honduras, "one of the poorest nations in the hemisphere," and Costa Rica which has the largest per capita foreign debt, Slattery said.

"I think it's more important for us in the next administration to address those economic conditions," he said.

The next administration can and should commit some additional resources to help those problems."

icy might be based on, Americans should be "aware of totalitarianism both of the right and the left." There is very little commitment to ideology by dictators in that part of the world," he said.

Slattery said that whatever the pol-

The United States shouldn't shape policy for Central America "with a big brush," and that the only way to solve the problem is to reduce the burden of debt, "so much of which is owed to this country," he said.

"If we could commit just 1 percent of our ($300 billion) defense budget of aid, it would be beneficial to all," Slattery said.

He also said he would support a Communist government in Central America if it was free and democratically elected. However, Slattery said he believes in the importance of U.S. security interests, but thinks the two can coincide.

"I do believe communism is a bankrupt system," he said.

When asked why he thinks the Soviets have an interest in Central America, Slattery credited it in part to their expansionist tendencies.

NEW YORK - A newly uncovered spy ring had been supplying the Soviet Union with secret American military documents through a German-Hungarian connection for at least 10 years, a published report

Senior officials at the Pentagon and the State Department were told in the last few days about the espionage network, according to a report in today's editions of The New York Times. Documents concerning NATO defense plans for Europe were believed stolen as well as the U.S. only for questioning. Army contingency plans for an American ground war in Europe against the Soviet Union, the newspaper said.

Investigators told the Times they believe that the West German-based spy ring, aided by couriers in Sweden, provided documents apparently obtained from U.S. soldiers to the intelligence agency of Hungary, a Soviet ally.

The newspaper quoted U.S. officials it did not name as saying authorities in Sweden and West Germany detained eight people on Tuesday but that some of them were brought in Those who were detained included a retired Army sergeant who has been living in West Germany, the newspaper said. Names of those involved and further details of the case have not been made public. National Swedish television reported Wednesday that security police in Stockholm arrested three Swedes suspected of spying for an East European country. The spy network was uncovered by West German and U.S. officials, including agents from the FBI and the U.S. Army, the Times said.

Hayden gives support

By Amy Lyons Collegian Reporter

Gov. Mike Hayden made a brief stop Wednesday night in Manhattan to speak at a fund-raiser for the Republican Party's Second District Congressional candidate, Phil Meinhardt.

Hayden, addressing a crowd of more than 150, said the main issue before Meinhardt is the reduction of the federal deficit.

Meinhardt agreed with the

"The Democrats (in the U.S.

House of Representatives) have proven they are not capable of lowering the nation's deficit," he said. "It's time to give a Republican a chance."

Meinhardt, who is vying to replace three-term Democrat incumbent Jim Slattery, said the main difference between the two candidates is their philosophy on deficit reduction.

Hayden said he thought all U.S. representatives should take a cut in their current yearly salary of $89,500.

"I think the budget can be reduced in the next two years if all congressmen will take a 10 percent cut in salary and vote to freeze the budget at its current level of $1.1 trillion," Meinhardt said.

He added that concern with the nation's future and his dissatisfaction with Slattery's policies prompted him to run for office.

"I'm concerned about the future of this country," Meinhardt said. "I would like to see at least one generation grow up free of war and with a secure economy. I believe without a doubt that I can do a better

NEW YORK — The Mars candy-bar clan is worth $12.5 billion, surpassing the Newhouse publishing dynasty as the richest family in America, Fortune magazine reports.

If Fortune's estimate is correct, the worth of the Marses could buy about 25 billion regular-size Snickers bars, which if laid end to end would circle the planet Mars nearly 32 times.

The magazine's calculation is more than any previous estimate of the wealth of the secretive family, which shuns publicity about itself and its candy bar company, maker of Snickers

"Mars's assets are often underestimated because the company is as loose with information as its McLean, Va., neighbor, the CIA," Fortune said Wednesday in an advance press release about its 1988 Billionaires List, to be carried in the Sept. 12 issue available on newsstands next Monday.

The magazine said it based the estimate of the Mars family wealth on what comparable food concerns have sold for

"Thus, Forrest Mars and his three children, Forrest Jr., John and Jacqueline, overtake the Newhouse publishing magnates as the richest Americans," Fortune said.

Still, the Marses rank No. 3 on Fortune's worldwide list. The richest remains the Sultan of Brunei, whose oil wealth makes him worth $25 billion. Next is King Fahd of Saudi Arabia and family, worth $18 billion.

Patient in surgery prays to die

PEORIA, Ill. — The pain was so extreme the patient prayed to die and endured "living hell for 40 minutes" as he lay awake through gall bladder surgery, according to testimony at a medical negligence trial.

Lynn Wahls "couldn't move, he couldn't talk, he couldn't scream, he couldn't do anything" due to muscle relaxants and the insertion of a tube down his throat, attorney Robert Strodel told a Peoria County jury during opening arguments Tuesday.

Wahls felt the surgeon cut into his abdomen, move several organs about and snip out his gall bladder, Strodel said, and should be compensated for the ordeal.

The attorney contends the anesthesiologist, Dr. Kuo-Tung "Kenneth" Cheng, was negligent during the February 1987 operation at Proctor Community Hospital.

"The evidence will not show that Cheng is a bad doctor," Strodel said. "He's not. But in this one case, he was Cheng's attorney, Richard Quinn, disputed the contention that Wahls felt extreme pain.

"There's no way he felt what he claims he felt," Quinn said, adding "I'm not here to tell you he didn't feel" some discomfort or pain.

He said Cheng used the recommended dosage of anesthetic. Wahls, who lost consciousness later in the procedure, is seeking at least $15,000 in damages from Cheng.

Another Woodstock possible

BETHEL, N.Y. - Nearly two decades after the Woodstock rock festival became a symbol of peace and love for the Baby Boom generation, the music has been replaced by bickering over whether there should be an anniversary concert.

Promoters are squabbling. Neighbor is pitted against neighbor and bucolic Bethel is still trying to come to grips with its place in history.

"This town doesn't want to forget it," said Allan Scott, Bethel's supervisor. "The town just doesn't want to get into the same thing it got into 20 years ago.'

Max Yasgur's old farm, where 300,000 people converged for three days in August 1969 to hear musicians like the Who, Jimi Hendrix and Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young, isn't a tourist trap, largely because many people still think it's in Woodstock, 45 miles away.

K.C. 26th in convention rating

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Once considered one of the nation's leading convention cities, Kansas City dropped out of the top 25 convention cities in 1987, according to a trade publication

Kansas City fell from 25th to 26th place between 1986 and 1987, Business Travel News reported in its Aug. 15 edition. The rankings were based on convention attendance.

The publication said convention attendance in Kansas City dropped almost 10 percent in 1987, from 380,000 in 1986 to 342,150 last year, allowing Madison, Wis., to edge into the Kansas City also ranked 26th in exhibit space but ranked sixth in meeting space.

New York, with almost 4.8 million convention delegates, was the top convention city.

James Hutchinson, president of the Convention and Visitors Bureau of Greater Kansas City, took issue with the rankings. He said the city's dip probably was the result of the bureau's changing the way it estimates convention attendance.

"I don't think it's a true measure," Hutchinson said of the rankings. "We do more business than Madison, Wisconsin."

Berdella pleads guilty

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - A man who was recently convicted of first-degree murder in a beheading death pleaded guilty Wednesday to sodomizing a hitchhiker while holding him captive for four days.

"I kept him bound to a bed with ropes tying his hands and feet," said Robert A. Berdella, adding that he had sexually assaulted the 22-year-old man.

Under the terms of a plea bargain, Berdella, 39, was sentenced to life in prison for sodomy and seven years for felonious restraint by Circuit Judge H. Michael Coburn.

The victim told police he had been beaten by Berdella, injected with drugs, threatened with death and repeatedly sodomized before escaping from Berdella's mid-town Kansas City house on April 2 wearing only a dog collar.

The escape led to Berdella's arrest, the discovery of two skulls on his property and the murder conviction.

In a plea bargain with Jackson County prosecutors, seven of nine charges against Berdella were dropped and prosecutors stopped trying to force him to forfeit his house to the state. Berdella also agreed to drop a $1 million lawsuit he had filed against the prosecutors for their efforts to take his property.

On Aug. 3, Berdella was sentenced to life in prison without parole after pleading guilty to murdering Larry W. Pearson, 20, of Wichita, Kan., whose skull was found in Berdella's back yard.

Grain trade to be extended

WASHINGTON - The United States and the Soviet Union have agreed in principle to extend for one year the current deal between the two countries for Soviet purchase of American grain, a U.S. official said Wednesday.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the terms were "essentially identical" to current arrangements, under which the Soviets must buy at least 9 million tons of U.S. grain annually. The five-year pact expires Sept. 30.

The official said the two sides reached a mutual decision to try to devise a new accord but to stick to the terms now in force. He told The Associated Press the deal was sealed last week through "diplomatic channels."

A second official said he hoped a pact between the two countries could be reached at the next negotiating session, but said that no final agreement has been reached.

"We feel like we made some progress, but we're still far apart on pricing, minimums and things of that nature," said Thomas Kay, chief of the Department of Agriculture's Foreig Agricultural Service.

Idaho hay helps Iowa livestock

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW, Idaho — A group of 65 Iowa farmers prepared Wednesday to cut free hay for their droughtstarved livestock, while offers of food, lodging, money and equipment continued to pour in.

Meanwhile, organizers of the hay harvest said they've received calls from dozens of farmers in North Dakota and other drought-stricken states asking whether any more hay could be cut.

When we put out the notice, we didn't realize we were going to get such a tremendous response," said Mike Tracy, director of information for the Idaho Farm Bureau. "It's turned into a monumental task."

Organizers of the hay harvest had worried there wouldn't be enough machinery to keep the Iowans busy, but offers of equipment began pouring into the Farm Bureau office here Tuesday after a Farm Bureau official appealed on television for donations.

The tired contingent of 65 Iowans arrived late Tuesday in two Greyhound buses donated by the transportation company for the 1,600-mile trip west.

The men, women and teen-agers stayed overnight in rooms donated by three motels while Farm Bureau and National Farmers Organization officials scouted about 4,500 acres of hay on pasture land placed in the government's Conservation Reserve Program.

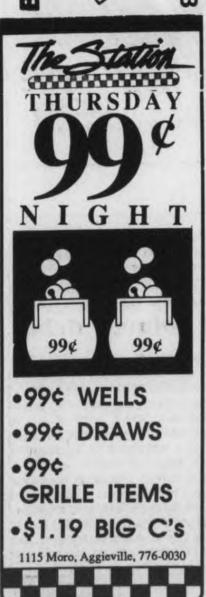

The harvest could provide as much as 5,000 tons of hay. As of the first of this week, 76 percent of the hay crop in Iowa was considered in poor condition by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

The Iowans, who plan to harvest, bail and ship for about 10 days, faced an Aug. 31 deadline to be off the reserve lands, which are under the control of the USDA.

"A lot of us guys are just plain out of hay," said Don Tibbals, an Albia, Iowa, dairy farmer. "The USDA finally realized that and released the conservation reserve program

"A lot of farmers are feeding their winter hay now," said Junior McCall of Clarinda, Iowa. "We usually don't have to start (feeding) hay until December," added Larry Keller of Nunia, Iowa.

Chilean military leader halts emergency state

By The Associated Press

SANTIAGO, Chile - The right-wing government on Wednesday decreed an end to all states of emergency for the first time since military President Augusto Pinochet took power in a 1973 coup, the interior minister announced.

The action was taken less than a week before Chile's military commanders meet to nominate a candidate, expected to be Pinochet himself, for a presidential referendum planned for October.

Interior Minister Sergio Fernandez, in a late afternoon news conference at the government palace, told reporters that presidential decrees lifting the emergency states "have been issued today and will take effect upon publication in the official bulletin" within the next few days.

The states of emergency have empowered the authoritarian government to arrest and hold suspects without judicial authorization, to exile citizens considered dangerous to national security and to limit public gatherings and restrict the news media.

Two such states of emergency are now in effect: the formal state of emergency and the state of disturbance to internal peace. Fernandez said both had been ordered Since Sept. 11, 1973, when Pinochet led a coup that toppled the government of elected Marxist President Salvador Allende, Chile always has been under a state of siege, of emergency or of disturbance of internal peace. Each has been lifted at one time or another, but never before have all been lifted and often more than one has been in effect at the same time.

Lecture slated

By The Collegian Staff

"Education and Opportunity" will be the focus of the first All-University Convocation lecture of the fall semester.

John B. Slaughter, president of Occidental College, will deliver the lecture at 10:30 a.m. today in McCain Auditorium.

Prior to giving his address, "A Case for Celebrating Diversity in Higher Education," University President Jon Wefald will present Slaughter with an honorary doctorate of science in engineering.

Slaughter, a 1956 K-State graduate in electrical engineering, will be attending a luncheon hosted by the President's Office, the Convocation Committee and the 125th Anniversary Committee.

After a question and answer session at 1:30 p.m. in Union 207, Slaughter will tour Durland Hall.

Slaughter is a former director of the National Science Foundation and he is the chairman of the Presidents' Commission of the National Collegiate Athletics Association.

He has received 14 honorary doctorates from institutions such as the University of Notre Dame, Tuskegee Institute, the State University of New York at Buffalo, and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

Slaughter's convocation is in conjunction with K-State's 125th Anniversary celebration and is open to the public.

Film's protesters make it more popular couldn't decide what to begin the semester with. Should I write an informative column that would be of great value to all who read it? Or, should I instead stoop to shoveling more muck upon an already mucky subject that few people would even choose to talk about since it has already been beaten around by all worthwhile protestors for the last few weeks?

The appropriate choice was obvious. I should make a contribution to society, perhaps writing a general guide for freshmen, discussing a new panacea that would cure K-State parking forever or elaborating on the true meaning of life.

But the temptation was too much. I was sucked into the hole of bad writing topics from hell. Sadly enough, I find myself writing about the movie, "The Last Temptation of Christ.'

For those of you fortunate enough never to have heard of this movie, I will give a quick overview. Granted, I'm not a movie critic, but here is the general idea.

Martin Scorsese's film deals with the life of Christ. Sounds safe enough, lots of movies have had the Christ figure in them in one way or another over the years. The problem with this film is it depicts Christ as a human. No, not just a personified God, but a human with the same desires, fears and lusts that a normal their theaters in Missouri and Illinois, Com- line.

Portrayal of Christ follows trend human must deal with.

In this film, Christ is shown struggling with his fears about his destiny as the Son of God and dealing with his desires just to be a normal person. He appears almost crazy at times, like we all do, and almost could be labeled as neurotic. OK, so the guy has a few problems. Yet, as the film continues, he overcomes his problems, resists his temptations and fulfills his destiny as the Son of God.

So it sounds like a historical movie, basic old plot, same old characters. Pretty safe. Ha! Scorsese made the mistake of dealing with Christ as an ordinary man. What a sin. He should have realized that thousands of people just would have a hissy fit if Christ was made out to be just like one of the guys. Thus, thousands of people across the nation have protested the flick, in hopes of getting it banned.

Yet, have they really succeeded?
Well, yes and no. In Conservative Town, U.S.A., you'd better not make any major plans to see it. For example, Dickinson Operating Company, Inc., operates theaters in several cities and will not show the film in any of monwealth Theatres had not made a decision about the film as of last Friday. So, if you were planning on scooping this film this weekend, you may have to travel - a lot.

However, if you are fortunate enough to be living in a larger city, you may find that the film is available. Yet it still could be difficult to see the film for several reasons. First, you will probably have to wade through the crowd of protestors outside the theater, and second, since it has broken box office records in Los Angeles and has huge crowds attendits 116 Kansas theaters. Nor will it appear in ing it in other cities, you might have to wait in sucessful. If they didn't get the film totally out of the theaters, they certainly did make a dent in the number of theaters which would run it. Their very protesting, however, also served to their disadvantage. But this isn't the first time this has happened.

Lots of people aren't digging this film. Yet, it is just another step in a trend of movies which have portrayed Christ in a less-thanholy light. At one time directors refrained from even showing Christ in a movie, except for a vague shot through a crowd or from far away. In more recent years, movies like "Jesus Christ Superstar" and the controversial "Je Vous Salue Marie" have shown Christ more often, and not always in a reverent light. Thus, they have been protested too. Yet, what is really wrong with these movies? Why is the religious community throwing such a fuss over depicting Christ as a man, not just a mythical superhero? Are they afraid that we won't respect a Christ who isn't omnipotent? Or are they afraid we won't continue to worship a man, who historically, was just a man who made great things

The religious community has had trouble fighting this film and others like it for several reasons. Certainly the director has the freedom of speech to depict the life of Christ in any way which he finds appropriate. It is difficult to dispute that. But also, the very furor which the community has raised over the film has caused moviegoers to flock to theaters where it is shown, causing lots of people who normally would not attend the movie to see it.

ut, maybe this is what people actually want to see - despite the publicity. In a time when many people are departing from organized religion, there must be a reason. Perhaps the younger generation has tired of worshipping an allknowing, all-seeing, omnipotent God.

Could it be that a movie director who depicted the Son of God as man, has, in a way, returned Christ to the people and made him a human, capable of loving, living, and making mistakes, yet also able to overcome them through faith?

And if so, what is the harm? It is time for overzealous religious do-gooders to quit going into hysterics whenever anything deals with Christ in an unorthodox method. Is it really worth their time to protest film that will be over in just 160 minutes when they could be out saving sinners instead?

School tackling problem with farsighted approach

Manhattan High School officials have implemented a program allowing teen-age mothers and fathers to continue their high school education.

The program provides day-care funds for needy parents, so they will not have to bear the high price of babysitters. In addition, those eligible for and enrolled in the program must take a minimum amount of child care and home economics classes to help them learn more about taking care of their

Only students who can show they cannot afford to pay for child care are eligible for the program.

The high school officials are to be commended. A problem existed, and they are trying to solve it.

The high school received $8,000 to start the program. It is now taking applications, and it is not known how many students will enroll in it. Does it encourage promiscuity in high school students? Should the government pay for the teen-agers' recklessness?

Should the school have to accommodate the students? All are good questions, but they are also shortsighted. The question is not who should have to pay for a mistake that can be blamed on society, the family, and the schools. The long-term question is what will happen to teen-age parents if they cannot continue their education. Child care is expensive. Going to high school takes eight hours a day. Being a mother or father is a full-time job. Teen-age parents do not have a chance to succeed when they are not offered support.

Not only are they unable to help themselves now, but they will be unable to help society in the future.

Schools becoming involved in child care is an appropiate and well-thought out idea. If they did not, everyone would pay the price in the end.

Christ's image hurt

Your editorial of Aug. 23 titled "Christ's image unhurt by 'Temptation' film" hurts. I am really offended.

Yes, "The Last Temptation of Christ" is under ridicule — it should be! Although you report that the film's director, Martin Scorsese, said the scene where Jesus hallucinates about having sex with Mary Magdalene is misinterpreted, his intention does not

The fact we see on the screen is that Jesus frequenting brothels. In a dream sequence, he is shown marrying Mary Magdalene and having intercourse with her as an angel is invited to watch. In another scene he tells Mary, "Woman is God's greatest work. And I worship you. God sleeps between your legs."

Other sequences imply he had a homosexual relationship with John the Babtist and show him as mentally deranged. What blasphemy! Regardless of what Scorsese says he intends, what we see is quite Yes, Jesus is tempted. The Bible shows him tempted by Satan in the desert. There is absolutely no indication that Jesus entertained any thoughts about accepting Satan's temptations. He immediately rebukes them with the word of God.

What happens when we formulate a temptation in our mind and hallucinate about it as Jesus did in this film? We sin. Jesus himself said, "But I tell you that anyone who looks at a woman lustfully has already committed adultery in his heart" (Matthew 5:28).

Thus, regardless of what the director wanted to get across, we end up seeing Jesus Christ as a sinner. But Jesus was divine and the Bible clearly states that Jesus did not sin that is not open to interpretation.

Nothing is wrong with interpreting Jesus as human, because he was a human. But he did not sin. The danger of releasing this film to non-critical religious and non-religious people is that it helps them challenge the divinity of Jesus Christ as the sinless Son of

It also molds Jesus into an image that is different from the facts given to us in the Scriptures and may therefore serve to justify one's own errant behavior. Bob Caslen

graduate in industrial engineering Bad column debut

Editor,

If Jeff Schrag's debut column of Aug. 22 is any indication of the quality of writing to come, then the Collegian's reading public is in for an uninspiring semester. In his rush to be cosmopolitan, Schrag succeeds only in being sexist and sadly predictable. His inane analysis of a newspaper as woman/wife/ mistress is laughably shallow as well as offensive to women. Metaphors need some semblance of believability to be effective and Schrag's self-conscious attempt at originality is strained and ultimately empty. The goal of his column may have been to increase reader input, but his comparisons do nothing except alienate those he tries to reach.

Drought relief legislation receives

By Scott Miller

Special Projects Editor Although Rep. Jim Slattery, D-

Kan., said he thinks the newly signed drought relief package is "a generous program," some farm analysts concerned with the plight of the family farm say the bill may be "too little, too late.'

In a news release titled "Good News for Kansas Farmers," Slattery cited several provisions of the law and explained how he thought it would benefit farmers.

Tim Cosgrove, district aide for by-county, thereby directing Slattery, said much of the law such as a provision setting a $100,000 limit on the total amount of benefits any one producer may receive - is specifically designed to help small- and medium-sized farmers

"Congress has established a desire to assist the family farmers and Congressman Slattery fully supports that," Cosgrove said.

Furthermore, Cosgrove said aid will be distributed on an individual producer basis, rather than county-drought-relief funds only to those farmers who need it and not to every farmer in a drought-stricken county. Some farm policy analysts, however, such as Jerry Hansen at the anything, it's been mostly half-way measures," he said. Although Hansen agreed that aid should be based on an individual rather than county-by-county basis, he criticized the legislation because it is based on financial damage and not financial need.

Large corporate farms could suffer greater damage, yet still remain financially sound, while small and medium-sized farms could suffer relatively small monetary damage before being in danger of bankruptcy, he said.

Hansen also criticized the law for uniformly increasing dairy price supports. He said the across-the-board increases could direct funds to areas relatively, or completely, unaffected by drought. With so few droughtrelief dollars available, Hansen said he it is important the money reach those who truly need it.

The current issue of In These Times (Aug. 17-30) reports that the relief package allocates $3.9 billion in drought assistance although the projected loss for farmers is $20

Behind much of the criticism of the new law are questions about how concerned the federal government is with the future of small- and medium-sized farms.

In an Aug. 17 article in the San Francisco Chronicle, Kevin Danaher, an analyst at the Institute for Food and Development Policy, argues that the federal tax structure, government subsidies and government credit deals favor larger farms. This is why nearly half of all farm income goes to the top 1.2 percent of all farms, he Danaher reports that about 2,000 farmers, mostly from small- and medium-size farms, are forced out of business every week.

Cornelia Flora, professor of social anthropology and social work, said that while she understood the importance of helping people in times of natural disasters, she was concerned about getting assistance to those who need it.

"I do think there's still some pork on there that's designed to benefit some privileged people," she said.

Danaher reports that 7 percent of all farms in the United States controlled more than 50 percent of the nation's farmland as of 1982.

Moe Johnson, a statistician at the State Board of Agriculture, said the general trend in Kansas is similar.

In 1982, the last year for which figures are available, one percent of the farms in Kansas, those with more than $500,000 in sales, accounted for 46 percent of all agricultural sales in Kansas. By contrast, those farms with less than $40,000 in sales accounted for 10 percent of all agricultural sales.

Court motion filed; prison suit pending

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - A Lawrence attorney representing four inmates at the Kansas Correctional Institute in Lansing filed a motion Wednesday seeking to intervene in a lawsuit against the Department of Corrections alleging unconstitutional conditions.

Mary Coffman, representing four inmates at KCIL, wants U.S. District Judge Richard Rogers of Topeka to allow them to intervene in a pending prison overcrowding lawsuit on behalf of all the inmates at KCIL.

They are asking Rogers to make them plaintiffs in a reopened 1978 lawsuit brought by inmates of the Kansas State Penitentiary because of overcrowding there. The penitentiary also is in Lansing, but is a different facility.

A similar request to intervene in the 1978 suit was made by inmates at the Kansas State Industrial Reformatory at Hutchinson, but Rogers has not yet ruled on that motion.

Coffman alleges KCIL lacks proper medical facilities and inmates do not have access to mental health programs, work opportunities, vocational and educational programs and are confined in dilapidated living units. A Sept. 2 court date has been set to bring together attorneys involved in the case.

Crystal

Mystic Power of Quartz

Lin Martin, owner of Krystallos in Aggieville, admires one of many crystals offered at the store, which sells books about the healing arts.

Crystal. Its beauty is astounding. Its mystery is intriguing. It is dazzling. It is

But can crystals help heal our wounds? Can they help us lose weight? Can they make us better lovers?

You might answer, "Yes," if you belong to a growing movement in non-traditional, non-scientific medicine that professes a belief in the healing powers of crystal.

Celebrities such as Shirley MacLaine, Joan Jett and Lisa Bonet are members of this movement that has been featured on the cover of Time magazine and has made some far-reaching, if not far out, claims about crystals and their properties.

Various assertions have been made that meditating with crystals can help people stop smoking, cure their depression, bring them prosperity, develop their minds, and, according to Dael Walker, author of "The Crystal Book," a two-inch crystal clamped on a car's fuel intake line can even improve gas mileage. Devotees also suggest that different colored crystals can be programmed to respond to different energy points, or chakras, on the body. One technique of crystal therapy, which involves laying various types of stones over the chakras in patterns, is similar to acupuncture or acupressure.

There may, however, be more to the recent crystal craze than meets the average skeptic's eye.

Leon Rappoport, professor of psychology, said the possibility that crystals provide healing properties can be argued on two

The first and more scientifically credible argument is that an adamant belief in the healing power of crystal is an example of the placebo effect, he said.

The placebo effect, Rappoport said, has been demonstrated scientifically by telling experimental subjects they would receive tranquilizers, stimulants, or other mindaltering substances. Instead, the subjects were given sugar pills, or placebos. The placebo effect is said to exist when the subjects begin to mimic the effects of the substance they thought they were taking.

In the case of crystals, the placebo effect the crystal will provide for them.

"It can be a very powerful thing," Rappoport said. "When someone has a deep sense of confidence in a medium, that belief, in itself, can sometimes bring about a change."

The second argument is simply that something is special about crystal.

Lin Martin owns Krystallos, a crystal boutique catering to a market that believes in this "life force," and in crystal's ability to transmit it.

"I would say that 60 percent of our customers are interested in the powers of crystal," Martin said. "Of that 60 percent, 30 percent are serious adherents."

Crystals come in all sizes and shapes. They are used in technology for making microphones and computers, and some believe they have the power to heal.

Almost every culture has a special place reserved for crystal. Gemstones have long been used to adorn the clothing and jewelry of royalty, and crystal glassware has been a coveted item for centuries.

Also, crystals are an integral part of the highest forms of modern technology. Lenses for microscopes and telescopes are often ground from quartz, and quartz crystal is essential in manufacturing microphones, record players, computers and wristwatches.

Crystals have been shown to transmit and receive energy. To suppose that crystals might aid in transmitting an alleged "life force" seems logical and not entirely beyond reason, Rappoport said.

Martin originally started Krystallos about two years ago as simply a rock shop, but has now expanded the store to include a line of more than 20 books explaining different methods used in crystal therapy.

Krystallos specializes in hard-to-find crystals such as sugilite, the third eye activator which opens the connection between mind and body; rhodocrosite, crystal that unites the conscious and subconscious; and kunzite, the heart opener that awakens highest heart awareness.

When picking out a crystal or gemstone, Martin suggested people choose stones that appeal to them, and to forget any preconceived notions about which stones they might need.

"We have had people look at stones with their hearts telling them to pick one stone, and their heads another," Martin said. "Invariably, they will go with what their heads tells them, and then they come back a few days later wanting to exchange."

The recent growth in the popularity of crystals and crystal therapy might be attributed to several sources.

Believers suggest that the growth in the crystal movement is part of people's increased desire to expand the consciousness and awareness of their lives.

Psychologists such as Rappoport, however, tend to believe the increased faith in crystals often results from a lack of faith in mod-

Regardless, hardened skeptics are likely to never be swayed into believing that crystals are anything more than beautiful. Some might say that the crystal movement is just another fad or scheme to separate gullible people from their excess cash. This is, after all, the country that invented snake oil, the chain letter and the lucky brass ring that brings riches to the door it hangs from - all for only $3.

But whether it is fad, fashion, fact or farce, one has to admit, at the very least, that a goodsized hunk of crystal looks better sitting on your bedstand than a bottle of snake oil.

MIAMI - Dade County's approval of a whopping 28 percent teacher salary increase and a larger role for teachers in school decisionmaking has brought a flood of applications from around the country, officials say.

News of the new contract approved by the Dade school board last month has "spread like wildfire," said Terence Garner, director of teacher recruitment in Dade County.

"My desk is literally covered with messages from people calling and wanting applications or copies of the contract sent," said Garner.

"We have enough candidates so principals can look at five to eight people for every one position," Garner said. "We promised the school board we're going to hire the cream of the crop and now we're getting it."

Last-minute hiring is under way and is expected to continue even after classes begin Monday in the Dade County's system, which includes the city of Miami. With about 255,000 students and more than 15,200 teachers, it is the nation's fourth-largest.

There is also an avalanche of applications in Rochester, N.Y., where the city school district attracted national attention last fall with a contract that boosted salaries and gave teachers more responsibility.

When we go to college recruiting fairs, we have lines of people waiting to talk to us," said Ed Delaney, director of teacher personnel for the

The three-year contract in Rochester raised salaries an average 40 percent over three years and offered some teachers who accept difficult assignments and work longer hours the chance to make $70,000 a year by the third year of the contract.

In Dade County, average teacher pay will rise to $33,066.

Officials oppose mandated tests

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - School officials urged a legislative panel today not to use the current Kansas Minimum Competency Tests to determine if students should be promoted or graduated from high school.

"We have always supported the continuation of the tests to identify students who need remediation,' John Koepke, director of the Kansas Associaton of School Boards, told the Legislative Educational Planning Committee.

But he said school board members in Kansas "adamantly" oppose an additional requirement that students pass the exam before they could be promoted from one grade to the next or before they receive high school diplomas.

The tests are currently given to all Kansas students in both public and private schools in the second. fourth, sixth eighth and 10th grades. The Legislature mandated the tests in 1980, but that mandate expires next year. If the tests are to continue to be given to students, the Legislature will have to renew the mandate in the next session, which starts next January.

Bert Jackson, a testing specialist for the state Department of Education, said 23 states use a test. to determine if students should either be promoted or graduated.

'There's been no increase in the number of states using tests for these purposes in recent years," she told the committee.

In Texas, for example, between 900 and 1,200 students a year are not awarded high school diplomas because they don't pass a competency test.

If Kansas adopts a program that would require students to pass a statewide test before going on to the next grade or before graduating from high school, they must be given ample notice, she said, of at least four years. Otherwise, school districts can run into legal problems if they hold students back because of their test results, she added.

The tests currently measure overall student performance, she said, but are not designed to be used for "high stakes decisions," such as graduation.

John Poggio, associate dean for research at the School of Education at the University of Kansas, told the committee some school administrators already are using the test results to determine high school graduation, although that is not what the tests are for. He also said a recent survey shows that 46 percent of the school principals and 33 percent of the superintendents endorse the idea of passing a statewide test as a requirement for high school graduation.

Another 36 percent of the principals and 30 percent of the superintendents endorse using the test as a factor in promoting a student from one grade to the next.

"Grade promotion and graduation should not be based on just one test," said Chuck Tillman, secretary-treasurer of the Kansas-National Education Association and a high school math teacher in Ottawa.

He also said the tests should be given in the spring, rather than the fall, so classroom teachers would be able to use the results to identify students who need remediation.

"We question whether the tests should be continued," he said. "I don't think the results are being used as well as they could be."

Ken Rogg, representing Schools for Quality Education, which consists of largely rural school districts, said smaller schools don't need the tests to determine which students need extra help.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen criticized Republican rival Dan Quayle's voting record on Wednesday and said the nation can't risk "youthful indiscretion" so close to the Oval Office. Quayle touted his work on jobs legislation and defended his military record before a cheering National Guard audience.

"Dan Quayle doesn't run away from a fight," the Indiana senator told a group of 1,000 former and present Guard members in St.

George Bush campaigned in California with President Reagan, who said Quayle "stands for the same principles" as he and the vice president.

Democrat Michael Dukakis received an endorsement from the AFL-CIO in Washington, and charged that the legacy of the Reagan administration was one of more jobs but lower family income.

The two campaigns also to that kind of heat."

sparred over the timing of campaign debates for the fall. Dukakis aide Paul Brountas said it was "inexcusable" for Bush to decline dates of Sept. 8 and 14 established by organizations interested in staging the confrontations. Bush campaign chief James Baker said, "It is unlikely that a debate can occur prior to Sept. 20."

But the political spotlight was uncharacteristically fixed on campaign understudies, particularly on the 41-year-old Quayle and the controversy about his Vietnam era stint in the National Guard.

Democrat Bentsen told Southern legislators meeting in Lexington, Ky., that Quayle had said earlier in the week that "youthful indiscretion" initially led him to vote against Senate legislation granting Cabinet-level status to the Veterans Administration.

At a news conference following his speech, Bentsen noted Quayle's reversal on the VA bill and said, "You've got to stand up

Iran, Iraq peace

By The Associated Press

GENEVA - Iran and Iraq begin peace talks under U.N. sponsorship today after a long, devastating war that was suspended last weekend by a truce arranged under terms of a yearold Security Council resolution.

The adversaries continued trading charges of cease-fire violations as their delegations flew to Geneva for the opening session, but U.N. officials said the situation on the front seemed calm.

These will be the first direct talks since the war began in September 1980 with several border skirmishes followed by an Iraqi invasion. Up to 1 million people have been killed and damage totals hundreds of billions of dollars. Negotiations will be held at the Palais des Nations, the complex housing the U.N. offices in Geneva. Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. secretary-general, will act as

leads Iraq's delegation, made a brief arrival statement repeating doubts about Iran's acceptance of Security Council Resolution 598, which was announced July 18.

"The intention of Iraq is clear," he said, referring to a goal of a "comprehensive, lasting and stable settlement. What is unclear is the meaning and concept of Iran's acceptance."

Asked about the situation along the 730-mile border, he said the "Iranians tried to move the cease-fire line but measures were taken to push them back."

Aziz did not elaborate and U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said he knew of "no major problem" in the Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran sent a formal complaint of an alleged Iraqi violation, but was not scheduled to arrive until later and Iranian sources said he probably would not meet with reporters.

Provisions of the Security Council resolution include a cease-fire, withdrawal to recognized borders, prisoner exchange, peace talks and an impartial investigation of which side started the war.

Perez de Cuellar met the president of the International Committee of the Red Cross, Cornelio Sommaruga, to discuss repatriation of the more than 80,000 prisoners of war. At least 50,000 of them are Iraqis held by Resolution 598 says prisoners should be freed "without delay after the cessation of active hostilities,' but the Red Cross says it will organize the repatriation only if it can determine in each case whether the prisoner wants to return home.

Both sides have said many prisoners refuse repatriation. Iranian reports claim about 20,000 Iraqi prisoners have requested political

Any ruling on guilt in the war would affect the question of reparations. Official Iranian assessments have put the cost of war damage at $350 billion. Iraq has not given an

The longest-term problem is expected to be the "internationally recognized boundaries" mentioned in the withdrawal provision of Resolution 598.

Iran says that means the border agreed upon in a 1975 treaty made with Iraq by the late Shah Reza Pahlavi, who was overthrown in February 1979 by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's fundamentalist Moslem revolution. It was designed to end centuries of disputes, especially over the frontier line in the Shatt al-Arab, the 125-mile-long confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers that is Iraq's only sea outlet.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq repudiated the treaty five days before launching the invasion Sept. 22, 1980, to try to gain control of the #### illegal Simulcast betting

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - The Kansas parimutuel wagering act does not permit electronic wagering to be conducted between licensed racetracks, Attorney General Robert T. Stephan said Wednesday.

Electronic wagering, or simulcasting, involves individuals present at one licensed racetrack facility betting on a race in another licensed racetrack. In states where simulcasting is permitted, such as Colorado, people at one track can watch races at the another track on a movie screen or large television.

off-track betting is conducted between a licensed racetrack facility and a location which is not a racetrack facility," Stephan explained in his nonbinding opinion, requested by

Sen. Ben Vidricksen, R-Salina. "Off-track betting is clearly prohibited in Kansas," Stephan said. "It is less clear whether simulcasting is also prohibited."

Stephan said state law requires that all persons wagering shall be present within the confines of the racetrack facility. He said the Kansas law intends to limit wagering to occasions where live races and persons wagering on them are present both in time and place at the approved racetrack facility.

'It is our opinion, based on the above, that simulcasting is not a form of wagering permissible under the Kansas pari-mutuel racing act," Stephan wrote.

U.S. halting AIDS payments

Federal payments for the drug AZT are running out for about 6,000 AIDS patients nationwide, and many may be forced into poverty to qualify for the lifeprolonging drug under Medicaid, officials said Wednesday.

await Wildcats, Parrish

By Chris Wilhelm Sports Writer

With a projected starting quarterback sidelined for at least four weeks with a shoulder injury, and a relatively young team, Coach Stan Parrish told Big Eight Conference Skywriters on Wednesday that he has a tough task ahead of him as he enters his third season at K-State.

Parrish has toned down his appraisals after last season, when he predicted at least four Wildcat victories only to finish 0-10-1.

The team will be bigger, stronger and faster than last year's squad, but the squad's youth will be a major question in how the season goes, Parrish said.

"We're a very young football team," Parrish said. "I made out a tentative travel list last night of 60 guys that would go to Tulsa, and we've got 25 redshirt-freshmen and freshmen in that group, which is good and bad.

"They make a good play and then they run the wrong way the next play. They're like little kids just starting in school. You can't expect too much from them initially."

Reflecting on what it would take to have a successful season, Parrish said his team would have to play "above their heads" to have a chance against teams such as Iowa and Tulane, not to mention the rigors of the Big Eight.

We might play at 100 percent and never get it done this season. If we play as good as we can against some of these teams, we may still not win. We have to get some breaks,

"I was not pleased with the effort that the team put forth every week last year. This year I'm a lot happier with the effort they have been showing in practice. I just want to be pleased with our effort every week," he Parrish was obviously pleased with his recruiting class, calling it his best ever. The squad's youth also lends itself to a positive team attitude, he said.

"With youth comes a lot of enthusiasm. Many of our players were not associated with our 0-10-1 season last year, and most come from winning teams," Parrish said.

Despite the loss of projected starting quarterback Paul Watson, the 'Cats will run a multiple offense this year. The team will rotate as many as seven running backs while trying to take advantage of the pass as often as possible.

Parrish, who prefers the passing attack, said K-State can not win running the football.

"I don't think we can win being conventional, so we are going to have to be unconventional," Parrish said. "I think that we can move (the ball) around and I think the kids feel we have a chance (to win) that way. "To some degree, that's why we've had a cloak of secrecy around what we've done since last spring, because I think we need that. I think we need the element of surprise,"

K-State's biggest strength lies in its offensive line. But that could easily turn into a weakness because the depth at those slots is questionable.

"If we keep people off of our quarterback's back for a second or a second and a half, we will have a chance," Parrish said.

It will be important for the 'Cats to get off to a good start this season, Parrish said, as last year's team never recovered from the seasonopening loss to Austin Peay.

"The Tulsa game is the most important game right now only because it is the first game," Parrish said.

Parrish insists he is under no pressure from the administration.

"But obviously, we've got to win some football games," he said. "I also think they know me well enough that if we don't, maybe I'd take up golf."

Two players injured in practice

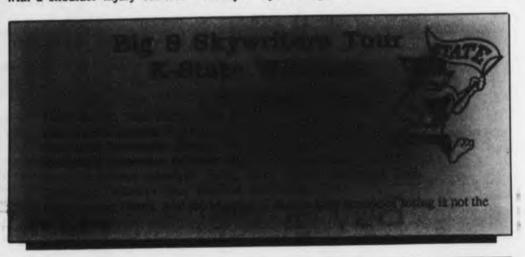

By The Associated Press

MANHATTAN - K-State conducted routine football drills in full pads Wednesday with Carl Straw working as the first-string quarterback.

Straw is the top candidate to replace Paul Watson, who is expected to miss a month with a shoulder injury suffered Tuesday.

Two players suffered minor injuries during the practice session Wednesday but were expected to return on Saturday. Junior wide receiver Greg Washington aggravated a hamstring injury and senior linebacker Randy Koch bruised his knee.

The Wildcats were to take Thursday off to watch films of Tulsa, their opponent in the opener Sept. 3.

Football coach Stan Parrish thinks over a reporter's question during the Big Eight Conference Skywriters tour Wednesday afternoon at KSU Stadium. Parrish said he is opitimistic about the upcoming schedule but realizes it won't be easy.

Combatant lost in QB battle

By Tom Morris Sports Editor

Redshirt-freshman quarterback

Paul Watson could never be accused of wimping out. He will take hits with the best of them, similar to oftinjured Chicago Bears' quarterback Jim McMahon.

"I've never been one to get hit once and then go straight for the ground," Watson said. "I've always fought for that extra yard or two because it might mean the difference in a ballgame."

But Watson's enthusiasm cost him the starting job for K-State's season opener Sept. 3 at Tulsa. After tearing a ligament in his right shoulder durnow has to set his sights on the Big Eight Conference opener Oct. 8 against Missouri.

Watson - who passed for more than 5,000 yards at Park Hill (Mo.) High School - will miss at least four weeks with his injury, leaving the position open for Carl Straw or Gary Swim. Chris Cobb moved into the No. 3 spot.

Although it is a big loss, Coach Stan Parrish said the depth at quarterback will carry the Wildcats through until Watson completes his rehabilitation.

"Our club has been run with a lot of different quarterbacks since last spring. If there's one place on our team that we have any depth, thank ing Tuesday's scrimmage, Watson God it's at that position," Parrish

For Straw, a 6-foot-1, 210-pound sophomore from Fair Lawn, N.J., Watson's injury could result in his first college start. But he said Watson's injury, and his elevation to first-string status, has not added any pressure.

"That's the game of football - the pressure's always there," he said. 'When you're the No. 2 quarterback, you always have to think you're No. 1. You have to know what your job is in case something like this happens."

Swim offered advice for Watson because he went through a similar situation while at Snow (Utah) Junior College two seasons ago.

"My philosophy about life is that when you're at the top of the hill, can do about (the injury) now."

something will knock you down. It happens to everybody, you've just got to learn to live with it," Swim

Parrish told the Big Eight Conference Skywriters on Wednesday that K-State's offensive scheme will have to be somewhat modified. With Straw and Swim, the 'Cats will stick to the drop-back passing attack. With Watson, who Parrish compared to Oklahoma State University's quarterback sensation Mike Gundy, the offense could be more flexible in its passing attack.

But that is a point Watson said he is not concerned with at this time.

"I just have to keep my confidence up," Watson said. "There's nothing I

Ex-Wildcat Jordan to play at Arrowhead

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Phoenix will attempt to avoid a winless preseason Thursday when the Cardinals meet the Kansas City Chiefs in their first return trip to Missouri since moving from St. Louis.

Phoenix, 0-3, and Kansas City, 2-0-1, are each coming off less than inspiring performances. The Cardinals had trouble holding on to the ball in a 19-16 overtime loss to Minnesota Sunday while the Chiefs blew a lead and allowed themselves to be tied 21-21 by the Green Bay Packers.

The game also marks a homecoming of sorts for Tony Jordan, the fifthround draft choice of Phoenix from K-State who has began to inspire comparisons with former Cardinals back Ottis Anderson.

"It's a good compliment to me," said Jordan, who led K-State in rushing his last two seasons and who now wears Anderson's old No. 32. "I don't think I'm as a good as he is right now, but hopefully in the next couple of years or so, I can get as good as he was. It's a compliment to be talked about in the same sentence yards in a game against Seattle and 72 yards against New Orleans, scoring three touchdowns.

A sore knee kept Jordan out of the game against Minnesota in which Cardinals quarterbacks Neil Lomax and Cliff Stoudt each threw two interceptions.

Lomax was two of 11 for 25 yards in the first quarter and left the game in the third quarter after completing 12 of 30 passes for 128 yards. Stoudt fumbled with less than two minutes to go in overtime to set up the Vikings winning field goal.

Special teams play cost the Chiefs. The Packers ran back the first punt 89 yards for a score, and the Chiefs went on to average just 27.1 yards on 10

Lewis Colbert, who finished the night with a 2-yard punt on a bad snap to set up Green Bay's tying touchdown, was released Tuesday. Kelly Goodburn will be the Chiefs punter.

"We've got to find the guys who can get the job done," said Ed Beckman, the Chiefs special teams coach.

'Cats' Richmond 'will not be cut' from U.S. squad

By Bill Lang Sports Writer

DENVER, Colo. - The Big Eight Conference was two-thirds successful as two of the three conference members on the U.S. Olympic Finalists basketball team was a hit against the NBA select team Wednesday night in McNichols Arena.

K-State's Mitch Richmond had 11 points and University of Kansas' Danny Manning had 12 as the Olympians defeated an NBA select team, 105-103, in overtime.

Iowa State's Jeff Grayer, the third player on the 14-man Olympic roster, played just five minutes in the second half and scored three points.

Richmond, who averaged 22.6 points per game in leading the Wildcats to the "Great Eight" in last year's NCAA postseason tournament, drew praise from both Olympic coach John Thompson of Georgetown and the Los Angeles Lakers' Michael Cooper.

Thompson said he was pleased with the run-and-gun offense of the Olympic hopefuls as well as the play of Richmond.

"This kind of game was Mitch's favorite in practice," Thompson said. "He was known as a half-court player, but he showed that he can run-and-gun with the best."

Cooper, a six-time alldefensive player in the NBA, was equally pleased with the 6-foot-5 forward from Fort Lauderdale,

"He's going to be good in the NBA. He plays hard-nosed defense and I like that in a guy," Cooper said.

players going to Seoul, South Korea. Thompson must trim his roster to 12 players and two alternates by Sept. 3. "I'm not sure who's going to get cut, but (Richmond's) not one of them," Thompson said.

An ankle injury and the "Mile-High Altitude" at Denver left Richmond breathing hard after Wednesday's practice session.

"(Preparing for the Olympics) has been a lot tougher than K-State's practices, but my ankle is getting better and I think I'll be all right," Richmond said.

Richmond was also greeted by several Wildcat fans present at McNichols Arena.

As for the rest of the U.S. squad, they got their first taste of tall timber Wednesday. With players such as 6-10 Danny Schayes and 6-10 Wayne Cooper of the Denver Nuggets, and 7-5 center Mark Eaton of the Utah Jazz, it was obvious the NBA had the heighth advantage.

The NBA team jumped out to a 13-4 lead early in the first half until the Olympians went on a 20-5 tear and built a 46-38 halftime advantage. Richmond started the Olympians' run in the first half by stealing the ball from Denver's Alex English and canning a 20-foot jumper.

Pittsburgh's Charles Smith led the Olympic Finalists with 20 points. David Robinson tied Manning with 12 points.

The Olympians have lost only one time in seven games this summer to the NBA select squads. when they dropped a 90-83 decision to the professionals in Auburn Hills, Mich.

The tour concludes with a match against the pros in Las Vegas and a date with Athletes in Action in Los Angeles.

TOPEKA — The state Supreme Court said in a unanimous opinion issued Wednesday that state Rep. Joan Adam of Atchison can serve on the state Supreme Court Nominating Commission until she is admitted to the bar.

Attorney General Robert T. Stephan questioned Adam's right to continue serving on the commission, since she holds a temporary permit to practice law in Kansas. She occupies temporary permit made her a lawyer and disqualified her.

The formal opinion rejecting Stephan's argument was written by Justice Tyler Lockett. It is an elaboration of a decision announced June 22.

Adam got her law degree from Washburn University last December and applied for and received a temporary permit to practice law in January. However, she has not passed the bar examination or been admitted to a non-lawyer position on the com- the bar. She has been working in the mission, and Stephan argued the law office of J. David Farris in Atchison.

> Adam, a Democrat, has accused Stephan, a Republican, of being politically motivated to challenge her qualification to sit on the commission.

> Stephan's office said the matter was brought to the attorney general's attention by Rep. Joe Knopp of Manhattan, the GOP majority leader of the House.

U.S. trade deficit decreases

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The U.S. trade deficit shrank 14.9 percent from April through June, helped by a record high level of exports and the first quarterly decline in imports in three years, the government reported Wednesday.

The Commerce Department said the difference between what America spends and sells abroad narrowed to a deficit of $29.9 billion in the second quarter, compared to a deficit of $35.2 billion in the first three months of 1988.

That was the biggest quarterly improvement in more than five years, and continued a trend which began after the deficit hit a record $41.2 billion in the October-December quarter.

For the first six months of this year, the trade deficit, on a balance of payments basis, has been running at an annual rate of $130.2 billion, down almost 20 percent from the record $160.3 billion deficit suffered in 1987.

The new figures confirmed an improvement already evident in the department's monthly merchandise trade reports. Those figures showed the trade deficit declining 12.8 percent to $32.6 billion in the second quarter, compared to $37.4 billion in the first quarter.

Fires ravage Yellowstone

By The Associated Press

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — A fire that has charred a 35-mile swath across the heart of Yellowstone National Park threatened one of the park's most picturesque areas and forced out hundreds of visitors, officials said Wednesday.

The rapidly burning North Fork fire, which started July 23 in Idaho's Targhee National Forest, grew to nearly 100,000 acres and forced the closure Wednesday morning of the Canyon area.

The fire was roughly two miles to the west of the area, which is located a bit north of the center of the 60-mile-square park.

Elsewhere, crews southeast of Helena, Mont., said they expected to contain the 37,600-acre Warm Springs Creek blaze by Friday evening; and in Idaho, air tankers and fire crews fought a surging, 1,000-acre blaze on the slopes of Hells Canyon, the nation's deepest

"My children are all excited about it," said tourist Allen Jones, of Staffordshire, England. "It didn't detract from our visit at all."

By midmorning Wednesday, only firefighters and reporters remained at Canyon, and the buzzing of chain saws filled the air as crews hurriedly removed downed trees and undergrowth. Smoke partially obscured the view of the 308-foot Lower Falls and 109-foot Upper Falls.

Fire officials said they hoped to keep the North Fork fire burning to the north of the Canyon area, but feared that embers could bring the blaze right into Canyon.

Michelle Rotter, a park service public information officer, said the North Fork fire could then conceivably burn from Canyon and into the area blackened by the Clover Mist fire some miles to the east, in effect cutting the park virtually in Fires also posed threats both north and south of the park.

To the south in Grand Teton National Park and the Bridger-Teton National Forest, firefighters dwarfed by 150-foot walls of flame battled to keep the 12,600-acre Huck fire from crossing into Yellowstone about 11/2 miles away. The fire had more than doubled in size from Tuesday to Wednesday.

Just over the Montana border north of the park, a top-level firemanagement team from Alaska arrived Wednesday to take over the 26,000-acre Storm Creek fire. The blaze is burning out of control in a wilderness area seven miles north of Cooke City.

Near Helena, crews had expected to contain the 37,600-acre Warm Springs Creek blaze Wednesday night, but pushed the deadline back two days because of one troublesome area along the fire lines, fire information officer Bob Krepps said. The 2-week-old fire has burned a dozen

Air Midwest changing service

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Air Midwest, the top commuter airline at Kansas City International Airport, said it would stop feeding Eastern Airlines and would hook up with Braniff Airlines.

The service, which will be called Braniff Express, begins Sept. 15 and will expand Braniff's Kansas City commuter operations, which already includes two feeder airlines. Air Midwest is based in Wichita, Kan.

Air Midwest's KCI flights have fed Eastern since November 1985 as Eastern Express. But Eastern will scrap its KCI hub next Wednesday, dropping all but six of its daily departures.

Robert L. Pridd, Air Midwest's chief executive officer and president, said the partnership with Braniff niff's nine gates at Terminal B. would bolster his airline's KCI traffic that had been damaged by Eastern's plans.

No big changes are expected in the commuter's operation beyond a previously announced plan to drop eight of 85 weekday departures next Wednesday.

Roger Hardacre, Braniff's Midwest airports director, said he was working with Air Midwest to arrange a shuttle service for passengers connecting between Air Midwest's two gates in Terminal A at KCI and Bra-

Donald F. McGuire, Braniff's spokesman in Dallas, said the airline's other feeder partnerships at KCI, with Capitol Air Lines and Midcontinent Airlines, would continue for the time being.

In July, Braniff tried to break a contract with Capitol.

EPA to propose new trash rules

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The Environmental Protection Agency announced proposed rules Wednesday that officials said would force nearly every municipal trash and garbage dump in the nation to take steps to protect the environment.

The plan, which officials said may not be popular with local governments, would require all of the nation's municipal solid waste landfills to install monitoring equipment to detect pollution of groundwater supplies.

Official shied away from precise cost estimates, but one agency scenario put the pricetage at $800 million per year, or $11 per household.

The proposal, billed as EPA's first major regulatory step in the area of household trash landfills, would require the cleaning up of dumps found to be leaking contaminants into underground aquifers.

The draft regulations would force operators to put waterproof covers over dumps when they are closed and would set restrictions on where a new dump can be located.

Many dumps that open after the rules take effect, probably not before 1991, would have to install bottom liners to prevent leakage and systems to collect the polluting liquids found said J. Winston Porter, assistant EPA administrator for solid waste and emergency response. "In some cases, people are going to have to spend a lot of money."

The plan would leave many compliance details up to states, so long as a dump did not impose any greater danger to humans than a 1-in-10,000 chance of contracting cancer from water contaminated by a dump's

Porter said the states would have flexibility to operate their own compliance programs with an underlying proviso: "We don't care what you do, but you cannot leak."

He said the proposal would apply to an estimated 6,000 solid waste landfills - 78 percent of them owned by local governments — that handle about 80 percent of the 160 million tons of household refuse produced each year.

He told a news conference that at least one of every four municipal dumps is believed to be violating one or more state groundwaterprotection standards.

Porter said EPA expects to take a proposal before making it final. Dumps would then have 18 more months before they had to comply with the requirements.

Freedom near for hostages

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon - The 18 foreign hostages held in Lebanon will be freed soon, a leading Beirut newspaper reported Thursday.

Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite will be the first one released, the daily As-Safir said. "The countdown has begun," it said in a oneparagraph report attributed to unidentified Western diplomatic sources in Moslem west Beirut.

The leftist newspaper, based in west Beirut, has good connections with Moslem groups that may have information on the hostages, most of whom are believed held by pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem zealots.

Rumors of an impending release of hostages have been frequent around the Middle East since Iran and Iraq agreed to a cease-fire and peace talks.

However, the pro-Iranian group believed to hold most of the hostages issued a statement last week denying those reports.

'The release of Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite will be the first step" to freeing the hostages, the paper said without saying when that would happen.

Waite, 48, envoy of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the most Rev. Robert Runcie, disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, after leaving his west Beirut hotel to negotiate the release of American hostages held by the pro-Iranian Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War.

An anonymous caller purporting to speak for Islamic Jihad told a news agency in Beirut last week that Waite was alive and "We might release him if the government of (Prime Minister Margaret) Thatcher showed good intentions."

However, Islamic Jihad had not claimed Waite's abduction. It also had insisted in the past that it would communicate only in writing and accompanied by a photograph of one of the hostages to prove the message's authenticity.

Student Senate Chairman Doug Folk announced Thursday that the University administration is considering a significant increase in tuition.

Folk also expressed dissatisfaction with the possibility of the KSU Athletic Department gaining more control over Bramlage Coliseum, presently under the administration of University Facilities.

"We're facing the possibility that we're going to lose the multi-purpose uses of the coliseum," he said.

"The Athletic Department doesn't have the ability to get the type of performers that Facilities does," Folk said. "We're going to be doing a disservice to the students who were guaranteed it would be a multipurpose building."

Charlie Thomas, Bramlage Coliseum director, told Senate the Coliseum will be finished in 35 days, "opening Oct. 1 no matter what."

JASTRZEBIE, Poland - About 100 police vehicles equipped with water cannon surrounded the strikebound July Manifesto coal mine in southwestern Poland late Thursday, opposition sources said.

Earlier Thursday, strikes crumbled in the surrounding, economically strategic coal region of Silesia and steelworkers gave up an on-again, off-again strike in the Nowa Huta mill outside Krakow.

An estimated 600 strikers are holed up in the July Manifesto mine. Robert Kozak, a spokesman for the outlawed Solidarity free trade union movement, said security forces encircled the pit about 10 p.m. (4 p.m. EDT). Strikers occupied the mine 10 days ago, setting off a wave of strikes across this communist Jastrzebie. Provincial officials decreed Thursday that non-residents are not permitted in the town, causing a general evacuation of journalists.

A combination of skillful propaganda, displays of strength and limited use of force appeared to be winding down Poland's worst strike situation since martial law was imposed in 1981. The workers demanded higher wages, better working conditions and legalization of Solidarity.

Strikes continued Thursday along Poland's Baltic coast.

One strike committee member said riot police beat at least six miners when they forced strikers to evacuate three paralyzed mines Wednesday night, including the Borynia mine in Jastrzebie and the Morcinek mine in nearby Kaszyce.

But at least 20 people remained barricaded underground at the third mine, the Mosczenica, witnesses

Racial changes impress speaker

By The Collegian Staff

In the fall of 1953, John Slaughter, then a sophomore in electrical engineering, went to Aggieville with his roommate for a bite to eat. As they prepared to order, the proprietor said, "You know we don't serve negroes here."

In the fall of 1988, Slaughter, now president of Occidental College, returned to his alma mater Thursday to deliver the first All-University Convocation of the 1988-89 school year in McCain Auditorium.

Addressing a group of more than 700 faculty and students, Slaughter said diversity takes the racial and gender composition of the faculty into account as well as that of the students, adding that he is very impressed with what K-State has done in terms of campus racial addressed.

"I am beginning to sense a change in mood and a growing sense of enthusiasm on the part of college and university administrations, faculties and students to rectify matters, to raise their sights, to remove from our campuses those attitudes, policies and practices that depreciate the value of higher education," he said.

Slaughter was to receive an honorary doctorate degree from the College of Engineering at commencement ceremonies May 14, but he was unable to attend. Prior to Slaughter's address, Donald Rathbone, dean of engineering, and President Jon Wefald presented Slaughter with the degree.

"I've had the pleasure of receiving several in the past, but none has meant so much as receiving one from K-State," Slaughter said.

K-State alumnus John Slaughter awaits his introduction as the first All-University Convocation speaker of the fall semester.

Spy ring lasts 10 years

FRANKFURT, West Germany — A former U.S. Army sergeant arrested in West Germany headed an international spy ring that sold NATO defense secrets to the Soviets at high prices for a decade, officials said Thursday.

"We can't exclude the possibility that millions of dollars are involved," said Alexander Prechtel, spokesman for the chief federal prosecutor's office.

A second American soldier who was not identified received a "five-figure sum" of money for supplying the ring with military secrets, said Chief Federal Prosecutor Kurt Rebmann, and Prechtel said two Hungarian-born brothers arrested Tuesday in Sweden with cipher keys, coded messages and radios were a part of the ring.

It was too early to know how much damage was caused to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Prechtel said in an interview, but the ring is believed to have stolen documents concerning NATO defense plans for Europe and U.S. Army contingency plans for a ground war with the Soviet Union in Europe.

Clyde Lee Conrad, the former sergeant, was arrested Tuesday, and a statement from the prosecutor's office said he was charged with "compelling suspicion of espionage activities in an especially grave case."

Sculpture replaces weatherman

PORTLAND, Ore. - Forget the radio weatherman: A new sculpture installed downtown gives a multimedia performance along with the forecast.

The Portland Weather Machine comes to life at noon. It sprays water, blinks lights, plays a trumpet fanfare and releases one of three weather symbols from a steel globe - a gold-leaf sun for clear days, a silvery blue heron for precipitation, and a roaring copper dragon for a storm.

The 30-foot sculpture also includes a weathervane for wind direction and a series of lights that indicate the temperature. To show air quality, a lens glows green on clear days, amber on hazy days and red on smoggy ones.

Some 500 people attended the sculpture's unveiling Wednesday by another famous weather performer, Willard Scott of NBC's "Today Show."

Wheat growers oppose plan

WASHINGTON - A plan by the Agriculture Department to change price support loan procedures should be withdrawn, the National Association of Wheat Growers said Thursday.

Frank Johannsen, president of the association, said wheat growers strongly oppose USDA's Aug. 10 proposal "to provide that 1987 and all subsequent crops of wheat, feed grains, rice and soybeans would be ineligible for an extension of the original nine-month loan."

The support loans are made to farmers, who then are required to repay the loans when due or forfeit the grain to the department's Commodity Credit Corp. It has been a common practice in periods of abundance to extend the loans, allowing the grain to be kept off the market longer and not depress prices.

Johannsen said he recognized that there has been a change in the market situation this year because of the drought, but he said that does not justify prohibiting loan extensions on future

"Decisions on future loan extensions should be made on a year-to-year basis and should be based on U.S. stocks, production and projected domestic and world demand," he said.

TRW guilty of conspiracy

CLEVELAND - Defense contractor TRW Inc. pleaded guilty Thursday to conspiring to overcharge the government for military aircraft and tank parts and agreed to pay $3 million in fines and penalties.

"TRW as a company deeply regretted that the events occurred. We have taken steps to try and prevent a recurrence of those incidents," said William B. Lawrence, the company's vice president and assistant secretary.

Lawrence waived the company's right to a trial and entered a guilty plea before U.S. District Judge George W. White. The $3 million in fines and penalties was one of the largest such payments ever assessed against a defense contractor, according to U.S. Attorney Patrick McLaughlin.

TRW also agreed to make an irrevocable advance payment of $3 million to be applied toward restitution to the Department of Defense. The amount of restitution is to be decided in a pending civil case.

TRW has estimated its Compressor Components Division overcharged the government between $3 million and $11 million from 1973 to 1984, Lawrence said. McLaughlin declined to discuss the amount the government would seek in the civil case.

Thurday's guilty plea concludes a federal grand jury investigation that began in 1984, when TRW voluntarily disclosed that its employees had engaged in questionable conduct, McLaughlin

Enrollment drops at FHSU

HAYS - Fall enrollment at Fort Hays State University is expected to drop about 2 percent from last year, a school spokesman said Thursday.

Bob Lowen, director of university relations, said preliminary figures show that there will be 4,150 students, compared with 4,240 last year.

Total enrollment is expected to be 5,050 students, down 88 students, or 2 percent, from 5,138 last year, Lowen said. Official enrollment at Fort Hays will be taken on Sept. 19,

The university anticipated a decline because of a large graduating class last spring, Lowen said. But the school also expects to have 900 students enrolled in off-campus classes this fall, a slight increase from the 896 off-campus students enrolled

K-State reported an 8 perecent increase in fall enrollment, which baffled Lowen.

"I don't know how K-State did it," he said, adding that both schools recruited heavily in the western part of the state.

"The population of western Kansas has declined tremendously, and it's getting more and more difficult to pull seniors out of western Kansas," he said.

KU to receive parking garage

TOPEKA - The financing for a proposed $5 million parking garage for the University of Kansas has been completed, the Kansas Development Finance Authority announced Thursday.

The authority finished its issuance of tax-exempt bonds to pay for the garage when a St. Louis, Mo., firm, Edward D. Jones and Company, agreed to buy them at a competitive sale. The 1987 Legislature created the authority to issue bonds for some state projects.

Plans call for a four-level parking garage with 775 spaces and offices for KU's Parking Services in the center of campus. The bonds will be paid off through parking fees.

Making cutbacks in the number of faculty, without damaging the quality of education, is an option being considered by the Faculty Senate to raise their salaries.

Faculty Senate President Cornelia Flora, professor of sociology, anthropology, and social work, explained that the idea of using cutbacks as a means of creating revenue is relatively new. Some departments can afford to cut the number of faculty and use the extra money to enhance the salaries of the remaining faculty, she said.

"Our first concerr is the quality of education for our students," Flora said. "We're trying to see if we can do it more cost-effectively. To maintain the quality, we're going to have to make some serious choices."

. . . . . . . . . . . . .

The faculty-student ratio varies from college to college.

The average for the University is one faculty member for every 15.2 students. Depending on the programs, different colleges may need different faculty-student ratios.

Some colleges are finding that despite being below the average, they can make cutbacks, while others need to hire more faculty.

"This is obviously a college-bycollege thing to look at," Flora said. Robert Hollinger, associate dean of the College of Business Administration, said that his department will not be making cutbacks since they are in need of faculty. If cutbacks were ever being considered, it would require an intensive study of where they would be made and of the policies and regulations that would need to be followed.

Mark Lapping, dean of the College of Architecture, explained that few colleges experienced as much growth, on a proportional basis, as his college did with the increase in enrollment.

"We are clearly in need of faculty," he said.

The college simply cannot compromise the number of studio classes because of the close working relationship needed between the teacher and the student, Lapping said. Lapping also said that K-State is as effective, as friendly and as strong of a school because of a favorable faculty-student ratio.

Cutbacks would answer the problem of low faculty salaries. On a salary scale with 167 major and minor universities, K-State ranks at 160.

"We cannot compete in terms of salary," Flora said. "We are incredibly poorly funded."

Many colleges are having a problem retaining faculty due to competition with other universities. In cases of cutbacks, the extra money would be redistributed to the current professors' salaries, encouraging them to stay.

KANSAS CITY, Kan. — Testimony has ended in a lawsuit brought against the U.S. Army by a woman who claimed that sexual discrimination against her became so intolerable that she resigned her job as sports director at Fort Leavenworth.

Varney's plans to expand

By The Collegian Staff

The walls in Aggieville that shook from country music last spring will soon be covered by books, sportswear and technical supplies.

In July, Varney's Inc. purchased the building that formerly housed the Dark Horse Tavern. The building will be an expansion of Varney's Book Store in Aggieville, said Jon Levin, who has managed Varney's for 31 years.

"We are still in the early stages of planning the expansion project, but my goal is to have the textbook area expanded by January and the entire renovation complete by the beginning of next summer," Levin said.

Ken Ebert and Associates, Manhattan, is planning the architectural changes in the structure and exterior of Varney's.

The two buildings will be combined into one large building, and Jon Greenberg and Associates of Berkely, Mich., will be planning the interior renovation.

The bookstore is being expanded so Varney's can use better displays and carry a larger stock of textbooks and supplies, Levin said.

"We'll probably expand our sportswear department along with our architectural and technical supplies," he said.

The lower level will be used exclusively for textbooks, allowing more books to be displayed, and in a more organized manner, Levin said. Other books, such as cookbooks and general interest books, will be located upstairs along with the general supplies.

Work will begin in the textbook area early in September, but the bookstore will not close during the remodeling process, Levin said.

Time to stop looking at Quayle's war record, start focusing on his relevant political one

Who the hell is J. Danforth Quayle III," a burly editor shouted into the phone.

"Well sir ... he's a U.S. senator from Indiana," answered a nervous, young reporter. "George Bush just chose Quayle as his running mate. A pretty bold move on his part, eh?'

"That's for sure, nobody knows who he is," the frustrated editor muttered back into the receiver.

But the young reporter was prepared. She explained to the editor that Quayle came from a wealthy Indiana family which made its fortune in the newspaper business.

At age 27, Quayle became the associate publisher of the Huntington Herald-Press (not surprising since his dad was publisher.) He was elected into the U.S. House of Representatives before he turned 30 and at 33 became a senator.

Now at 41, he is compared to Robert Redford and is a proud member of the baby boom generation, she told the editor.

The words "baby boom" snagged the editor's attention and his eyes drifted to a tattered picture hanging on a bulletin board cluttered with news assignments.

Three bare-chested men in U.S. Armyissued camouflage hats stood with their arms on each others' shoulders. Cigarettes hung from the corners of their mouths which were all molded into nervous smiles.

It was the editor and his two buddies during Vietnam.

The editor's face tensed up as he asked, "Where was Quayle during 'Nam?"

"Uh ... I've got ... he was in the Indiana National Guard from 1969 to 1975."

"Well, well, well, I think you're on to something here ...

kay, maybe all the controversy didn't start exactly like this. But after a ho-hum Republican National Convention, and a summer that consisted of ongoing drought reports, the media was hungry for any thorn it could find - even if it happened almost 20 years ago.

A little over a week after the convention.

the name Dan Quayle is rarely mentioned without reference to the Indiana National Guard, his young age and, of course, his good

What if Quayle looked more like Truman Capote? And when asked about his time in the National Guard, what if Quayle would have said, "Are you crazy? I would have been nuts to want to go over to Vietnam. Wouldn't you have done the same thing?"

Don't misunderstand my point. I respect the men who were unfortunate enough to be drafted and shipped to Vietnam. They fought and died for their country and its beliefs. Those who survived came back, haunted and disillusioned, to a hostile homeland.

At the time, they believed they were doing the right thing. But today, I don't think many veterans would jump at the chance to return to Vietnam for the same reasons.

Maybe I'm overestimating this country, but I think we learned a few things from Vietnam. I'd like to think the United States would not be so gung-ho to "send in the troops" to defend a culture we know very y point is that 1969 was a long time ago, and Quayle's beauty, or lack of it, is irrelevant. Neither of these points have anything to do with how well Quayle will perform if elected vice president. Let's hear what Quayle has done or not done for the Hoosier State in the last eight

I'm willing to bet there is someone out there who experimented "just once" with marijuana back in the 1960s - maybe even Quayle. Most likely they've changed a little in the last 20 years.

K-State residence halls shouldn't be overbooked

Preliminary enrollment figures indicate the University's student population is the highest it's been in years, and the residence halls are filled.

In fact, they are overflowing.

As during other times of increased enrollment, this semester the Department of Housing has been caught unprepared. About a dozen students who signed housing contracts and paid deposits found that they didn't have a room waiting for them upon arrival. Somehow it appears that housing isn't fulfilling its end of the housing contracts.

The number on the waiting list is small, so students waiting for rooms may eventually receive them if other students should cancel their contracts and move out of the halls.

However, housing contracts are very difficult to be released from without having to pay for the full year of housing. Even if those students on the waiting list did look for accommodations off-campus, their endeavor could prove to be expensive.

Of even greater concern is the fact that the housing department is treating students seeking housing the same way the K-State Police treat those who seek parking permits. For the sake of maximum profit, as many "permits" as possible are granted, without the appropriate amount of space actually being made

With parking, this attitude is sufferable. With housing, it is unacceptable.

EDITOR

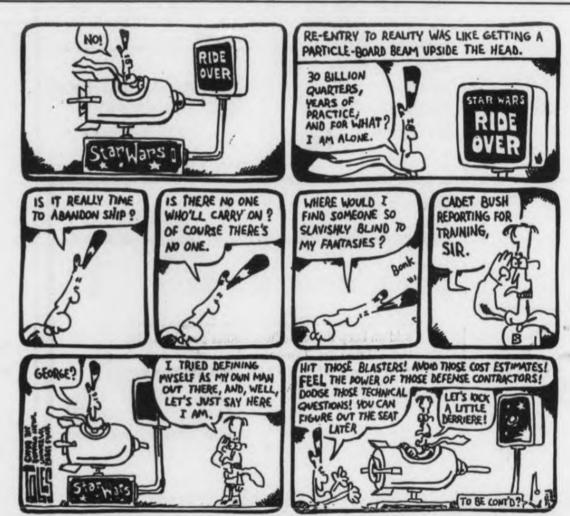

When students enter into the contract, they are signing and paying for a reasonable arrangement, not temporary bunkbeds in a music room shared by six people.

Housing should fulfill its end of the contract by providing some sort of reasonable accommodations for the students, even if it means subcontracting apartments off-campus until rooms in the residence halls become available. Otherwise, the students should be allowed an easier method of release from the housing

At the very least, housing officials should have planned ahead, particularly considering the administration's efforts to increase enrollment.

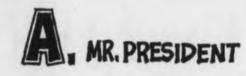

Placing money over people and quality of life isn't what attracts students and increases enrollment.

Movie just fiction

"The Last Temptation of Christ" is based on a novel written in the past 50 years and suggests Christ dabbled with temptation.

Such suggestions cannot be found anywhere in the New Testament. If His last temptation was actually to have sex with Mary and live a normal human life, it wasn't much of a temptation. To suggest that Jesus would trade His divine purpose of coming to earth and saving the world by his unblemished sacrifice is absurd. Read Mathew 4:1-11. You can see for yourself that Jesus immediately dealt with and overcame temptation.

In the thousands of original copies of New Testament manuscripts, there is no evidence that Jesus hesitated when dealing with sin. Furthermore, the Bible has strict requirements for Messiahship. One of these requirements is that the Messiah remain 100 percent spotless. The Bible says only Jesus fulfilled every requirement and sufficiently paid the penalty for the sins of the world.

The right to see the movie is not a question of rights, it's a question of wrongs. At least one part of the film is unfounded. It also total-resented in the Bible. It actually negates Jesus for eligibility as the Messiah.

If you are anxious to gain knowledge of Jesus's life, why settle for someone's contrived 20th century version, when you can read proven historical documentation like the book of Matthew. Not only is it factual biographical information on the life of Jesus, but better than a movie — it's free.

Movie should run

According to Bob Caslens letter to the editor in Thursday's Collegian, he has apparently seen the film, "The Last Temptation of Christ," which is more than I can say for a lot of people in this area. Because of Bob and others who seem to be all knowing of the scriptures and God, I probably won't be able to see the film because theaters are afraid of local church groups causing havoc. I should be able to see or read anything I want without Bob telling me I can't. Before Bob or our religious leaders cast the first stone, let them read

Attacks in Aggieville

Editor,

Hey, welcome back bar fans for another fun, exciting, and stimulating season of partying on the Aggieville gridiron. The game hasn't changed much since last year.

Take note of the one major rule change: The alley between Kite's and Hardee's is now out-of-bounds. That's right bar fans, unless you desire to have your face punched in or to be knifed by a gang of ruthless young individuals, you should stay in well lit areas and make sure that you are in a large group. The point is this: I personally know three individuals that have been attacked in that particular alley over the course of the last

I have also heard of several other similar occurrences, some being very recent. Nothing, to my knowledge, has been done to solve this crime problem.

Please protect yourself; I don't want you to be the next victim.

Mental care lacking

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - Services for the mentally ill are inadequate in parts of the state, and the Legislature should consider changing the way it finances state hospitals and community treatment centers, lawmakers were told

The Legislature's Special Committee on Ways and Means reviewed a report that said lack of state support has led to a deficiency in services for the mentally ill on the local level. The Legislative Division of Post Audit prepared the report, which also said state and local services are not well coordinated.

In addition, Charles Rapp, associate dean of social welfare at the University of Kansas, recommended the state create a unified system under which a single local entity is responsible for seeing that mentally ill persons are given treatment.

Rapp also warned that continuing the present system will require the Legislature to consider increasing state hospital budgets year after year, as community programs clamor for more money.

"Gaps in the continuum of services and inadequate levels of service for existing programs were consistently attributed to funding that was either inadequate or did not cover the needed services," the post audit report said. "The system for providing mental health services in Kansas is not working as intended."

Currently, the state has 27 community mental health centers and four hospitals - in Kansas City, Larned, Topeka and Osawatomie.

In the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1987, the state spent $49.7 million on the hospitals and $15.4 million on community centers.

Redesigned lots increase space

By The Collegian Staff

In an effort to alleviate the shortage of parking spaces on campus, the University redesigned five lots and constructed one new lot during the summer. The changes have resulted in the addition of 1,099 stalls, said Lt. Robert Mellgren of the K-State Police.

Construction in Lot B3, north of Weber Hall, has increased the capacity from 515 to 972 stalls for residence hall students' car storage only. Mellgren said because enrollment has increased and freshmen are allowed to park on campus, a larger lot was needed.

"We needed more car storage parking, and one of the reasons B3 was enlarged is because of the addition onto Weber Hall. We just combined the two projects," Mellgren

No Gain???

NO WAY!!!!

Along with the extension of Lot B3, the construction of a new lot, B16, added 303 spaces between Weber Hall and Lot B3. This lot is open to off-campus students, faculty and staff, rather than residence hall occupants.

West of Memorial Stadium, Lots D1E and D1W have been rearranged for perpendicular parking and two-way traffic to provide 116 additional spaces. This lot, which was previously used as car storage parking for the residents of Goodnow and Marlatt halls, is now open entirely to commuter parking. All residence hall students are required to park in the extended B3 Lot.

The redesign of Lot D4, which is in front of Marlatt Hall, has added 46 stalls. Lot B2, north of Haymaker Hall, now provides 177 additional spaces.

Students gain experience in drum corps

By Guy Peverley Collegian Reporter

Dave Watson spent his summer vacation traveling 10,000 miles, stopping at 40 different cities and receiving only two days off on an experience-enriched, salary-free

Paul Siegfried, junior in finance; Jari Webber, sophomore in psychology; and Watson were all members of one of the 70 international drum corps that competed against each other throughout the United States aiming for the international championship of the Drum Corps International.

Although it may sound busy and expensive, Watson, a junior in psychology and a member of the 1987-88 K-State marching band, said he would not change a thing. "I have no regrets. I wish I had found out about it earlier," he said. Each corps consists of drums, percussion instruments and a color guard. In order to be eligible, the members must be 15 to 21 years of age, with no more than 128 participants per group. The groups were judged on the difficulty of their 10-minute performance, the originality of their uniforms and their music.

Watson traveled to Casper, Wyo., where he auditioned for the Trooper Corps. He was one of five competing for three spots as a quint drummer. A quint is a set of five drums.

After he made the squad, Watson began his summer with 10-hour daily practices for two weeks. Watson said the group only performed one routine, which it practiced repeatedly.

The Trooper Corps traveled by bus from Denver to the East Coast, engaging in 40 competitions along style uniforms and played western music.

There were 75 members in the Trooper Corps this summer, but Watson said he expects the number to increase next year because of their success this summer. They finished 19th in the international finals at Arrowhead Stadium in Kansas City, Mo., in front of 40,000 spectators.

"It really floors others when I tell them I did it for free," Watson said. The corps, he said, was a good experience and he said he learned a great deal about discipline.

Most multi-dwelling residences in Manhattan are safe before anyone moves in, but students often make them fire hazards, said Larry Wesche, Manhattan fire marshal.

Fire hazard conditions have improved considerably over the past five years because of improved electrical wiring and installation of smoke detectors, but improvements can be made, he said.

"There's never a sure bet with preventing a fire, but we are moving in the right direction," Wesche said.

Students who live in private, offcampus homes pose a unique problem for fire control because these buildings are not regulated by state or local ordinances. Students should inspect living conditions carefully for potential fire hazards, and the dwellings should have at least two Basement apartments with water heaters by main stairwells are not safe because heaters are often the cause of fires.

Landlords should provide kitchen and bedroom smoke detectors. Homes built after 1982 are required by law to have smoke detectors.

"Smoke detectors are the No.1 saver of lives. The value of an early warning system cannot be replaced.

be creating own fire hazards

Insist on it," Wesche said.

The residence halls are inspected by the state fire marshal office, but because of the large number of people housed in them, fire regulations are hard to enforce.

The most common violation of fire codes in the halls is the overloading cords and multiple plug-ins. To add to the problem, the outlets are often used to power major appliances such as televisions and stereos, he said. Wesche said the use of such devices is unsafe, and he cautioned users to think about their safety and the safety of those around them. "Common sense is the key to most violations, if something seems to be unsafe, it probably is," Wesche said.

Another problem in the residence halls is prank fire alarms. "Prank fire alarms cause the alarms to become routine for residents, and reaction time becomes dangerously slow," he said. "Every alarm must be treated as the real thing. Structures can be replaced; students can't."

Fraternity and sorority houses are inspected by the fire marshal's department twice a year. During inspections, firefighters look for structural problems, re-charge fire extinguishers and check alarm systems. The majority of the greek houses in Manhattan are safe and have made advances in fire safety. Wesche said every member of a living group should be aware of two exits from the building. "In an emergency situation, if a door feels hot to the touch, leave it shut, and exit the building by another route. First priority is getting out of the building quickly," he said.

Last Temptation'

Art or Blasphemy?

Directed by Martin Scorsese, "The Last Temptation of Christ" has received more publicity than any other film in recent

Most of it has been free, and very little of it positive. Nonetheless, the film opened on Aug. 12 to brisk ticket sales, selling out in Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York, Washington and Chicago. It did better than average business in Montreal, Toronto, Seattle and Minneapolis.

The film opened after a month of protests, picketing and Bill Bright, of The Campus Crusade for Christ, offered to buy the film for $10 million so that he could destroy it himself. The day before it opened, 7,500 people protested at Universal making love to Mary Magdalene. He resists the final temptation

Protesters carried helium balloons that floated high above the crowd, spelling out JESUS as they chanted J-E-S-U-S. According to a report in The New York Times, Universal charged protesters $3 a car to park, and earned about $4,500 from the demonstration. The newspaper reported that at the demonstration, protesters staged a mock crucifixion.

This man represents Lew Wasserman," shouted Rev. R.L. Hymers, of the Fundamentalist Baptist Tabernacle in Los Angeles, pointing at a small man weilding a mallet. The man had a sign around his neck further identifying himself as Lew Wasserman, the chairman of MCA/Universal, which released the film "The Last Temptation of Christ."

man in native Nazarene garb.

"Go ahead," the Reverend urged.

The kneeling man began to pound a stake through an out-stretched palm as the crucified man screamed in agony.

schedule hoping to avoid such organized demonstrations. The film opened only in nine Cineplex-Odeon theaters. Cineplex-Odeon is partly owned by MCA/Universal.

Other theaters and theater chains have been slow to pick up the movie because of its potential to offend moviegoers, and because they fear long-term repercussions stemming from showing the movie in spite of the protests.

The script, written by Paul Schrader, is based on the 1951 novel by Nikos Kazantzakes, who was excommunicated from the Greek Orthodox Catholic Church upon its publication.

The Roman Catholic Church rates the movie as "offensive" and discourages church members from going to see it.

What exactly is all of the uproar about? The "objectionable" portion of the movie is often confined, in the statements of those opposing it, to a scene which occurs near the end of the movie. The movie depicts Jesus Christ as being tempted in his last moments on the cross. While being crucified, he hallucinates about living out his life on earth, marrying, having children, and before fulfilling the prophecy of his crucifixion. Though the movie has not opened in the Midwest yet, much local opinion has already formed on both sides.

Prompted by a report from Topeka radio station KMAJ that the film would not be shown in Kansas, Sharon Brown, a clerk at the K-State Union Bookstore, began circulating a petition

The petition, which will be sent to both the local and national offices of the theater chains, requests that the film be shown in

"I'm not advocating or promoting the movie," Brown said, "but I do feel that we should each be able to make our own choice whether or not we want to see it."

Brown has collected 100 signatures thus far, and plans to circulate the petitions both on and off campus. Lori Roberts, spokesperson for the Assembly of God Church, said, "I (believe that) if this was a movie making fun of a smaller group of people, such as Mormons or homosexuals, that they wouldn't have been able to show it." "We're not supporting (the movie) by any means, but we're not going on a crusade against it either," said Rev. Norman F. Dlabl, Chaplain of St. Isadore's (Catholic) Chapel. "Christ can defend himself."

"Our (parish) stand is to ignore it," said Rev. Loren Werth, pastor of St. Thomas More Catholic Church. "We don't want to give it publicity; publicity encourages curiosity."

Troy Lubbers, student body president, and Doug Folk, Student Senate chairman, have prepared an official statement: "We believe in the fundamental right of expression, speech and religion. Also, we believe that the people of this community are mature enough to make their own conscious decisions about whether or not to view this picture. Therefore, we feel the picture should not be censored or banned from Manhattan.'

There is no official word yet whether the film will be shown in Commonwealth Theatres, represented in Manhattan by Westloop 6 Cinema, seems the most likely place it will be shown. Recently, Commonwealth's official statement concerning the movie was changed from, "It is not in our plans to show it at this time," to "No decision has yet been made," according to Jack Posenger, director of advertising and public relations.

When asked recently whether the film would be shown by Seth Childs Cinema, owned by United Artists, an official of the theater said, "We were told to keep quiet."

Drought restrains GNP

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Government figures showed Thursday that the economy, surging through a stiff drag caused by the drought, grew at the surprisingly brisk annual pace of 3.3 percent in the second quarter but inflation hit a six-year peak of 5.1 percent.

The Commerce Department said that the gain in the gross national product, the total output of goods and services, would have soared beyond the 3.3 percent clip had it not been for a larger-than-expected $9.5 billion loss in farm production. Without that impact of the drought, GNP growth from April through June would have hit a 4.3 percent annual pace, it said.

The 5.1 percent inflation rate, compared with just 1.7 percent in the first quarter, sparked new worries that the Federal Reserve will be forced to step up its antiinflation campaign by sending interest rates even higher to quell the heatup.

The economy is growing much too fast," said Robert Dederick, chief economist of the Northern Trust Co. of Chicago. "It is nice to grow fast at the early stages of an expansion when you have an lot of unemployment, but at this stage we just can't afford it."

The 3.3 percent second quarter growth represented an upward revision from a month ago when the government estimated the GNP expanded at a 3.1 percent during the spring. GNP growth in the first three months of the year was 3.4

Strength in both quarters came from big improvements in the trade deficit, which shrank at an annual rate of $18.9 billion in the spring, the best performance in eight years.

Business investment shot up 16.3 percent in the second quarter, the biggest increase in a year, as companies boosted capital spending plans to meet increased export demands. Government and consumer spending was up as well in the second quarter.

But the demand strength helped trigger a sharp jump in prices. After rising at an annual rate of 1.7 percent in the first quarter, the GNP deflator's 5.1 percent showing in the second quarter was the worst since the third quarter of

The big jump in the GNP deflator, which reflects changes in buying patterns as well as prices, was attributed to higher costs for clothing, food and gasoline.

Track licensing nears end

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - The state Racing Commission's staff has been hunting for extra chairs. A few of the several dozen attorneys and lobbyists who attend its meetings regularly may have to walk a block or two farther than normal Friday and Saturday.

Chairs and parking spaces have been scarce recently, and they could be even more in demand than ever this week because the commission could decide who will be allowed to run pari-mutuel races next year in south-central Kansas and near Pittsburg.

The commission has before it five proposals for racing in three cities in south-central Kansas and another three for racing outside of Pittsburg, in far southeast Kansas.

"We're getting very close to the end, as far as licensing is concerned," said Jimmy Grenz, the commission's executive director.

The commission is scheduled to hear presentations Friday from the groups involved in the five proposals in south-central Kansas, known as the "Wichita market area." The commission could make a decision as to which groups to license then or wait until Saturday, Grenz said.

The commission will at least hear presentations from the groups involved in the three Pittsburg proposals Saturday and could make a decision on them then, Grenz said.

The commission last month granted a license to two groups to build a $55.6 million pari-mutuel racing park in Kansas City, Kan. The park would have separate dog- and horse-racing tracks.

"We need to look at what is most likely to succeed," said Commissioner Kay Arvin of Wichita. "We don't want any failures.'

Determining who should be licensed in the Wichita market area is perhaps the most complex decision the commission has faced so far.

Two proposals call for dog-racing tracks, costing $15.9 million and $17.8 million respectively, just north of the city. A third calls for an $18.3 million dog track there also, with the understanding the two groups involved could apply for a horseracing license later.

Also, the Kansas State Fair and a group of Hutchinson community leaders want to spend $5.3 million to bring pari-mutuel horse races to the State Fairgrounds. Hutchinson is about 45 miles northwest of Wichita.

In addition, the Greenwood County Fair Association wants to run parimutuel horse races at Eureka Downs in Eureka, 55 miles east of Wichita. The commission already has agreed to allow 19 days of racing this year at Eureka Downs, starting Sept. 3.

Voluntary testing proposed for wells

By The Associated Press

SALINA - Members of the Kansas Water Authority have endorsed a proposal that could lead to the voluntary testing of all known domestic and public water wells in Kansas.

The project, which is estimated to take three to five years, would be under the direction of the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, the agency responsible for water quality.

At a meeting Wednesday in Salina, Health and Environment Secretary Stanley Grant told the authority the work needs to be done because "we need that baseline data to track where we are."

"If it's something somebody drinks, we want to know," he said.

Grant said Kansas has about 1 million wells that have been used for drinking water, but state officials know the location of only about 200,000 of them.

Those wells would be tested for manmade volatile organic chemicals some landowners.

and other contaminants, many of which were unknown a decade ago, Grant said.

He estimated his agency would need about $1 million to start the

The money would come from state funds and go into the department's budget, which must be approved by Gov. Mike Hayden and state

Although they said they supported the concept of the well tests, several authority members cautioned Grant he could be opening a "Pandora's box" of problems.

Bob Binder, an authority member from Hays, asked what would happen if a well was found to have been contaminated by a farmer who used chemicals to treat his land or crops.

"Are we going to ask that farmer to do the remediation or will the state pick up the bill?" Binder asked.

Harland Priddle, an authority member from Topeka, said access to wells might also be a problem with

Steelers' owner Rooney dies at 87

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH - Art Rooney Sr., owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers for more than a half-century and a beloved figure in American professional sports, died Thursday. He was 87.

Rooney, whose Steelers stumbled through four decades of mediocrity before they became four-time Super Bowl champions in the 1970s, was hospitalized with a stroke Aug. 17. He had been in a coma since Monday.

"At 7:45 a.m. 'The Chief' ... passed away in his sleep with his family at his bedside," said Theodore Gelet, Rooney's personal physician.

"He will be remembered by all he touched for his innate warmth, gentleness, compassion and charity," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said. "It is questionable whether any sports figure was more universally loved and respected."

"Pittsburgh has lost a great friend. ... He was a grandfather to everybody," said Pam Webster, his five sons in the late 1960s.

wife of veteran Steelers' center Mike Webster. "I've never met anybody who had an unkind word to say about Art Rooney."

Rooney attended thousands of wakes and funerals - some for people he barely knew - and treated custodians and chairmen of the board with equal respect. He once said, "How would I like to be remembered after I die? I'd like to be remembered as a good

Rooney, who loved horse racing almost as much as football, bought the Steelers in 1932 with $2,500 he had won betting, then watched them struggle for 40 seasons before becoming the NFL's dominant team of the 1970s. Only the Steelers have won four Super

"He was a very humble person," former Steelers quarterback Terry Bradshaw said. "Losing or winning, he was no different."

Giants need pitching to repeat in NL West

By The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Manager Roger Craig would give his right arm or left arm for a Giants starting pitcher with a healthy one.

San Francisco's wounded list is so full of pitchers that Kelly Downs, the latest injury victim, has nowhere to go. The Giants said Thursday that they had scrapped his previously? announced move to the 15-day disabled list because, in the words of general manager Al Rosen, "We are simply out of room" there.

for Craig and the Giants, who have made a whopping 64 player transactions this season and used the disabled list 11 times, seven times with a pitcher. Downs is unavailable with recurring shoulder stiffness, and the defending National League West champions are running out of pitchers and time. San Francisco has decided to go with nine pitchers and a four-man rotation, leaving rookie Jeff Brantley in Phoenix instead of recalling him as a fill-in as planned. "You can't keep reaching in the bullpen, reaching down in the minors, for pitchers," Craig said. "There are only so many there. It'll start catching up on us." Of the five starters in the season's opening week, only Rick Reuschel has escaped a disabling injury, and the 39-year-old Reuschel had shoulder pain that caused concern in spring training.

Dravecky had shoulder surgery after posting only a 2-2 record with an earned-run average of 3.16 and is probably out for the year.

Mike LaCoss (7-7, 3.62) had surgery to remove bone chips from his elbow and may return by mid-September.

Thirty-six-year-old Mike Krukow (7-4, 3.49) missed about eight starts this summer with shoulder inflammation that also plagued him last year. He was on the disabled list until Still on the DL are spot starters Terry Mulholland (2-1, 3.72) with a broken wrist and Joe Price (1-5, 3.52) with continuing shoulder problems.

Experience stands out

Volleyball team opens against Nebraska

By Melissa Payne Sports Writer

Experience and knowledge will be the backbone of this season's K-State women's volleyball team. With the leadership of four returning seniors and four juniors, this could be the year the Wildcats crack the top three in the Big Eight Conference.

"With the experience of four seniors and four juniors on the team, this will be a team that will improve on a day-by-day and week-by-week schedule," Coach Scott Nelson said.

Last season, the team was able to come away with a fourth-place finish in the Big Eight, whereas the season before they placed sixth.

K-State will open the season Saturday in Beatrice, Neb., against perennial national power Nebraska.

Early-season opponents for the Wildcats will be Oral Roberts University, Montana State University and Mississippi State University. In the conference race, Nebraska is once again expected to be at the top of the pile. Second-place contenders include the 'Cats, the University of Oklahoma and Iowa State University.

K-State will not be a onedimensional team, Nelson said.

"The thing that stands out in general terms is just our experience varsity experience, starting experience and playing experience," he

The biggest strengths of the team will lie in its offense, team defense and outside hitting.

When talking about K-State's outside hitting power, one can't overlook Shawnee Call, a 5-foot-11 senior from Ellsworth. Call has been an All-Big Eight selection and was one of two sophomores invited to Opening day starter Dave sparticipate in the 1987 World University Games in Zagreb, Mary Kinsey will add experience now that she has been moved from the left to the right side. Kinsey, along with Val Kastens, are K-State's captains this season.

Blocking will play a major role this season as Nelson has stressed this aspect of the game. Kastens has moved to middle blocker from outside hitter and is showing development in that area, Nelson said.

Emphasis this season will be on a one-setter system in which there are three women battling for the position. Mary Mignano may see double duty as a setter and a backcourt spe-

Other players to watch are juniors Kristin Martin and Leslie Kull. It is uncertain at this time who the starting setter will be at the Nebraska match.

Competition is intense for other positions, such as middle blocker. One candidate is Rhonda Hughes. "(She is) a local freshman who possesses the Big Eight level of play," Nelson said.

In addition to Kastens and Hughes, Tami Tibbetts, Marla Gilpin, Cathy Sexton and Betsy Berkley will vie for this spot.

Nelson said the biggest challenge this team faces will be reaching their expectations.

"If we can be satisfied with beating opponents that we haven't beaten in the past, then we have reached a milestone," Nelson said.

Where's OSU in preseason polls?

By The Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. - They won 10 games last year, beat West Virginia in the Sun Bowl, and dress out some of the finest athletes in the nation.

But when the Oklahoma State players checked out the preseason top twenty last week, their team was nowhere to be found.

West Virginia, defeated 35-33 by the Cowboys last December, was there. Nebraska and Oklahoma, the only teams to beat the Cowboys in 1987, were there, too - naturally ranked No. 2 and 3, respectively. But not the Cowboys.

"They make West Virginia 16th but they don't even rank us at all. How's that for not getting any respect," Cowboy quarterback Mike Gundy told Big Eight Skywriters Thursday.

"I don't know if anybody's especially upset about it," said Barry Sanders, running back and kick-returner deluxe. "But I do think it's going to be a motivation for us."

Without doubt, the Cowboys go into Pat Jones' fifth year with enough momentum and personnel to achieve a breakthrough season.

The offensive line returns virtually intact, a savvy, hefty crew that could be remembered as Oklahoma State's all-time best.

Protected by that line will be a slick junior quarterback who set the Big Eight freshmen passing record and then topped the sophomore mark as an encore.

"Mike Gundy has a great sense of the occasion," Jones said of his junior quarterback. Gundy could be on his way to shattering all Big Eight passing records. He ranks 24th on conference charts now with 3,631 career yards and needs 2,780 to be No. 1.

A big loss to graduation was Thurman Thomas, last year's Big Eight offensive player of the year and the league's No. 2 all-time rusher. But in Sanders, the Cowboys boast the best kick returner in college football. He had two 100-yard kickoff returns and two touchdown punt returns. He finished 1987 No. 1 in the nation in returning kickoffs and No. 2 in running back punts.

"He would beat Thurman in a footrace," Jones said.

But most pleasing in the eyes of NFL scouts is Hart Lee Dykes. A stylish 6-4 senior, Dykes has 1,893 career receiving yards, 457 shy of the Big Eight record Johnny Rodgers of Nebraska set in 1972 when he won the Heisman Trophy. Barring injury,

Dykes seems certain to be a first-round NFL draft choice next spring. Even Jones, while professing no interest in anybody's preseason picks, agrees that maybe - just maybe - this could be the Cowboys' finest hour.

There's even talk in Stillwater of a national championship.

"The right things have to happen," said Jones, whose four-year mark of 34-13 makes him Oklahoma State's winningest coach. "I'm not trying to forecast anything, but I'm real anxious for us to get going, quite honestly because in some areas I do believe we're better than we've ever been."

One dark storm cloud does hover, threatening to rain on - and maybe flood out - any parade the Cowboys might start. The NCAA is nearing an end to its long investigation into allegations of misconduct in the football

Jones made it clear Thursday he would not take questions on the probe "or anything related to it." But he made one exception when asked if all the talk and speculation would be a distraction to his team.

"We aren't going to let it be," he Dykes, one of the most soughtafter prep stars in the country when he signed out of Bay City, Texas, four years ago, has reportedly been given immunity by the NCAA for his testimony. That testimony allegedly touches upon the University of Oklahoma, which is also under NCAA scrutiny. Some observers have predicted Oklahoma State officials might try to appeal a final decision until after the season because the Cowboys may have a legitimate shot at their first national championship.

Dykes, upbeat and candid, insisted he had felt no resentment from his teammates about his NCAA activities.

What the NCAA has in mind remains to be seen. But Jones, in the meantime, is eager to see how good his 1988 Cowboys can be.

"In certain areas, if the question marks get answered with productivity, it could be our best chance ever," he said. "If we stay unsettled in certain areas or get hit with a rash of injuries, then we could become real average in a hurry.

"But this is my 10th year here, fifth as a head coach, and the talent level is probably the best it's been from top to bottom. We're reloading in some areas like the defensive line. But in other areas, such as receiver, quarterback and running back, I don't think we've ever had the quality or quanity we have now."

Graf, Lendl draw top seeds

NEW YORK - Top seeds Steffi Graf and Ivan Lendl, who can both make tennis history by winning the U.S. Open, gained favorable draws Thursday for the final Grand Slam tournament of the year.

Soviets tour sister city

By The Associated Press

DIXON, Ill. - Applause, hearty handshakes and declarations of friendship and world peace greeted a small delegation from Dickson, Siberia, on Thursday on the first visit by Soviet citizens to President Reagan's boyhood

Autograph seekers and wellwishers crowded the yard around the two-story, white frame house where Ronald "Dutch" Reagan lived in 1920 as a 9-year-old boy with his parents, Jack and Nelle, and older brother Neil.

A private tour of the Reagan home topped the agenda for Dickson Mayor Nikolai T. Kartamyshev, journalist Boris S. Ivanov and interpreter Nikolai S. Vishnevsky of Moscow.

"I have written in the special (guest) book inside that a great man deserved a great memory and I am happy to be at such a special place," Kartamyshev said as the delegation finished its tour of the three-bedroom house.

"There are a lot of great men who have come from small and ordinary places," he said.

Mayor James E. Dixon of the host city doffed his straw top hat and officially welcomed the Soviet group.

"They are trying to show us that they are good people and they want peace," Dixon said. "I hope they will go back knowing we are their friends."

Dixon said the Soviet visitors were suffering from jet lag, having arrived in this town of 15,700 aobut 100 miles west of Chicago, late Wednesday night. But they appeared enthusiastic when greeted by a crowd of about 100.

'We are carrying with us warmest greetings from all the residents of Dickson," Kartamyshev said. "Now we can say something has been achieved with our sistercity ties."

Many in the crowd wore buttons proclaiming "Peace on Earth" in English and Russian.

15 percent of financial aid delayed

By Lisa Pfannenstiel Collegian Reporter

Seventy percent of the students enrolled this fall are dependent on some form of financial aid. As many as 15 percent of those students were told their aid was delayed at registration and faced an immediate shortage of funds.

Melanie Smith, sophomore in journalism and mass communications, was forced to take out an Emergency Student Loan to pay for tuition.

"My loan was there, but my scholarship, Pell Grant and nonuniversity grant hadn't come in," she said. "At first I was angry and frustrated, but I had problems last year and almost expected it. I signed the promissory note for the emergency loan and continue to stop at the financial aid office, waiting for my other three checks."

Many students faced similar circumstances at registration and had to change their method of payment for semester fees. Larry Viterna, director of student financial assistance, explained two possible aid alternatives: sponsored fees and Emergency Student Loans.

"This is the first year we are offering sponsored fees, which are funds awarded to students whose financial aid is approved but is not available at registration," he said, adding that in that type of situation the student financial aid office becomes the temporary lender until the checks are received.

Sponsored fees only cover tuition and fees; the remaining costs of books and living expenses can be financed through an Emergency Student Loan, a short-term loan issued during the first eight weeks of the semester to students in need. Loan amounts are limited to two-thirds of the student's enrollment fees and $100 for living expenses.

An Emergency Student Loan accrues interest at a rate of 8 percent from the issue date of the loan until the due date. If the loan is not paid back within 90 days, an interest rate of 1.5 percent per month - 18 percent annual interest - will accumulate until payment is completed.

Viterna explained the reason for the 8 percent charge.

"The student's finance charge of 8 percent is returned to the Emergency Student Loan fund to provide continued assistance during the next semester," he said, adding that last year Emergency Student Loans contributed approximately $1 million in interest to the emergency student loan fund during the first weeks of enrollment.

The Student Financial Assistance office is working on a Student Billing Receivable System to help simplify the enrollment process, he said. The computerized system would allow their office to credit student accounts and bill them for the difference, or award them the difference if their aid was above the cost of tuition.

Viterna said he expects the system to be ready for use by the 1990 fall

Most of the delays in payment stem from late filing, lack of documentation or failure of verification, he said.

Verification refers to the additional information requested from either the individual or the family. Documentation may be needed from students claiming independent status, students recently married or students with a dependent child. The process takes time and the awards cannot be released until this information is completed.

In addition to late filing, verification and documentation, more than 500 appeals for additional financial aid are made each year. The appeals include unique situations resulting from divorces, serious accidents, deaths or other hardships. Processing can again take considerable time and can delay financial aid checks.

"Overall, students are very cooperative. We do the best we can to provide the needed funds that almost three-fourths of our students depend on." Viterna said.

which is figured on the total number of credit hours in which students

Yet, a portion of that base budget increase, approximately $1 million, will also have to pay the additional costs realized by K-State in providing services to the increased number of students, Hoyt said.

"It really isn't a financial bonanza because the added growth brings with it added commitments," he said.

"So we really didn't gain an awful lot but we do have the option to make a few more decisions down the line," he said.

Coffman said K-State must weigh the need to improve the University infrastructure. But, increasing funds for the infrastructure could mean putting less money into salaries for creating new faculty positions or for filling already existing, open faculty positions, he said.

"We've tended in years past to lean more towards people than towards other areas. And I think now, as an institution, we've got to consider that," Coffman said.

One factor Coffman cited is K-State's student-faculty ratio, which is lower than its peer institutions. He said comparison figures for peer institutions are from 1986 and need to be updated.

Coffman also said K-State's total budget is 11 percent lower than those of its peers, while spending for salaries is 20 percent lower.

These figures combined with the difference between the University's spending on computing services compared to that of its peers lead Coffman to suggest a reappraisal of the balance in spending.

K-State spends half as much on computing services as its peers, Coffman said.

He said cutting filled positions would not be a method used to release money for critical needs like the infrastructure.

"I think it's important ... that we don't get lost in a tyranny of numbers," he said.

Making such decisions involves "innovative stratigizing," Coffman said. "That's the bottom line."

Increased numbers stretch classes

By Erwin Seba Senior Staff Writer

University officials spoke of full classes placing stress on instructors when interviewed about the impact of K-State's enrollment increase

Bill Feyerharm, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. said planning for an anticipated increase in enrollment began last

'We anticipated about half the number (of freshman) we received,"

Feyerharm said: "We simply got more students than we expected and that presents a strain on the system." The strain of increased enrollment is being felt in the composition program of the English department.

Since the end of spring 1988, the maximum number of students to be enrolled in sections of composition classes was increased from 23 to 26.

Each composition instructor requires eight papers from each student. An addition of four students per section means an instructor will have to grade 32 more papers in each section he or she teaches.

"We really should not be teaching more than 20 students per section,' said Robert Grindell, associate professor of English and head of the department.

In addition to admitting more students to each section, 11 additional sections of composition classes are being offered during the fall semester, raising the total to 106.

Grindell said the English department had to hire more part-time instructors to handle the increased teaching load. He added that the available supply of people in the Manhattan area qualified to be part-

But, Grindell said, members of the English faculty were pleased with the full enrollment in the upper division courses offered by the department.

M. Jarvin Emerson, professor of economics and head of the department, found the increase has only worsened a problem in a department with a small faculty which has been made smaller by the loss of three key professors in the past six months.

"Our problems have been in existence for a while," Emerson said. "Because of the short supply of staff, I think the increase in enrollment has just exacerbated the problem. We've had closed classes for some time."

Luncheon to focus on banks

By Paula Selby Agri/Business Editor

A professor of community and regional planning will explain the importance of independent banks in rural Kansas at 9 a.m. Saturday at the Holiday Inn & Holidome.

Mark Lapping, dean of the College of Architecture and Design, will give the keynote speech at the Kansas Independent Bankers Association Convention and Sen. Nancy Kassebaum will be guest speaker at the luncheon.

During the past year, Lapping has spoken about economic development in Kansas communities at workshops hosted by the association.

"I will expand on the key role of independent bankers in local economic development, particularly in the rural sector of Kansas," Lapping said.

The focus will be on the importance of small businesses "as the engine" for local economic development, he said.

An emphasis will be placed on the importance of existing firms in a community rather than concentrating on attracting new firms to the area, Lapping said.

"Concentration is needed in helping existing businesses survive and expand by making an aggressive effort to understand their needs," he

Community leaders and bankers can help businesses by understanding their capital needs, manpower needs and space needs. Sometimes they can help by supporting the recapitalization of funds, Lapping said.

There is an awful lot already here in Kansas. I don't think (the state) is ever going to be super successful getting other businesses to move," he said.

Bankers must play a positive role in the community as they are often the community leaders in stimulating economic development, he said.

Another speaker at the convention will be O. Jay Tomson, presidentelect of the Independent Bankers Assocation of America.

Tomson and Kassebaum will speak at 9:40 a.m. and 12:50 a.m. respectively. Both were unavailable for comment on the topics of their speeches.

Students Are Welcome!

Statement of Faith:

We believe the Bible to be the inspired, the only infallible, authoritative Word of God.

We believe there is one almighty, perfect and triune God: Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, eternally coexistent personalities of the same essence.

We believe in the deity of our Lord Jesus Christ, in His virgin birth, His sinless life, His substitutionary death, His bodily resurrection, His ascension to the right hand of the Father and His personal return in power and glory.

We believe in the personality of the Holy Spirit, and in His ministry of convicting and regenerating sinful men, and indwelling, sealing and empowering believers.

We believe in the fall of man from the state of innocence in which he was created to one of total depravity in which he is devoid of spiritual life, and incapable, apart from divine power, of pleasing God. We believe in the justification of the sinner by grace through faith alone.

We believe that the church universal is composed of all true believers and that its members should assemble themselves together in local churches for worship, prayer, fellowship and teaching with a view to being equipped to fulfill the Great Commission. We believe in the bodily resurrection of the saved to immortality, and in the conscious eternal suffering of the lost.

School lunch food high in fat

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Too many school lunches rate a "C" grade because of their high fat content, a consumer nutrition group said Thursday, urging cafeterias to serve "healthfully modified" meals such as chili atop baked potatoes instead of hot dogs.

Ellen Haas, executive director of Public Voice for Food and Health Policy, said her group spotted encouraging trends toward fresh fruit and vegetables in a survey of school menus.

But she said the main courses served in school cafeterias "far too often are fried foods" and other dishes high in saturated fat.

"Our young children are a captive audience. We have an opportunity here," Haas said. "We've got to establish lifestyles that have healthy eating habits."

The Denver-based American School Food Service Association called the report "shallow" and said "school lunch is again getting a bad rap."

rap."

The $3.7 billion school lunch program, serving some 27 million children, is run by the Agriculture Department. Surplus commodities purchased by USDA account for 20 percent of the foods used in the program.

Therein lies the root of the problem, according to Public Voice, because the commodities "are often high in fat, sugar or sodium."

"Congress has compounded the problem by bowing to the milk producers' lobby and requiring that schools serve whole milk, with low-fat milk optional," it said.

Public Voice recommended, among other things, that USDA set limits on the amount of fat, sodium and sugar permitted in school lunches and distribute healthier commodities to schools.

But Suzanne S. Harris, deputy assistant secretary of agriculture for food and consumer services, said in a statement that "it would be irresponsible" to let commodities purchased by the government, as required by law, go unused.

Furthermore, she said, "the scientific community does not support setting absolute levels for sugar, fat or sodium at this time" because current recommendations regarding children are controversial.

"Nutrition strategies warranted for the general adult population may actually be harmful to children, particularly low-income children, during periods of growth and development," Harris said.

Pat Bayer, executive director of the American School Food Service Association, said the Public Voice report offers a "shallow view of research" that is an overreaction to calls by the surgeon general to reduce fat intake. The association represents 65,000 school nutritionists and school lunch directors.

"I think that it is patently ridiculous to blame school lunch for obese America," Ms. Bayer said. "The fact is that school lunches are often the healthiest and most balanced meals some children receive all day."

"We just think school lunch is again getting a bad rap," she said.

However, Haas said the National Science Foundation, the National Institutes of Health and the American Heart Association agree that fat should not constitute more than 30 percent of a child's daily caloric intake.

Judge declares suspect mentally unfit for trial

By The Associated Press

EMPORIA — A man accused of going on a shooting rampage at an Emporia church that killed one man and injured four others is not competent to stand trial, a judge ruled Thursday.

Cheon-Phon Ji, 30, is suffering from a delusional paranoid disorder and cannot stand trial for murder "at this time," said Lyon County District Judge William Dick.

Dick ordered Ji to be committed to Larned State Hospital for more evaluation and treatment within the next 90 days. The judge also set another hearing for Nov. 23 to determine if and when Ji will be competent to stand trial.

Ji is charged with one count of first-degree murder and six counts of attempted first-degree murder for the March 6 shootings at Calvary Baptist Church in Emporia. Church member Thomas DeWeese of Americus was killed when Ji allegedly entered the church during Sunday services and began shooting.

Irving Shaw, Ji's attorney, had requested the competency hearing. He had said earlier if Ji was found competent, he would plead guilty by reason of insanity.

Shaw also filed a motion to dismiss the charges against Ji. A hearing on that motion was scheduled for Sept. 1.

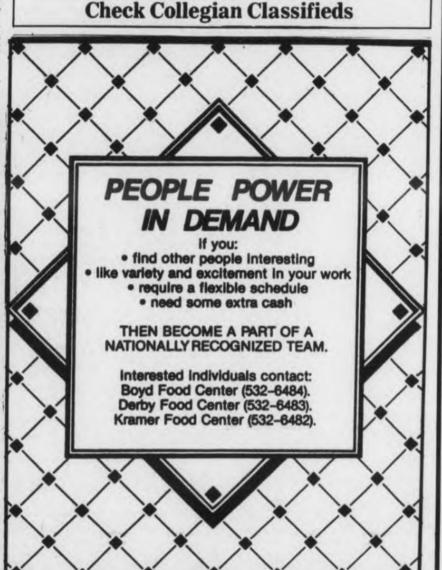

The motion claims that under state law, Ji could have been held at Larned for no longer than 60 days, or until the evalution was finished, whichever was shorter. Shaw said that Ji was held at Larned for 79 days.

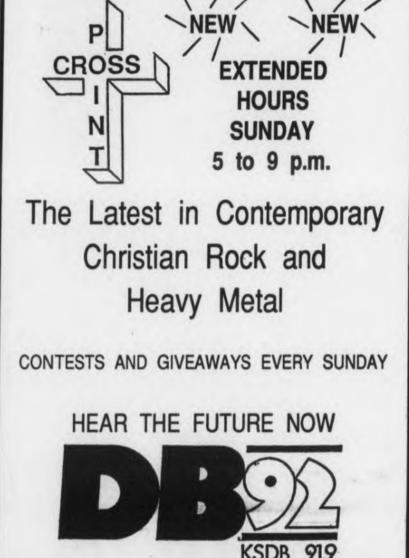

Ji, a Taiwanese national, sat quietly at the defense table throughout the court proceedings. He earned a master's degree in business administration from Emporia State University in 1984.

Dr. Charles Betford, chief psychologist at Larned State Hospital, testified Thursday that his examination showed Ji would be unable to help in his defense.

"He cannot adequately assist in making his defense," Betford testified. "He has a strong contempt for the judicial process in this country. He has no real intention to subject himself, other than to comply behaviorally, to his defense. He sees it as a hoax, a drama fostered by white supremacists."

3 jets collide; fireball kills 46

By The Associated Press

RAMSTEIN, West Germany -Three Italian fighter jets collided during an air show at a U.S. military base Sunday, and one crashed into the crowd and burst into a huge fireball. At least 46 people died and hundreds were hurt, officials said.

Several children and the three aircraft pilots, members of a famed aerial stunt team, were among the dead at the Ramstein Air Base, about 60 miles southwest of Frankfurt, authorities reported.

The network footage had one man frantically shrieking "Tanya, Tanya" and thousands of others screaming and looking for friends and family

The ZDF network showed one jet as it veered toward the horrified crowd out of control before bursting into flames that appeared to be at least 100 feet high.

The network said two other planes crashed away from the crowd of several hundred people.

U.S. authorities said it was unclear what caused the triple crash and the sequence of events that caused the

The three jets were part of a 10-plane Italian Air Force demonstration team, "Frecce Tricolori," that was flying 65 yards above the ground, ZDF said.

The "Frecce Tricolori," which means Tri-Color Arrows and refers to the three-colored Italian flag, was founded in 1930 as a school of aerobatics. Since 1956, it has been a separate unit of the Italian air force based at Rivolto.

Ramstein Air Base spokesman Doug Moore said "those dead on the ground are a mix of civilian and military.'

AFN, the U.S. military radio network, said late Sunday the latest confirmed death toll was 38 people.

ZDF quoted officials as saying several hundred people had been injured, with 60 of them with lifethreatening injuries, including burns.

"A large number has serious burns," said police spokesman Willi Hollaender in nearby Kaiserslautern.

"There are many children among the dead and injured," said Kris Kumpf, a German medical assistant who helped treat the injured. "The worst part of it is, we're still trying to "We saw the fireball racing toward find some of the parents," she said, trying to hold back tears.

Charities closed by Israel

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM - Police shut down a federation of 108 Palestinian charities Sunday and accused it of being a PLO front. In the West Bank, an alleged Arab collaborator with Israel was found burned and tied to an electric pole.

The raid on the charity association followed the closing last week of seven Arab professional associations and the Nablus offices of a federation of 45 trade unions aligned with PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat's Fatah faction.

The crackdown was designed to keep the Palestine Liberation Organization from taking over organizations that were controlled by Jordan's King Hussein before he severed ties with the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip last month.

The Israeli moves were part of a larger effort to disrupt the grassroots organization of the 8-month-old Palestinian uprising against Israeli rule in the territories Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East War.

The burned and blood-stained body of Samih Youssef Dababsi was found tied to an electric pole in the Harti Sheikh neighborhood of Hebron, Arab reports and an Israeli photographer said.

The victim was beaten on the head and his hands were tied to his side, the reports said. Palestinian sources described the victim as a collaborator with Israeli authorities. Police said he was a thief.

FRANKFURT, West Germany -Soviet bloc agents may have had access to NATO defense secrets at a U.S. Army base for decades before a former U.S. sergeant was charged with spying there, a West German newspaper said Sunday.

West Germany last week announced the arrest of former U.S. Army Sgt. Clyde Lee Conrad, who since the late 1970s allegedly sold classified information from the Army base in Bad Kreuznach.

Officials said Conrad, 41, revealed secrets about nuclear missile bases, pipeline systems and troop strength to Hungarian agents, who passed them on to the Kremlin and other Soviet bloc countries.

But the spy ring may have been receiving NATO information long before Conrad became active, according to the Welt am Sonntag newspaper, which quoted information from unidentified U.S.

Conrad was in charge of safekeeping classified NATO documents, which were held in a safe at the Bad Kreuznach base. The newspaper said U.S. security officers believe Conrad's predecessor at the base documentation center also worked for the Hungarian secret service.

The report said Hungary, a Soviet bloc ally, for years "systematically" targeted Americans in West Germany. It said Conrad's predecessor was a U.S. military officer of Hungarian descent who sold NATO information to Hungarian agents. It did not give his name.

There is the fear that for decades top NATO secrets have gone to the Soviet bloc from Americans in West Germany," the newspaper said.

Search for escapee unsuccessful

By Erwin Seba Senior Staff Writer

Geary County sheriff's deputies and Kansas Highway Patrol troopers spent Sunday searching the Junction City area for an escapee from the Geary County Detention Facility.

Anthony Patton fled the detention facility exercise yard at approximately 11 a.m. Sunday. Patton was being held for trial in Geary County on four counts of aggravated criminal sodomy.

Patton was still at large at 12:40 a.m. today.

Sheriff Bill Deppish said Patton was apparently aided in climbing the exercise yard fence by another prisoner of the facility. Patton and the other prisoner were among 22 inmates in the yard at the time of the Deppish said Patton then crawled through barbed wire at the top of the fence and onto the roof of an adjoining building. Patton jumped from the roof to the ground in an unfenced area of the jail facility which is next to the Geary County Sheriff's office in Junction City.

Patton was able to crawl through the barbed wire because he is "small and wiry," Deppish said.

Patton is a 23-year-old black man, 5 feet, 3 inches tall, weighing 130

At the time of his escape, Patton was wearing orange coveralls with "GSO" on the back. Patton, however, obtained a change of clothes from either friends or relatives in Junction City at approximately 1 p.m. Sunday. When last seen, Patton was dressed in a red, long-sleeve, buttondown-the-front shirt with black stripes, and blue jeans.

At about 5 p.m., the sheriff's office Geary County Sheriff's deputies search a train Sunday for Anthony ■ See JAIL, Page 14 Patton, an escaped inmate, south of Junction City.

Guidelines set for ticket sales

By Becky Ives Staff Writer

Tickets for the 1988-89 men's basketball season will go on sale Oct. 14 in conjunction with the first organized basketball practice.

The Athletic Ticket Task

Force, organized during the 1987-88 school year to set guidelines for ticket sales, established the October date for basketball ticket sales. The task force also presented a seating proposal to the KSU Athletic Department for the students

David Whetstone, junior in preveterinary medicine and chairman of the task force, said the nonreserved seating will split the court with faculty, and reserved seating will be directly behind the non-reserved seats. There will be 6,000 student tickets available for the 13,500-seat Bramlage Coliseum.

The 11-member task force consisted of four people who lived in greek houses, four people residing residents halls, and three people living in off-campus housing. Three members of the task force were also ICAT members.

"The task force was organized to be a good mixture of students,"

Whetstone said. "The main criteria (to be a member) was their living groups."

The task force is now the Athletic Ticket Sales Committee and it will meet after ticket sales are complete to discuss any changes that may need to be made. The committee will also be responsible for monitoring tents when camping out for tickets begins.

The traditional practice of camping out for tickets was discussed by the task force. They established the following

A group may hold a place in line for five people while each person may purchase 20 tickets. There will be no limit on the time for camping out. ■ There will be random role call to ensure that all members of the camp out are present. "The length of the camp out is determined only by the first group who sets camp," Whetstone said.

"Role call can be taken 24 hours a day, so that will hopefully be a limiting factor."

The committee members are hoping that camping out for tickets will be limited to two weeks.

Student reaction to the guidelines set by the task force has been minimal, Whetstone said.

BRIEFLY ""WORLD

Poland officials may be fired

WARSAW, Poland - Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski on Sunday called for national reconciliation and said top government officials may be fired for failing to deal with the strongest wave of strikes since 1981.

But the two-day meeting of the Communist Party's Central Committee ended without any immediate recommendations for changes in Prime Minister Zbigniew Messner's government.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was slightly injured in a scuffle with police. Troops blocked about 400 protesters trying to march on the strikebound Lenin shipyard in Gdansk, where Walesa founded the independent union federation in 1980.

Talks ended a stubborn mine strike in the south, but 10 strikes continued at ports, shipyards, factories and one mine. There were no reports of police attempts to dislodge workers in occupation strikes.

Solidarity estimated about 8,500 people still were occupying workplaces, striking for higher pay and legalization of Solidarity, the Soviet bloc's only independent union federation.

Officials: Bees coming to U.S.

TAPACHULA, Mexico - Africanized "killer bees" are spreading north and will arrive in the United States in less than two years despite efforts to stop them or alter their behavior, officials say.

The bees killed one resident of Tapachula, a town near the Guatemalan border, when a man tripped on an unseen hive. They also have harassed herds of cattle and made grazing difficult as far as 650 feet from a hive.

The Africanized bees are descendants of African bees that escaped during an experiment in Brazil. They mate with local bees, spawning new generations that are more aggressive and dangerous to handle, make less honey and pollinate crops less efficiently.

"Mexico will be 'Africanized' without a doubt. It is a fact we cannot change," said Dr. Martha Noemi Zapata, president of the Tapachula Agricultural Association, in a recent interview. She said the bees will continue north "as far as the cold allows."

"Hundreds of hives migrate to the north, but we don't know how many," said beekeeper Gil Tobias, covered from head to toe with Africanized bees as he demonstrated new safety procedures.

Firefighters gain momentum

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. - A second day of calm weather Sunday in Yellowstone National Park put firefighters ahead in their war against forest fires and temperatures almost down to freezing slowed flames in Montana.

"Basically, things are pretty calm because the weather is giving us a break," said fire information officer Sue Consolo in Montana.

Fires also continued burning in forests and grassland in Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Utah.

Yellowstone officials said the fires that had charred about 450,000 acres of the park had grown little from Saturday.

Indians give up reservation

TACOMA, Wash. - The Puyallup Indian Tribe has voted overwhelmingly to end years of negotiations and accept a $162 million offer in return for giving up claim to one-time reservation land that includes parts of Tacoma.

"The agreement works to everyone's benefit," Gabriel Landry of the Puyallup Tribal Council said after Saturday's 319-162

A legal battle for the disputed land "might've taken 20 or 30 years," and would be expensive, Landry added. He said he also believed Puyallups would've been subjected to an anti-Indian backlash if they'd taken the various government bodies involved

At issue is who owns what within the boundaries of the old reservation, which includes parts of downtown Tacoma, the city's northeast side and the Tacoma Tideflats, now home of the booming Port of Tacoma, the nation's 16th largest port.

Treaties dating from the 1850s gave the Puyallups a reservation of about 18,000 acres. Over the years, holdings dwindled as land allotted to individual members was sold in what tribal historians say often were shady or fraudulent deals.

Two decades ago, about all that was left was a 35-acre cemetery. But tribal activists fought the state and local governments over treaty rights and land claims, and vigorous enrollment efforts boosted the tribe's membership from a low point of about 400. Today, the tribe has about 1,500 members.

Baby boomer shows win

PASADENA, Calif. - ABC's baby boomer shows "thirtysomething," the ensemble drama on people in their 30s struggling in the 1980s, and "The Wonder Years," a 1960s nostalgia comedy, won as best series at the 40th annual Emmy Awards

Tyne Daly won her fourth Emmy for lead actress in the police drama "Cagney & Lacey" and Michael J. Fox of "Family Ties" won his third as lead actor in a comedy series.

Richard Kiley was picked as best lead actor in a drama for the canceled but highly acclaimed series "A Year in the Life," and he chastised NBC for the "corporate myopia that killed a

John Larroquette won his fourth straight Emmy as best supporting actor in the comedy "Night Court."

Beatrice Arthur joined her two "Golden Girls" co-stars, previous winners Rue McClanahan and Betty White, in picking up the Emmy for best actress in a comedy series. Estelle Getty, who plays the feisty matriarch on the NBC series, won as best supporting actress.

Larry Drake picked up an award for best supporting actor in a drama series for his sensitive portrayal of a mentally retarded office boy on "L.A. Law."

That was the only award won by "L.A. Law," last year's big winner at the Emmys during the televised presentation Sunday night. No one show dominated the awards.

Patricia Wettig, the struggling young mother with a rocky marriage on "thirtysomething," won as best supporting actress in Best lead performances in a miniseries or special went to Jason Robards in NBC's "Inherit the Wind," and Jessica Tandy for "Foxfire: Hallmark Hall of Fame" on CBS.

British actress Jane Seymour's portrayal of Maria Callas on ABC's "Onassis: The Richest Man in the World," won her an Emmy for best supporting actress in a miniseries or special. John Shea won the supporting actor award in that category for his role in ABC's "Baby M."

The contract U.S. post office located in Dykstra Hall will reduce its hours of operation beginning Sept. 1 as a result of total operation costs exceeding its federal stipend.

The Manhattan Federal Post Office supports the contract U.S. post office located in Dykstra Hall with a $14,000 per year stipend. The total operation costs for the branch office during the 1988 fiscal year were $26,854 - almost twice the stipend.

Rising operating costs and a denial by the Manhattan branch to increase the stipend has forced the University to reduce the operating hours to help cut costs. # Wheat exports discussed

From Staff and Wire Reports

WASHINGTON - Three consumer groups said Sunday they have asked the Agriculture Department to stop subsidizing wheat sales to foreign countries, including the Soviet Union and China, to avoid depleting drought-damaged domestic supplies.

In a letter to Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng, the three groups said that continuing wheat export subsidies under the government's Export Enhancement Program "may further jeopardize the supply of this essential food grain" and push food prices even higher.

The letter was signed by representatives of the Consumers Union, Community Nutrition Institute and the Consumer Federation of America, all based in Washington.

However, Marc Johnson, professor of agricultural economics, said that an end to subsidies would not necessarily bring down food prices and could potentially hurt Kansas wheat farmers.

"Food prices have not gone up during the drought, and would not go down significantly if the programs were stopped," Johnson said, adding that major swings in past wheat prices have not proved to cause major changes in the price of food. Drought has reduced U.S. crop production sharply this year, including wheat, and has eaten deeply into reserve stockpiles.

Although grain prices have risen sharply as supplies are reduced, Agriculture Department officials have said repeatedly that there are ample stocks to meet domestic and foreign demands until new harvests are ready in 1989.

But the consumer groups said that if wheat export subsidies continue at their recent pace, it could result in "a rise in food prices greater than now expected in 1989" because of this year's drought.

"At the very least, USDA should suspend general use of the Export Enhancement Program for wheat and other food and feed commodities in the year ahead," the letter said. "Next year is a period of great uncertainty."

The consumer interests told Lyng they were concerned "about the reports that you are subsidizing flour exports." They cited an Aug. 17 subsidy of between $93 and $103 a ton for a 198,000-ton shipment of flour to Egypt, a total subsidy of about $20

"It is hard to justify any subsidy on grain, but there is no economic justification for subsidizing U.S. milling companies whatsoever," they said.

Under the Export Enhancement Program, private companies are given free surplus commodities owned by the government to compensate them for selling designated products - wheat and other items - to selected foreign countries at reduced

The idea behind the program, which was authorized by Congress in the 1985 farm law, is to sell commodities at prices that meet those of competitors, notably the European Economic Community, which also uses subsidies to cut export prices.

Since June 4, 1985, EEP has been used in more than 100 "initiatives" or arrangements with dozens of countries to sell nearly 67 million metric tons of U.S. farm products, including 44.2 million tons of wheat, 2.5 million tons of flour, 5.96 million tons of barley, lesser amounts of sorghum, rice, poultry feed, vegetable oil, frozen poultry and live dairy cattle, and 385.7 million eggs.

In all, the total sales value of those items as of Aug. 18 was about $5.5 billion. The estimated value of the EEP bonuses, or subsidies, totaled

Persian Gulf peace talks end

By The Associated Press

GENEVA - The fragile Persian Gulf peace talks ran into trouble Sunday after Iraq blamed Iran for sabotaging the negotiations and said it was ready to confront any Iranian aggression.

Sunday's negotiations ended after six hours of talks with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar meeting separately with representatives from both sides.

The talks were at least temporarily downgraded from the political level to a technical level.

Foreign ministers Tariq Aziz of Iraq and Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran withdrew earlier from the talks Sunday, the third day of negotiations, but their delegations remained until the meetings ended for the day.

Perez de Cuellar told reporters he was trying to "build bridges" and avert a breakdown.

"We cannot say now that we have reached a deadlock," he said in response to questions. He said difficulties had arisen over troop withdrawals and the possibility of deadlock always exists.

"I hope we will move back to the ministerial level as soon as the disagreement is settled," he added.

Iran will "face from our side full preparedness to confront any behavior of aggressive aspect," said a statement by Iraq's deputy foreign minister, Sadoun Hamadi. The statement was released in Baghdad and distributed here.

Aziz left the U.N. offices after three hours of consultations Sunday. 'Velayati departed an hour

U.N. Spokesman Francois Giuliani said the negotiations were expected to continue Monday at a lower, technical level. "The secretary-general thinks we are likely to be here for a long time."

Aziz departed shortly after the hardline statement by Hamadi was received from Baghdad. It declared Iraqi sovereignty over the disputed Shatt al-Arab waterway and blamed Iran for continued tension in the region.

The talks between Velayati and Aziz are the first official contact between the two sides since war broke out in September 1980.

More students should trigger higher faculty compensation

Faculty and administrators on the K-State campus are contemplating what new and exciting things they will do with the extra money they have earned from increased enrollment.

Provost James Coffman, the University's chief academic officer, said he wants to spend the money on the University infrastructure, i.e., Farrell Library and computing services. President Wefald says he wants to spend the money on improving the academic quality of K-State — whatever that means.

But what about the existing programs that cannot maintain current academic quality because of overcrowding in the classroom or in the laboratory? What is being done to compensate instructors who now have an increased work load?

William Feyerharm, associate dean of arts and sciences, only expected one-half as many freshmen as his college actually received. He admits that the system is showing some "strain."

As an example of this strain, all 100 sections of English Composition I classes are already closed. If each student enrolled in a Comp I section is asked to turn in an average of eight papers and each class size were to be extended from 23 to 26, then the instructor must deal with 208 papers per section—an increase of 24 papers.

Twenty-four composition papers, many hand-written, are a big increase in workload. Keep in mind some instructors teach several sections of English composition.

Robert Grindell, head of the department of English, said he doesn't think the classes should have more than 20 students enrolled in order to maintain the effectiveness of the teacher-student relationship.

If the overcrowding is unavoidable, then the University should first focus on ways to compensate the instructors who have received an increase in workload. Once that is accomplished, they can decide how to divide the spoils of victory.

Faculty and staff were hired to create the best learning environment within their abilities. They should not be expected to compromise their effectiveness and accept the University's poor planning as part of the job, without compensation.

Dukakis comic book too much

Commentary

here I was, sitting in the cafe Espresso Royale relaxing, minding my own business and having an Italian soda, when lo and behold, in through the door walked my long-time acquaintance, the ultra-religious Billy Fundy. He tugged at his tie and looked around at the assortment of goatees, short and long hair styles, and tiedyed clothing. He hugged his Bible more tightly to his chest and, without looking anywhere except forward, proceeded directly to my table.

"Good afternoon, D.L.," he said. A waitress asked Billy if she could get him anything. He jumped and said, "No!" The waitress quickly retreated.

"Good afternoon, Billy," I said. "What brings you to this 'den of iniquity?"

"A higher purpose," he said.
"You're not going to attempt to proselytize in here are you?" I asked.

"No," he said. "Although, from the looks of these people, someone should. That girl's hair is shorter than mine." Billy pointed to a blond woman by the door.

"Are you going to start up a Bible reading series to counteract the poetry reading series they had in here last year?" I said.

"No," he said.

"Then why are you here?" I said.
"To share a joyous occasion with you," he said, as a big smile came to his face.

Uh oh, I thought. The only occasions Billy looked forward to with joy were the second coming and the election of a Republican president.

"What joyous occasion is that?" I said, looking cautiously out the window at the sky. "I just bought my first comic book," he said.

I looked back at Billy. "You bought what?" I said.
"My first comic book" Billy said his

"My first comic book," Billy said, his smile now a childish grin.

"You're not the comic book type, Billy," I said.
"I know, but when the Rev. Falwell advertised this one on his television show, I just had to have it," he said.
"The Rev. Jerry Falwell?" I said.

"The Rev. Jerry Falwell?" I said.
Billy nodded. Uh oh, I thought again.
"So we're not talking about a Superman or frowned. "Not even Teen-age Mutant Ninja Turtles?" I said.

"Teen what?" Billy said.

"Never mind," I said.
"Tell me, what garba ..., what stuff is Falwell selling this week?"

"It's a comic book that introduces you and I to the real Michael Dukakis," Billy said. "It tells us about his incestuous relationships with his family members, his tendencies toward bestiality, and his hatred of children." "I see, this is a comic book for the entire family," I said.

"Of course, everyone should know what kind of man that ... that Democrat is," Billy said, waving his Bible at me like a sword.

"Do you normally encourage your children to read things like that?" I said. "You don't let them read Heavy Metal or Penthouse Forum do you?"

"Of course not," he said. "Those magazines are pornographic pieces of swill whose publishers and readers should, and will, burn in the fires of eternal hell," Billy said, swinging the Bible in a figure eight right in front of my chest.

"What is the difference between those magazines and your comic book?" I asked, sliding out of range of Billy's Bible.

"This comic book is being used for religious purposes," he said. Billy put the Bible down. "Besides, it's all perfectly legal."

down. "Besides, it's all perfectly legal."
"I'm so pleased," I said. "Why is it legal?"
"It's a satire," he said.

"Oh, I get it now," I said. "This goes all the way back to that slander lawsuit Jerry Falwell instigated against Larry Flynt."

"Exactly," Billy said. "Flynt may be doomed to eternal damnation and hell fire, but he did teach Falwell a thing or two about satire"

"I'm sure he did. But does the Rev. Jerry Falwell normally use pornographers as his role models?" I said.

"Of course not," Billy snapped.

Jimmy Swaggart did," I teased.
"But this is legal," he said.

"Of course it is,"
I said. "Isn't Falwell afraid that this comic book will hurt Dukakis' family as well as Dukakis himself? I seem to remember that one of Falwell's biggest beefs against the Flynt satire was that it also hurt Mrs. Falwell and the little Falwells."

"Yes, but that was before the satire was found to be legal," he said. "Now that it's legal, it doesn't bother them at all."

"I see. So Kitty Dukakis isn't bothered by this comic book?" I said. "Even when it depicts her husband standing under an abortion clinic sign dressed as a doctor and holding a vacuum cleaner hose?"

"Of course not," Billy said. "I'll bet she and her husband get quite a few laughs from it. It's all perfectly legal."

"And since it's legal, that makes it right," I

"Of course it does. If something wasn't right, they wouldn't make it legal, and if it wasn't right, Jerry Falwell wouldn't have anything to do with it."

"Of course not, Billy. Of course not."

Inaccurate editorial

Editor,

There were errors in the Collegian editorial concerning the Department of Housing in the Aug. 26 issue. No individual who signed a contract for regular housing was assigned to overflow. When all rooms were filled, applicants were informed that space was not available on campus and their contracts could not be processed. Students were permitted to sign contracts for temporary housing only after they were encouraged to seek off-campus housing and the nature of the overflow accommodations had been explained.

All those in temporary housing requested it.

On Aug. 22, the Greek Affairs office was notified that the housing department would cancel the contract of any male who wished to move into a chapter house. There is no shortage of residence hall space for women. In addition, contracts have been and will continue to be cancelled for any male resident as long as an overflow situation exists.

The editorial does a disservice to the many employees and students who have worked so diligently that our food service has been ranked No. 1 in the nation and the residence halls are nationally known for their excellence. The Department of Housing will continue to work to provide the outstanding accommodations and programs for which it is noted.

Fees shouldn't rise

Editor

In Friday's Collegian (Aug. 26), an article, "Tuition may rise," said the administration has three reasons for a significant tuition increase. (1)State support percentage is higher than the national average and (2)student support is lower than average. That's one, not two reasons. (3)Students have pocket money to spend. So, the administration thinks they should have our money only because it's there. And they're afraid of being "different" than other states, as if other states are automatically right and we're wrong. Come on, administration, you'll have to do better than

Women now joining area Kiwanis clubs

By The Collegian Staff

The Kiwanis Club, an international service organization, has been allowing women into the traditionally all-male organization for one year.

A Kansas City, Mo., chapter just voted in its first two women members last week.

Locally, the decision caused mixed reactions among members.

"I feel it needed to be done. We are a service, not fraternal organization and the change will strengthen our club," said Doug Meloan, acting president of the Manhattan Kiwanis. Meloan said the majority of members support the entrance of women into the organization.

The club secretary, Jay McGehe, has mixed feelings about allowing women into the club.

"It will boost membership. As long as the women are active, its acceptable," McGehe said.

McGehe said there is a slight case of reverse discrimination because there are some womens' clubs that would never allow men to join.

There are two Kiwanis chapters in Manhattan. Because of time conflicts in the evening, a group formed called the Solar Club, which meets at noon.

Internationally, the Kiwanis have 8,200 clubs, 6,900 in the United States. A vote on the international level made it a requirement for all clubs to allow women as members.

"The Kiwanis are a service organization aimed at helping the youth in the community," Meloan said.

The club involves itself with 4-H, Boys and Girls State and various scouting programs, he said.

Two main fundraisers for the club are a pancake feed and a dine-out coupon book, Meloan said.

"The money raised is put into the budget for later use. If a youth needs money for camp, we help them out," Meloan said.

The local Manhattan club, founded in 1922, recently celebrated a 65th anniversary. The noon and evening clubs each have about 60 members, of which three are women.

Four months ago an all-female chapter was formed in Fort Scott, McGehe said. The town also has an all-male chapter.

Debate team to work for ranking

By Christina Doherty Collegian Reporter

The K-State debate club was ranked fifth nationally for the 1987-88 season and the members hope to finish within the top five again this year, said Todd Graham, one of the club's four assistant coaches.

The club's future is bright becuase all of the members of last year's club are returning, Graham said, adding the club does take members who have not had experience in debate.

"We try to recruit experienced debaters who have debated in high school. If they are starting as a novice, they are starting behind," he said.

Thirty students comprise 15 teams on this year's club, which is the largest debate club K-State has ever had. Debaters are enrolled in a class where they hold meetings and practice for competitions. Members of the squad receive credit for their participation in the club.

There are eight debaters new to the K-State team this year.

"We are really pleased with the new debaters that we have," Graham said. "They look really good and I think they will add a lot to the squad." Along with Graham, team members say they feel positive about the club's upcoming season and new members.

"We've got a good group of freshmen and new students on the team along with a great group of returning people, so things are really looking good for us," said Dan Molden, sophomore in architectural engineering and a returning debater.

The club will be facing some strong competition this season.

strong competition this season.

During the 1987-88 season, the debate club had financial problems.

After unsuccessful fund-raising efforts, the University provided some funding for the club.

"(Our current budget) is probably the healthiest budget we have had in a long time," said Ed Schiappa, instructor of speech and director of the club.

Depending on how the club is doing, and how many members the team maintains, the club may have financial difficulties in the spring, he said

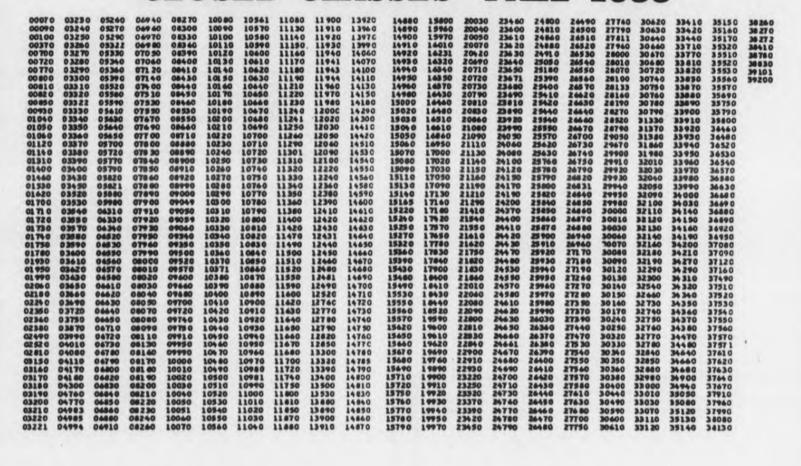

"President Wefald's support has been crucial to our survival. We are deeply appreciative to this. Without his support we would not have achieved our national ranking as fifth," Schiappa said.

Crime awareness ensures safety

By Kevin Kramer Collegian Reporter

The K-State campus, like any other community or neighborhood, is not exempt from crime. Recognizing the problem of crime on campus, according to the K-State Police, is a step toward reducing crime on campus and assuring student safety.

"Campus safety begins with you - the students, faculty and staff," said Lieutenant James Tubach, campus police investigator and crime prevention officer. "We (police), as (with) other law enforcement departments, cannot be everywhere at all times."

"People don't think about prevention until there is a problem," said Richard Herrman, campus police investigator. "Our biggest crime now, at the beginning of the school year, is petty theft - books, wallets, parking permits, the taking of misplaced property," he said. Tubach said, "We are receiving 8 to 10 reported thefts a day, with the beginning of classes, and not all thefts are being reported. The number of thefts will cut down as we get into the semester, averaging 2 to 3 a

Herrman said backpacks are one of the most-stolen items of personal property on campus. When left unattended, a backpack filled with a variety of personal property, books, indentification and money becomes an invitation to theft, he said.

"The biggest problem involving campus theft is unlocked doors, both in the residence halls and in buildings on campus," he said.

"The residence hall staffs do a good job in securing and checking the outside doors," Tubach said, "but the problem arises with individuals forgetting to lock their rooms - students thinking they only will be gone for a few minutes, and that no one will notice the unlocked door, find upon their return a wallet or a purse

"On occassion we find doors left open or unlocked on campus buildings. Usually it's a graduate student or faculty member leaving a door open for a friend or student planning to come by later. But who else may have come in as well?"

Both Tubach and Herrman emphasized that campus safety and crime prevention begins with each individual.

"Take an extra minute to check and make sure your door is locked, or carry that backpack with you at all times," Herrman said, "The time you take now will help save a great deal of time and misery later.'

'We, as a state agency," Tubach said, "receive no direct funding for crime prevention programs. We do what we can by cooperatively borrowing from other sources and agencies throughout the area.

"We have available, and offer to any group or individual, programs and information on a variety of topics crime prevention, personal protection, rape prevention, what to do after a rape, and general safety tips."

The department, Tubach said, has hand-held engravers available on a check-out basis for marking personal

"There is a reason why we don't provide regularly scheduled programs for living groups," Herrman said. "It's because people suddenly begin to think there is a major problem with crime on campus when you start presenting safety programs. The message we would like to get across to everyone is that the reason for presenting programs is to educate and prevent the problem of crime before it happens.'

KKK stages Chicago

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO - Hooded Ku Klux Klansmen preaching white supremacy staged a rally Sunday near a multiracial gathering commemorating Martin Luther King Jr., as hundreds of club-carrying police tried to keep the crowds under control.

The atmosphere was tense in Marquette Park, where similar rallies set off violence and resulted in 17 arrests two years ago.

"We had no idea that we'd both be here on the same day, but we are damn proud to be here for the white race," an unidentified klansman wearing a white hood told an allwhite crowd of about 500. S-me members of the crowd held Nazi flags and wore "White Power" T-

A line of uniformed policemen and wooden barriers kept the crowd about 40 feet from the stage.

About 800 police officers, some on horses and other carrying clubs, filled the park and separated the KKK rally from the multiracial group that gathered about a half-mile away for a later rally.

"It might be legal to give (the KKK) a permit to spread hatred and violence, but it's immoral," said Dee D. Smith Simmons, an organizer of the Dream Day Quest.

NEW YORK — About 40 percent of women who separated recently while in their 30s will never remarry, nor will about 70 percent of women who separated when older than 40, a new study projects.

And while 72 percent of recently separated women will eventually go to the altar again, half will still be single seven years after the split, the projections suggest.

Bumpass, a sociology professor at the University of Wisconsin in Madison, developed the projections with colleagues James Sweet and Teresa Castro. He spoke in a telephone interview before presenting the study Sunday in Atlanta at the annual meet-The estimates, for women who ing of the American Sociological Association.

The projections assume that remarriage trends observed during the early 1980s will continue for the next 20 years. But remarriage rates have been declining, so the projections may turn out to overestimate remarriages, Bumpass said.

He also said the projections do not differentiate between women who seek to remarry and those who do not, nor do they count as remarried women who are simply living with a

Jordan off to better start in NFL

By Chris Wilhelm

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - If a better start leads to a better finish, then former K-State tailback Tony Jordan might just have the season of his life in the National Football League.

Before his senior year at K-State, Jordan had car problems on the way to the Wildcats' training camp and was several days late. This was not the case with his new team, the Phoenix Cardinals.

"I definitely got to Phoenix on time," Jordan said. "There was no way I would have been late for spring training. I retired my old Cadillac and bought myself a new Toyota."

Although his senior season at K-State was not a particularly notable one - Jordan gained only 734 yards on 169 attempts - he was taken in the fifth round by the Phoenix

Cardinals. "It's hard to believe I'm (in the NFL)," he said. "I was just hoping to get a chance. I didn't have a good season last year. I got hurt early and never really had a chance at a great season. So far things have worked out really well for me in Phoenix." While Jordan seems to be a favorite in Phoenix, he will be sorely missed by his college coach, Stan Parrish. Without the talents of Jordan in his backfield, Parrish said the Wildcats will be forced to throw the ball more this season,

"Last year, (we tried to run because) we thought we were a little bit bigger and stronger and because

If Jordan's preseason accomplishments are any indication of what he can accomplish during the regular season, then NFC East teams had better be ready. In the three preseason games in which he handled the ball, Jordan rushed 30 times for 184 yards, an average of 6.1 yards per carry.

Jordan credits his time at K-State with helping him make the necessary adjustments and having the right mental attitude to play in the good player. I think he's proving and not give up," Jordan said. "I playing the same position and our running plays are pretty much the same, so that makes it easier for me,

> Some of the biggest changes Jordan must face is Phoenix's heat and the increased distance from home.

"We work out in some real heat. It's hot down in Phoenix. It's also a long way from home. (After attending) K-State and now (moving to Arizona), it seems like I keep getting farther from home," said Jordan, a native of Rochester, N.Y.

"I call my mom twice a week, all the time. My family is getting real excited," he added. "If I make the team, they are all going to go to the first game in Cincinnati.'

As far as his chances of making the 47-man roster go, Jordan tried "K-State helped me because it not to be overly optimistic about his we had Tony," Parrish said. "We Jordan carried the ball eight times for 22 yards Thursday and has relied a lot on Tony, and Tony is a rushed 30 times for 184 yards in three preseason games.

"(The coaches) have been pretty learned a lot playing there. I'm also positive," Jordan said. "They tell me that there are a lot of things I do real well and that there are some things I have to work on. If it doesn't work out for me here, I feel I've shown enough that I can play somewhere else. But I really want to play in > Phoenix." Cardinals' head coach Gene Stallings didn't hide his optimism for Jordan following Phoenix's 41-21 defeat of Kansas City Thursday night in Arrowhead Stadium, even though Jordan carried the ball just eight times for 22 yards.

"Tony Jordan is going to make our football team, there is no question about that. I think he's been an excellent pick for us. He's a strong runner who's performed for us every time we've put him out there," Stallings said. "He is a good football player and I think he will be a good one for a long time."

As far as his past is concerned, Jordan's biggest problem has been fighting rumors that he doesn't play as hard as he can.

"People have always criticized me for not running hard," Jordan said. "I always had a bad reputation for being hurt or not running hard. I find those stories hard to deal with because in the last two seasons (at K-State), I only missed one game."

No matter what happens, Jordan remains positive. His backup plans, should the NFL not pan out, include returning to K-State to achieve his master's degree in social science and perhaps coaching.

But after a season of hard luck and injury at K-State, Jordan's football career is up and running.

Coach disagrees with predictions of cellar finish

By The Associated Press

PHOENIX, Ariz. - The Phoenix Cardinals may have moved to a new city, but most NFL prognosticators still believe they'll wind up where their St. Louis predecessors usually did — at the bottom of the NFC East.

Almost every preseason poll projects the Cardinals to finish last or next-to-last in the five-team division this year.

But try telling that to third-year Phoenix coach Gene Stallings.

"I think we're a playoff contender. I said that at the very first press conference I had here (in March) and I still believe it," Stallings said. "I feel we're going to be competitive every week. We've got a chance to win every Sunday."

Sports Illustrated predicts the Cardinals will wind up 4-12.

Although Stallings said he doesn't have time to read any magazine or newspaper article about his team, he reacts to the news with distain.

"I'd rather be picked first than last. But the game is settled in the arena, not in Sports Illustrated or the newspapers," he said. "Us being last, that's not a consensus of opinion.

"We're in a tough division. We play Washington twice and the New York Giants twice. That's the last two world champions right there. Dallas is going to be better this year and the (Philadelphia) Eagles are on the upswing. I think we are, too." The Cardinals, who haven't had a winning season since 1984 and haven't qualified for the playoffs since 1982, were 7-8 last year. They just missed making the playoffs by losing 21-16 to the Cowboys in the regular-season finale. "What kept us out? Washington beat us twice. We split with the other teams in the division. If we had split with Washington, we would have been in the playoffs," said Stallings. "The key for any team is to split with the people in your division and beat the teams you're supposed to beat outside your division."

According to the NFL experts, Phoenix isn't supposed to beat anybody this season. That doesn't sit well with the players.

"First of all, preseason polls are ridiculous. They're all guesstimates," said Pro Bowl special teams player Ron Wolfley. "A new year is a new year. It doesn't bother me. It's one man's opinion. That's something we've had to fight all our life."

"It's good to be an underdog," said veteran wide receiver J.T. Smith. "But I'd like to be picked a little higher than that."

"What it may do is take some pressure off us," Pro Bowl kick returner Vai Sikahema said. "I think when we wind up in the playoffs, people will not put much credibility in the magazine."

"They don't have respect for us. I could care less. To me, it's just a big hype," said veteran linebacker E.J. Junior. "It doesn't matter until who goes to the Super Bowl and who comes out on top. We're going to be better than 4-12. Go ahead and underestimate us."

"I think we can be 10-6 this year," said veteran offensive tackle Luis Sharpe, another Pro Bowler. "I think we have the talent."

The Cardinals ranked 25th in the 28-team league in total defense and pass defense last season, giving up 358.9 yards total offense and 225.5 passing yards per game.

They gave up 30 touchdowns through the air and intercepted just 14 passes — nine by the defensive backs.

"We have to improve on the turnover ratio," Stallings said. "We didn't get much production out of the secondary last year."

In the preseason, Phoenix went 1-3 for their eighth losing exhibition record since 1961.

But Stallings said a 41-21 win last Thursday night at Kansas City in the finale may have snapped his club out of the doldrums.

Veteran quarterback Neil Lomax finally looking sharp and secondyear defensive back Tim McDonald intercepting two passes and returned them a combined 61 yards to set up touchdowns.

Lomax, who was 22-of-56 for 258 yards with no touchdowns and three interceptions in the first three preseason losses, was 12-of-15 for 92 yards and one touchdown in the Chiefs game.

"This was a real confidence booster for me personally because I'd had a terrible preseason overall," said Lomax.

A two-time Pro Bowler, Lomax threw for a league-high 3,387 yards in 1987 as the Cardinals had the Stallings said Lomax, an eightyear pro, will start Sunday's regular-season opener at Cincinatti with 10-year veteran Cliff Stoudt as the backup.

Stoudt was 47-of-79 for 460 yards and four TDs with three interceptions in the preseason.

Rookie running back Tony Jordan, a fifth-round draft pick out of K-State, won a roster spot by rushing for 184 yards and three touchdown on 30 carries.

Second-round pick Tony Jettery, who appeared in danger of being cut just two weeks ago, had a 1-yard touchdown reception in a loss to Minnesota and scored on an 80-yard run against Kansas City to apparently earn a roster spot.

'We got most of the things we set out to do done in the preseason," Stallings said. "We got a little better every week, which is what you look for. Our goal now is to make the playoffs. A lot of people say that's unrealistic, but I don't think so."

Thompson makes right move by cutting Mourning

Buried deep in Sunday's sports sections - probably so deep that many of you may have missed it was an item in small print regarding the U.S. Olympic basketball team.

Those sports fans out there who read the "Transactions" section likely found an entry very similar to this: "U.S. OLYMPIC BASKETBALL TEAM - Forward/center Alonzo Mourning, Georgetown, cut from squad."

No big deal, right? Just another player being cut from the Olympic team, right? Just one more and Mitch Richmond is in, right?

Two "wrongs" and one "right." It's true, with Mourning's exit Richmond is all but a lock. The team has been cut to 13 players, and 12 will make the trip to Seoul, South Korea, for the games in mid-

September. But Mourning's exit is a big deal, and he's not just another player.

For those of you who haven't been following the trials closely, Georgetown's John Thompson is the coach of the U.S. Olympic team who will be carrying the red, white and blue into Scoul in two weeks.

Mourning was the only player just out of high school invited to the trials. He was invited by Thompson, who will be his coach for the next four years (provided he doesn't declare hardship).

Thompson, the Georgetown coach, and Mourning, his prized recruit, were together from the start of the trials. Together, that was, until late Saturday afternoon.

That's when it was announced that Thompson, having two players to pare from his squad before the Sept. 2 deadline, had given Mourning his walking papers.

Thompson made the right decision, though there are doubters out there - myself included - that may have questioned some of his motives along the way.

Classes open at Georgetown duced winners, and Georgetown has today, and by letting Mourning go now, Thompson opened the door for his prized recruit to get back to Washington, D.C., in time to be in the classroom for his first official day as a college student.

In doing so, Thompson illustrated his feelings regarding the importance of a college education. As has been well documented down through the years, Thompson wants his athletes to be students and individuals first, and products of a basketball factory a fine track record regarding graduation rates of its players.

Thompson has consistently pro-

In fact, Thompson's main academic adviser at Georgetown is traveling with the Olympic team in an attempt to monitor the class work of those non-graduates on the U.S. squad who are missing the first few weeks of class in an attempt to bring the gold back home.

So kudos go to Thompson all the way around for the way he's handled Mourning and is handling those other young men who haven't yet gra-

Finely honed athletes come in all shapes and sizes - even short and feathery with bright red combs.

Chicken flying may not be a nationally recognized sport, but do not tell that to the 25 participants in the 10th Annual Chicken Flying Contest Saturday at the Blue River Pub.

The winner of the contest, Ace, flew a whopping total of 62 feet, 9 inches after being dislodged from his 24-foot roost by a plunger. The bird's distances in the preliminary and final rounds were totaled to find the winning fowl.

Ace's owner, Tony Luginbill, senior in biology and pre-veterinary medicine, said he chose Ace from about 20 chickens at a local farm.

"I just threw them up in the air, then chose the one that flew the farthest," he said.

The best tip Luginbill has for chicken-flyers is to make sure that the chicken is pointed in the direction it needs to fly.

"Just get it in there and give it a push. The rest is up to the chicken,"

Before the event, Luginbill said he and Ace struck a bargain. "I promised her that if she won I wouldn't kill her," he said. After Ace's first-place finish, she was let loose near the pub and Luginbill picked up his trophy. One bird owner, Don Osterhaus, said participating in the contest was right up his alley. Osterhaus is a senior in animal sciences and industry; his specialty is poultry. "Most of the people who win have a lighter breed of chicken. The young ones usually do the best," he said. Keeping his own advice in mind, Osterhaus chose a pullet from a Topeka hatchery as one of his two entries. Frankie, however, did not do as well as Osterhaus had anticipated.

"Pullets usually do real good. Frankie did good the first time, but then he lost his feathers," Osterhaus Molting, he said, was not a factor he had considered.

"We did make it to the final round. That's pretty good since I just did this at the last minute," he said.

Sam, Osterhaus' second entry, did not make it to the final round.

Although some owners said they would be having their entry for Sunday dinner, Osterhaus took a more humanitarian view about Frankie.

"There were some kids there who were wanting to take some home for a pet, so I gave him to them," he said. A chicken auction Friday kicked off the weekend's events at the Blue River Pub.

The auctioneer and announcer for the contest told the crowd gathered at the pub that the chickens he was auctioning were "the best flyers we've

"These are some fantastic flyers. If I'm lying then I'm dying," he said. Mildred, the first chicken on the block, was one of the best birds the pub had to offer, he said.

Another bird auctioned, Special Delivery, is the direct descendant of Air Mail, the contest's winner in

Taiwan team wins Little League title

By The Associated Press

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. -Coach Richard Numata needed only six words to sum up Pearl City, Hawaii's, 10-0 loss to Tai Chung, Taiwan, in the championship game of the 42nd Little League World Series.

"No hit. No score. No win," Numata said.

Pearl City managed only one hit Saturday off Tai Chung pitcher Chen-Lung Yu, an infield roller by Chris Yoshimoto in the first inning, as a team from Taiwan has won its third consecutive Little League title.

The Far East entries in the series have now won five series in a row by a cumulative score of committed three errors.

56-4. They have won 18 of the last 22 Little League championships.

Marietta, Ga., was the last American team to win the title for 11-and 12-year-olds, in 1983.

Yu, a 5-foot-41/4, 134-pound right-hander, struck out 10 and walked one, retiring the last 17 batters in order in the six-inning

Wei-Chih Chen led Tai Chung's 14-hit offense against four Pearl City pitchers, going 4-for-4 with a three-run home run and four RBI.

In the finals, Tai Chung had a size advantage and showed more polish than Pearl City, which

Little Apple Triathlon canceled

By Chris Hays Sports Writer

Due to low water levels and construction at Tuttle Creek Reservoir, the sixth annual Little Apple Triath-Ion scheduled for Sept. 17 has been Construction at the Rocky Ford fishing area has caused the outlet tubes, which release water from Tuttle Creek, to be closed off. The River Pond Area, where the triathion's swimming portion was to be held, receives most of its water from lake overflow through the outlet tubes. The dry summer and the closing of the outlet tubes prompted the triathlon committee to cancel because it had no other place for the swimming portion.

Running the triathlon another weekend was also out of the question, said Joyce Halverson, assistant director of recreational services and race director.

"The lack of outflow caused a dramatic drop in the water level at the River Pond Area," Halverson said. "We thought about postponing it until after the construction was completed, but the Flint Hills Days festival is the following weekend and then Homecoming is the next weekend and by that time you have to consider the weather."

The Little Apple Triathlon was planned to consist of a 600 yard swim, a 14 mile bike-ride, and a 3.1 mile run.

Construction on Tuttle Creek Dam also caused problems, Halverson said. The committee had to re-route the bike portion of the race and ended up making it longer than its original 10.2 miles.

Halverson and her six-member committee made the decision to cancel Aug. 15. In the following week, the committee was busy mailing refunds to about 150 entrants.

'We had to make a decision so we didn't go and order masses of Tshirts and awards. We would have been sunk thousands of dollars," Halverson said. "It would also have been difficult to let people dangle from a string and have some even drive in from out-of-town and then say, 'Whoops! We can't pull this thing off.' God, we were disappointed."

Halverson said she had contacted Tuttle Creek during the spring and officials there said that they expected no problems with scheduling the event.

"I had no idea that they canceled it," said Chuck Bever, biologist in the fisheries department at Rocky Ford. "They're supposed to (start releasing water), at the latest, Sept. 16. That's what I know."

Bever said the department is rebuilding a wall that divides the river and is also building a bridge to access to the new wall.

"The project is basically to improve fishing access, to make a better fisheries habitat, to improve angler harvest and to, of course, maintain the dam," Bever said.

Halverson said: "Most people from the Manhattan area have driven by out at Tuttle and they understand our dilemma. Some say it looks like a bomb hit out there, but I guess in the Wildlife and Parks Department of order to fix something you first have to tear it down.

"The out-of-towners haven't been quite so understanding and they usually give us a piece of their mind, but I guess it just goes with the territory."

Halverson said the committee had not yet started planning for a 1989 triathlon because they usually try to plan it around K-State's home football games, and that schedule has not been finalized.

KC opens against Browns

'optimistic' about Chiefs

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Injuries and a disappointing end to the preseason shroud Kansas City optimism as the Chiefs prepare for their second season under Coach Frank Gansz.

The defense and special teams also must be a concern to Kansas City after the Chiefs ended the preseason Thursday by taking a 41-21 beating from the Phoenix Cardinals, one week after Kansas City blew a lead and allowed themselves to be tied by the Green Bay Packers.

"Overall, I'm optimistic," Chiefs quarterback Bill Kenney said before the Cardinals game. "I think this may be the best team we've had since I've been here."

Gansz remained upbeat afterward. He must trim 13 players from the roster to get to the 47-player limit on Tuesday, and then open the season Sunday against the Cleveland Browns at Arrowhead Stadium. "I am not going to let one night diminish what we have accomplished all training camp long," Gansz said. "I think once we get down to the 47-man roster, we are going to be all right."

But the Chiefs backfield is devastated by injury. Fullback Christian Okoye remains out with a broken thumb suffered in training camp. Halfback Herman Heard suffered a separated shoulder in the Phoenix game and probably won't play against the Browns.

Paul Palmer, last year's No. 1 draft choice and the leading preseason rusher, sat out the Cardinals game with a wrist injury. Larry Moriarty was hurried back from arthroscopic knee surgery to play against Phoenix.

Kenney will start the season as the Chiefs quarterback — a firm decision on the position coming for the first time in years. Kenney completed 66 percent of his passes in the preseason and threw for two touchdowns. Kansas City acquired Steve Ingram and Rich Baldinger.

DeBerg in the offseason from New Orleans, and he appeared to be threatening Kenney until he threw two interceptions to the Cardinals. The Chiefs appear stronger at quarterback with DeBerg than with Todd Blackledge, the disappointing No. 1 pick who was traded to Pittsburgh. Gansz will have to make a decision between Frank Seurer and No. 11 pick Danny McManus for his third quarterback.

The Chiefs are solid at wide receiver with veterans Carlos Carson and Stephone Paige, both of whom played well in the four exhibition games.

The Cardinals ran at Smith on a 16-play, 80-yard drive that led to a touchdown. Phoenix quarterback Neil Lomax was never pressured in the first half as he completed 12 of 15 passes for 92 yards.

All-pro nose guard Bill Maas anchors the defensive line with Mike Bell at the other end.

Taste trip offered

In the spring, students will have a chance to sample bakery products from across Europe through a 17-day study tour offered by the Department of Grain Science and Industry.

"Europe has a long tradition in producing bakery foods," said Joseph Ponte Jr., professor of grain science and industry and coordinator of the tour.

The group will travel to large and small bakeries in England, Belgium, France, Holland and West Germany via motor coach. A number of free days for shopping or sightseeing are also in the itinerary, Ponte said.

The tour is scheduled for April 2-19, 1989. The cost is $2,350, which includes transportation from Kansas City, hotels, some meals and side tours.

"On this tour (participants) will have an opportunity to see the production of many variety breads, as well as many types of pastry items. We'll tour a number of retail bakeries and also some industrial-type operations," Ponte

The group will also visit ingredient manufacturers, including a yeast factory in Delft, Holland, and the Flour Millers and Bakers Research Association in England. The highlight of the tour is the international baking exhibition in Dusseldorf, West Germany, Ponte said.

One hour of college credit can be earned through the department by writing a paper upon return to the United States. Although keeping a journal is not required for the duration of the tour, Ponte said it would be a good idea.

"The tour was offered once before, five or six years ago, with great success," he said. "Seven college students attended with five or six from (K-State). But most of the 40 people on the tour were from the baking industry (nationwide)."

A deposit of $175 is due as soon as possible in order to reserve a place. The remaining balance will be due Feb. 1. Thirty-five places are still available on the tour, Ponte said.

"If the individual is not able to participate, the $175 deposit is refundable until Feb. 1," said David Garvin of Creative Travel Inc., who is organizing the travel part of the tour.

The tour is scheduled during the semester because the baking exhibition has been moved from the second half of May to the beginning of April, Ponte said.

Independent banks are crucial to rural Kansas, said Sen. Nancy Landon Kassebaum Saturday at the Kansas Independent Bankers' Association Convention at Manhattan's Holiday Inn & Holidome.

As guest luncheon speaker at KIBA's 10th annual convention, Kassebaum addressed an audience of about 150 on the importance of independent banks in rural Kansas.

"Independent banks are absolutely crucial to the growth and success of Kansas," Kassebaum said.

"Small businesses supply 80 percent of the jobs in the USA," she said. These businesses need the support of local banks, she said.

Independent banks keep the small businesses alive, but today's economy is posing big challenges for small banks, Kassebaum said. Yet the outlook in 1989 is good for local banks, she said.

"This year we're starting on a much better foundation than in 1980 when Reagan took office," she said. Interest rates are low, unemployment is down and the inflation rate has

"We have a healthy economy," she said.

The economy is strong, but the small banks are still struggling, said Mark Lapping, professor of community and regional planning and dean of the college of architecture.

Lapping was the keynote speaker at the convention and gave the day's first lecture to about 50 people.

Politics influence the economy no matter how good it is, Lapping said. "Politics are still involved in the market place. Politics affect the bread-and-butter issues," making things hard for the small town businesses and banks, he said.

"Small banks can, and do make a difference (in the overall economy)," Lapping said.

"The U.S. economy is becoming international. And that makes it hard for local economies in rural Kansas to set their own goals," he said. Independent bankers have a vital stake in Kansas communities

"Now more than ever it's difficult to be a family banker in a small town," Kassebaum said. America's local banks need legislation to reduce the number of failures.

Corporate banks aren't helping the Kansas economy, Lapping said, adding that small banks are the backbone of Kansas communities.

Small, independent banks keep capital in the local economy where it is needed, and multi-state banks are draining capital out of rural Kansas, he said. "Large, multi-state banks are further concentrating the supply of wealth, not distributing the wealth," he said.

Lapping said improvement must be made at the local level.

Existing banks must take steps to plug leaks in their local communities to keep more capital in their own economies, he said.

Student increase causes book shortage

By The Collegian Staff

Manhattan textbook retailers were surprised by an unanticipated rise in K-State enrollment, according to managers at the K-State Union Bookstore and Varney's Book Store. The Union Bookstore was "caught a little off guard" by large numbers of students buying books, said Jack Connaughton, acting bookstore manager.

"We're suffering a little bit in some areas," Connaughton said.

Both long lines and sold-out books have created problems, Connaughton said. However, new cash registers equipped with scanners helped alleviate some waiting, he said.

Students whose textbooks were sold out can expect to receive books in five to seven days if the books are in stock at publishers, Connaughton said. Otherwise, the wait might be as long as four weeks.

'We're making every effort to fill in those courses," Connaughton said. Dan Walter, book department manager at Varney's, agreed that same day they receive them; others increased enrollment had created difficulties.

"We've been a bit overwhelmed," Walter said. "It's frustrating not to be able to help students like we'd like to," he said.

Walter said intermediate algebra and English composition I, both courses with large enrollments, had significant textbook shortages.

The wait for back-ordered books depends on the publisher, Walter said. Some publishers ship orders the might not ship books for four or five days, he said.

Connaughton and Waiter agreed that the two bookstores cooperate to help students obtain needed

Walter said the unexpected rush made it difficult to be sure how many students still need books. Students waiting for textbooks should get on a waiting list as soon as possible, he said.

K-State graduate lands movie lead

By Becky Ives Staff Writer

Greg Bales is not your typical K-State graduate.

He left Manhattan in May, moved to Wichita and became a vampire-

Bales has landed the lead role in the low-budget horror film, "Vampires."

The movie, being filmed in Wichita, is written by Lee Jonkers and produced by Norge Productions.

Bales, who was born in Hollywood, graduated in 1988 with a degree in advertising and public relations and the equivilant of a minor degree in speech and theater.

"In an average week, I put in 55 hours at my two jobs, and that doesn't include the hours I put in filming," Bales said.

After Bales graduated, he moved back to Yates Center, Kan., where he was raised, until he decided to look for a job in Wichita.

"I decided to look for a job in Wichita because there were (no jobs for me) in my town," Bales said. "But once I got to Wichita, I found there was nothing moving in the (public relations) area at all."

So, instead of finding a job in the public relations field, Bales found jobs at Dillards and at the Idelman Tele-Marketing company. But he also continued to look into acting

"I just went around dropping off resumes," Bales said. "Then one morning I walked into an office, already depressed, and this girl was just bouncing off the walls. She said she had just got the lead role in a movie being filmed in Wichita. That made me even more depressed.

"I asked her if she thought there were any more roles open, and she said she thought there were still some lead roles waiting to be cast," Bales

Four days later, Bales tracked down the number of the director.

"When I finally got a hold of the director, he was impressed by the fact that I worked so hard to find him," Bales said. After talking to the director and reading for him twice, Bales was cast as the lead character, Tobe, in the film "Vampires."

Tobe is what Bales calls a "little Rambo, a vengeful type person."

"I thought it was funny that I got a lead role before I got a journalismrelated job," Bales said. "I always wanted to do theater, but I didn't want a degree in it because I didn't want to end up waiting tables or something. It's rather ironic that my first job is in theater."

Bales describes "Vampires" as a movie filmed strictly for special effects and gore. It is specifically targeted for the home-viewing audience, he said.

kill a town full of vampires, including the head vampire. The vampires are not the typical suave Dracula types, Bales said, but are vile, violent

'Tobe's family and girlfriend are killed at the beginning of the movie, so he has nothing to live for except revenge," Bales said.

"This isn't the highest quality film. Everybody calls it a B movie. Actually, I call it a C- or D+ movie, but we realize it and do it mainly for experience," he said.

The filming hours of the movie are less than ideal, with most of the filming done after 10 p.m., and much of it done between 2 a.m to 6 a.m. The 2 a.m. filming is necessary, Bales said, to get deserted streets and to keep the town from being involved.

Bales doesn't seem to mind the odd hours, saying that he gets by on turkey sandwiches and Crystal Light.

"It's because I want to do it so bad," he said. "While I'm filming I don't notice (the early hours). It's when I am working at Dillards that I get tired and cranky."

Bales said that he has been interested in acting since he was young. The interest was spawned by his mother, Nancy Bales and his Aunt Peg Higueria.

'My Aunt owned two movie theaters in Iola and Eureka, and my mother managed the theater in Eure-Tobe's mission in the movie is to ka. So I was exposed to movies while growing up," Bales said. "When my Mom told me that I was born in Hollywood, I would watch TV shows and see if they were filmed in Hollywood."

Bales credits his ability to work the hours he does now, to his experiences at K-State.

"When I was in 'South Pacific' we would have late practice, then go out as a group and party, then do homework and hold a part-time job. It was fun, but it has also prepared me for what I am doing now," he said.

Bales has nothing but the highest praise for the K-State theater department.

They offer such a wide variety of classes, and it is such high quality. They have given me the confidence to pursue my interests in acting, and everybody in the department has been so willing to help," he said.

Because "Vampires" is a lowbudget film, the pay is nominal and Bales said the actors are often asked to donate their time or their costumes. Still, Bales said he is doing this film primarily for experience and not for the money.

"Just the other day at Dillards I sold a pair of $90 Vuarnet sunglasses and then I turned right around and sold a pair of $60 Ray-Bans. I can't see spending that much money on glasses," Bales said.

Bentsen moving on to other issues

By The Associated Press

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Sunday that Sen. Dan Quayle probably could grow into the job of being president if it became necessary.

It was the faintest of praise from the 67-year-old Texas Democrat seeking to contrast his experience with that of a 41-yearold Indiana Republican - and to make the difference a major issue in their campaign for vice president.

Appearing on NBC's "Meet The Press," Bentsen was asked whether Quayle was qualified to be president.

"Frankly, he would not have been on my short list as I look over my Senate colleagues," Bentsen said. "He obviously was on the short list of the hard right. ...

"Now, I wouldn't say that he couldn't grow into the job; he probably could. But if a tragedy befell a president, you'd have to be able to move in immediately and take over and do what has to be done in facing whatever issues that confront you at that time."

Among the four candidates, Bentsen dominated the public political stage Sunday.

Quayle attended church in Sacramento, Calif., and then made the cross-country flight home to Washington for a couple of days' rest and planning for this week's swing through Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Alabama, Florida, Georgia and South Carolina.

The contenders for the No. 1 chair in the Oval Office - Republican George Bush and Democrat Michael Dukakis - kept things low-key.

Bush attended church at the Episcopal church near the Houston hotel where he maintains an official address, then took in an Astros baseball game. Later he attended a memorial service in Austin for former Texas Gov. Price Daniel.

Dukakis went to church and then headed for a Sunday afternoon concert.

Jesse Jackson assured another group of television interviewers on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" - that he was behind the Dukakis-Bentsen ticket, but left it a little fuzzy how far

Dance successful as students mingle

By Carrie Miller Collegian Reviewer

Three freshman men walk out of the Union Catskeller.

One turns to look back. "Hey, let's go back in."

"No way, I'm not going back in "Did you ask anyone to dance?"

"No way, man, we don't have a chance. We outnumber them three

The men walk off in the direction of the dorms. Closely following them are four giggling girls.

Friday night, the annual Welcome Back Dance, sponsored by the Eclectic Entertainment Committee, was once again, a success.

It was a success in that the dance achieved all of the things that it was intended to do.

The dance, which lasted from 8 p.m. to midnight, "is to get the students together to meet each other," said Monte Stull, UPC Eclectic Entertainment Chairman.

"It's a good place to pick up on people," Stull joked.

In fact, there were many students meeting each other.

As I was talking to Stull, a young man came up and asked me if he could use my pen to take down a girl's phone number - on his hand.

When I provided him with one from my purse, the couple then had an amusing discussion as to whether the ink would sweat off. Upon receiving a piece of paper from my notebook, however, the two were off and running.

"(Many) of these kids are freshmen, and they don't really have anywhere else to go," Stull said.

The music, which was provided by Best Sound Around, was a bland, popular, dancy mix of the worst of Tiffany, Michael Jackson, and The Fat Boys.

This was about as much as can be expected of music planned to entertain a wide cross-section of

There was an admission charge of $1 to pay for the music and soft drinks that were provided.

Overall, reaction seemed to be good among the crowd of about 700 students, most of them freshmen.

The only real complaint seemed to be the heat, which was oppressive in the Catskeller.

"We could have had more room outside, and it would have been cooler," suggested Jeff Weeden, junior in agricultural economics.

"It (the dance would) have been a lot more fun with more people," said Hunter Goldsby, freshman in engineering. "You figure that with 18,000 people on this campus, it could have been held in a lot bigger of a space."

UPC hosts carnival

By The Collegian Staff

K-State students were able to view a cross section of University life when 86 campus organizations were on display Sunday at the 31st annual Activities Camival in the Union. The event was sponsored by the Union Program Council Special Events and University Activities Board.

Mike Penner, UPC Program Adviser, estimated a crowd of 600 people gathered to browse booths sponsored by organizations recruiting new members and offering opportunities for campus involvement.

Appealing to a wide variety of interests, displays ranged from the K-Laires' square dancing in the courtyard to the Gymnastics Club's tumbling exercises. To highlight the I Contributed A Twenty (ICAT) table, several members of K-State's men's basketball team made appearances.

Encouraging the unusual, the Special Events and University Activities

Committee held a booth-judging contest, rating each booth on originality, creativity, appeal to students and helpfulness in providing information.

Judged by a team of student leaders, the top three displays were: UPC Outdoor Recreation, Society for Creative Anachronisms, and the Hospitality Management Society.

For their efforts, cash prizes of $25, $15 and $10 were awarded to the winners.

duated. The point of college, after all, is to get an education and to leave with a degree.

Before we make Thompson out as a deity, however, let's ask one final question. Was Mourning really one of the best 14 players in the country, or was Thompson using his position to get his newest star his own "minicamp" of sorts against the best players in the world?

Interesting, don't you think? Regardless, the point isn't really whether John Thompson used the Olympic trials as a way of getting to know his next star even better. The point is that he let that star go home before he suffered in the classroom as a result. That's why Thompson is a class act, and that's what collegiate athletics are all about.

Iran seeks to free hostages in Beirut

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Iran wants foreign hostages in Lebanon freed but when it might happen is not clear, a Church of England emissary said Monday.

Bishop John Brown said he was in Beirut to investigate the fate of four missing Iranians so Tehran would use its influence with pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem extremists who hold foreign captives.

'The impression one gets very much is that the Iranians are very anxious to have the hostages situation taken right off their agenda," said Brown, who is the Anglican bishop of Cyprus, based in Nicosia.

Eighteen foreigners now are held in Lebanon, among them nine Americans and three Britons. They include Anglican church envoy Terry Waite and Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, who was kidnapped March 16, 1985, and is the foreign hostage held longest.

Asked whether Waite and the others would be freed soon, the bishop said: "I have no feeling about the timing of it. I feel he (Waite) will and Thomas Sutherland, 56.

be released, but I have no knowledge of the timing."

Brown arrived Sunday from Iran on his second visit to Lebanon in a month as representative of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, spiritual head of the Church of England and leader of the world's Anglicans. He spoke in a telephone interview with The AP.

He seeks information on four Iranians who disappeared while driving in the Christian heartland north of Beirut after Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon: Revolutionary Guards commander Ahmad Motevaselian. Charge d'Affaires Mohsen Musavi; Kazem Akhavan of Iran's official news agency, and their driver, a Lebanese with an Iranian passport.

Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of Iran's parliament and its military commander, has promised to help free British hostages if the Church of England learns the fate of the missing

Waite, 48, disappeared Jan. 20, 1987, after leaving a west Beirut hotel for a meeting with captors of American hostages Anderson, 40,

5,000 join strike

By The Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland - About 5,000 workers joined a strike at a steel mill Monday, and Solidarity leader Lech Walesa was quoted as saying he would not join government talks unless he could represent the banned trade union.

Walesa's comments came a day after authorities said they might allow him to take part in negotiations, but only as an individual.

Ten enterprises remained on strike nationwide Monday after two weeks of labor unrest. During the peak of the unrest, about 20 enterprises employing 100,000 workers were idled.

Talks between workers and management broke off at a coal mine in southern Poland and in the Baltic port city of Szczecin.

At the Stalowa Wola steel mill in southeastern Poland, a weekold strike swelled dramatically when managers tried to reopen the 18,000-worker mill, strikers and authorities said.

An estimated 1,000 strikers were joined by 5,000 to 6,000 people arriving for the first shift Monday, said Piotr Niemczyk, a spokesman for the Solidarity information center in Warsaw.

"Strikers control a substantial part of the complex's territory,' Polish state radio said in a report on the strike. "They control roads inside the plant. They check IDs of passing people who are not on strike."

Well, it was X-rated, anyway. Schimmel did have his moments on stage. The majority of his jokes were well-received, judging from audience response, and most members of the audience were enjoying

Water use declining nationwide

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - While this summer's drought is imposing new water restrictions on many Americans, water use already was down in many areas, due in part to declining

A long-term analysis by the U.S. Geological Survey found that the amount of water drawn from lakes. streams, reservoirs; wells and springs fell 10 percent between 1980 and

The analysis, the eighth since 1950, was the first to disclose a drop in usage.

The decreases were spread widely across the nation, with a majority of states reporting less water use during 1985 than in 1980, said Wayne Solley, a Survey hydrologist and senior author of the report.

Spot sampling during the current drought indicates some increases in use of water from various sources, but the agency said it did not have enough information to make national estimates. It took two years to compile all the data for the 1985 analysis.

Reporting that information from the first half of this decade, the agency said a number of factors likely contributed to the decline in water use - not the least of which was that previous consumption left less water

"Past increased withdrawals of ground water have tended to lower water levels, thereby increasing the energy needed to pump the water, and at the same time decreasing the availability and sometimes the qualty of the water," the Geological Survey reported.

This, in turn, raised the cost of what water was available, forcing users to be more selective, officials

In addition, the Survey concluded that increased use of recycled water, depressed commodity prices and reduced production likely reduced requirements for industrial and irri-

Watering expensive

$46,000 just for the month of July "You just can't let the been scape die," said Ed Rice, directo of University Facilities

The state appropriates the funds needed to maintain utilities at K-State, Rice said. This year the state gave more than $4 million to the University for utilities.

During July, the peak month for watering, the University until more than 67,000 cubic feet of water — enough to fill the City Park pool more than 50 times.

However, Rice said, all this water was not used on the grass. He said an exact figure for lawn

Rice said the price of water has the said the price of water has some up more than 25 percent in the past year due to new construction and repair of existing water facilities in the Manhattan area. Rice said compared with other utilities such as electricity and heat, water is very cheap.

The main campus, which occu-ries 280 acres, is watered four-days cast of the week in age as with-cut and erground sprinklers. Areas equipment are watered daily.

Nationally, the Survey estimated 1985 water use to be about 10 percent less than in 1980, reversing the trend that had seen water use double over the past 35 years.

The 1985 total was 399 billion gallons per day, including 338 billion gallons of fresh water. That amounted to 1,400 gallons of fresh water used daily for every American, down from 1,600 in 1980.

A reduction in the water used for irrrigation in 1985 was a major factor in the decline. On average, irrigation in 1985 amounted to enough water to cover each irrigated acre by a depth of 2.2 feet. That is down from 2.4 feet in 1980 and 1975, the agency reported. In addition, the number of acres of irrigated farmland in 1985 was down about 1 percent from 1980.

Overall, the United States has ample supplies of water in its lakes, rivers, reservoirs, underground aquifers and other resources, reported Solley. But, he warned, the "apparently favorable balance of water supply nationwide ... may bear little resemblance to the actual supply-demand situation in a local area or for specific users."

Per capita use of water in 1985 was found to be highest in more sparsely populated states, where more irrigation use is likely.

Students help in communities

By Theresa Luling Collegian Reporter

Students played active roles in researching problems and implementing programs in seven rural Kansas communities this summer as part of a K-State community service program.

The purpose of the program was to further the notion of civic responsibility by creating increased opportunities for student community service while responding to the needs of rural Kansas communities, said Carol Peak, graduate student in political science and director of the community service program.

The program, which was funded in part by the Fund for the Improvement of Post Secondary Education, received mixed reactions from the community during its first year of implementation.

"The community was so happy to see us but did not know how serious to take us," said Mindy Dutton, senior in political science. Dutton worked in Washington County during the summer through the community service program. Teams of students were organized to spend eight weeks during the summer living and working in a community and applying their academic skills to identified community issues. In Goodland, the team's work resulted in the creation of a tourism map for the north central Kansas region and the establishment of a data base containing detailed information on tourist attractions in the area.

In Washington County, the teams' efforts resulted in the expansion of two local businesses and the creation of a countywide craft guild.

The team members, all of classified as juniors or above, came from a cross section of campus.

"We looked for students who believed in the value of community service," Peak said.

Recruitment began late in the fall and those chosen were required to enroll in the community service seminar for the spring ■ See SERVICE, Page 10

Soviets cut back school days

MOSCOW - Many schools in the Soviet capital will be cutting back from a six-day week to five days when the new term starts Thursday, Radio Moscow said.

"Teachers believe children will have more time for independent study and for sports, and that is an important trend in the educational reform being introduced," the radio reported

The radio said first-graders will be in school five days a week, and that many of Moscow's schools also will switch entirely to a five-day week.

Soviet children traditionally have attended classes Monday through Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. or 1:30 p.m., depending on their age.

The radio report did not say how much the school day would be increased to make up for the Saturday classes.

Soviet officials are trying to cut down the emphasis on memorization in schools, instead urging more independent thinking and training in computers and other advanced technology.

Premarital pregnancy not new

NEW YORK - The nation apparently wasn't all our forefathers fathered. Revolutionary War-era records show that sex was "part of serious courtship" and often resulted in premarital pregnancy, a historian writes.

Americans in the late 1700s "were more licentious than we imagine them to be," Jack Larkin writes in American Heritage magazine's September-October issue.

Larkin cites birth and marriage records of several dozen American communities to show that in the late 18th century, pregnancy was frequently a prelude to marriage. In rural New England, nearly a third of brides were already with child.

"The frequency of sexual intercourse before marriage was surely higher, since some couples would have escaped early pregnancy. For many couples, sexual relations were part of serious courtship," he wrote.

"People today tend to assume we've reached the ultimate level of moral looseness, and that you can look back through our history at a steadily rising level of immorality, building up to the present," Larkin said in an interview. "But in fact these things have gone in cycles."

The concept of randy revolutionaries is particularly surprising in straitlaced New England, considering "the popular notion of what Puritanism was all about," Larkin said.

Students register to vote

TOPEKA - More than 2,600 students were registered to vote by the end of the fall semester enrollment at the state's colleges, according to the Associated Students of Kansas, which is organizing a student voter registration drive.

Special voter registration booths have been set up during enrollment at the University of Kansas, Wichita State University, Pittsburg State and Fort Hays State. K-State and Emporia State have permanent voter registration offices on campus.

KU reports on state economy

LAWRENCE — University of Kansas economic forecasters say they expect the state's economy to continue relatively strong growth the rest of 1988, but see it slowing down in the first half of next year.

A new report by KU's Institute for Public Policy and Business Research showed Kansas' improved economic growth rate is relative to its sluggish performance in the recent past, and not in comparison to the national growth rate, which continues to outpace that of the state.

The report is being distributed to legislators, state agencies and others interested in the state economy, a KU statement said.

It is among information the Consensus Estimating Group will study when it meets in November to forecast state tax revenues for the rest of this fiscal year and next. Gov. Mike Hayden will build his Fiscal Year 1990 budget on the group's estimate of revenue the state will have to spend in 1989-90.

The KU report was prepared by Norman Clifford, assistant professor of economics; Anthony Redwood, professor of business, and Mohamed E. Hodiri, professor of economics.

The forecast sees Kansas' unemployment rate dropping from the 4.9 percent average of 1987 to around 4.7 percent this year, as the addition of jobs outstrips availability of workers. Demand for workers is expected to be strongest in durable goods, retail trade, services and mining.

The state's employment rate is expected to grow by 2.3 percent this year, then slow to a 1.5 percent rate during the first two quarters of 1989, the report said.

Film to premiere in Topeka

TOPEKA - The motion picture "Kansas" will premiere in Topeka Sept. 22, the night before it begins showing at theaters throughout the country, Jerry Jones, director of the Kansas Film Commission, said Monday.

The movie, which tells the story of a couple of young drifters who come to Kansas and wind up on the wrong side of the law, was shot last year in Topeka, Lawrence, Valley Falls and other locations.

Jones said he is trying to line up someone connected with the film to attend the premiere, but so far hasn't had much luck. The stars, Andrew McCarthy, Matt Dillon and Leslie Hope, all have other commitments, he said.

The name of the theater hosting the premiere will be announced later.

Leavenworth fire injures 2

LEAVENWORTH - An arson fire at a Leavenworth apartment building caused about $80,000 in damage and injured two people before dawn Monday, Fire Chief James Meyers said.

Meyers said a note indicating a motive was found at the scene, but he refused to discuss it while the fire remained under investigation.

"By leaving a note like that, that could be done to throw us off track," the fire chief said. "To tie that in with a motivation, we can't do that yet. We'll run down some other leads we have."

One woman was hospitalized for treatment of injuries she suffered when she was blown off a balcony by an explosion just before flames were noticed. A child suffered minor injuries after being dropped from a second-floor window to people on the ground, authorities said.

Dianne Fisher, who lives in a neighboring apartment building, said she was awakened shortly after midnight by an explosion.

Recently two K-State employees received a monetary reward for their suggestions, which saved the University and the state of Kansas nearly Jared Schurle, lock systems specialist for facilities building maintenance, and Chris Dekat, general maintenance repair technician in the Veterinary Medical Center, were presented certificates of merit from the State of Kansas Employee Suggestion Awards Program.

Each of the men also received a

Schurle received $489 for his suggestion, which saved the University nearly $4,900.

A part in the lock on the nuclear reactor bay doors in Ward Hall did not work, and, because the part is no longer being manufactured, the University was going to have to replace both bay doors along with other miscellaneous parts.

Schurle, however, found a similar part which was being sold for salvage at a Lawrence warehouse. He purchased the part for $5.75 and also located the other miscellaneous

Dekat's suggestion - to switch from a high-pressure oxygen system erinary Medicine Center - netted him $276. That amount was later doubled to $552 because the state also used Dekat's idea elsewhere. Dekat said the new system, besides saving the University about $3,000, requires less maintenance. The liquid oxygen system has a bigger tank. One tank of the liquid oxygen is equal to 18 high-pressure tanks, so the cost is substantially less," Dekat said.

Soldier receives dishonorable discharge

By The Associated Press

FORT RILEY - A soldier who was presumed to have drowned last year pleaded guilty Monday to desertion and was given a dishonorable discharge, plus 16 months and 20 days of military confinement.

Pvt. David Earl Ellison, 24, who was arrested in July in Pineville, Ky., his hometown, also forfeits all pay and allowances and is reduced to E-1, the lowest rank in the Army.

Col. Richard D. Russell, the military judge who presided at Ellison's general court martial, gave him credit for the time he's been confined since his arrest. Officials said Ellison will probably serve his sentence at the U.S. Army Correctional Activity facility on the Fort Riley post.

Under a pre-trial agreement, Ellison pleaded guilty to the desertion charge in return for the Army not presenting evidence on two other charges. Those charges, to which Ellison pleaded not guilty, accused him of fraudulently enlisting in the Army under the name of Smith in 1981, and of larceny for allegedly accepting government paychecks while missing.

Ellison denied any attempt to make it appear that he had drowned in April 1987, saying he just wanted to desert. He said that a soldier who reported that Ellison fell into a lake did so on his own initiative.

That soldier, who is no longer in the Army, had told Clay County officials that Ellison became ill after a night of drinking, and that a brisk wind swept him off Wakefield Bridge into Milford Lake.

Ellison, who testified that he had decided to leave his wife and desert from the Army, packed some clothing and spent the night in a motel.

Changes made within Farrell

By Amy Rosebrough Collegian Reporter

It may not be as easy to pocket a periodical before leaving the second floor of Farrell Library this semester as it has been in the past.

Security strips have been placed on all materials on the second floor to prevent the periodicals from leaving the reading room, said Virginia Quiring, associate dean of library development.

The plastic strip on each magazine will set off an alarm when it passes through a beam emitted by the security gates, thus catching the would-be thieves, Quiring

The strips will eliminate bookbag checks and student workers having to watch for students leaving with magazines or other restricted materials, she said.

The new security system is not the only change that has occurred at Farrell this semester.

In order to facilitate students interested in research materials, the Reserves Department has been moved from the basement to the second floor of Farrell. The move also allows for interchange of staffing under the same supervisor. 'Hopefully this move will avoid giving the students the runaround," she said.

The reserves will be located with other related materials, such as microfilms, to consolidate research materials, she said.

The Interlibrary Loan Department has also changed locations. It will now be in rooms 203 and 204. A copy center will be located in the former Interlibrary Loan headquarters and will be of use to students wanting to copy reserve material. Acoustic materials will be installed to help minimize noise levels.

The Serials Department has been moved from the second floor to the basement to accommodate the automation materials.

More changes will be made throughout the semester.

They all just want to be good ole boys

Rich politicians shouldn't try to be common folk

ur parents were of midwestern stock bothered these guys. and very strict. They didn't want us to grow up to be spoiled and rich. If we left our tennis rackets out in the rain, we were punished."

-Nancy Ellis, George Bush's sister. Finished weeping? You'd better get used to these sorts of tell-all confessions, because we're going to hear a good number of them from Republicans Bush and Dan Quayle and Democrats Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen — four men from privileged backgrounds who just want to be one of the guys.

In the wake of the personable and highly popular Ronald Reagan, these four men will try anything to match the Gipper's widespread appeal. All four men will fail miserably.

The four candidates in this election labor under the false assumption that being from a privileged background is some sort of stigma. Apparently they don't realize this country was founded by rich men, such as Washington and Jefferson. Since then, very few of our leaders have come from the ranks of the proletariat. Even fewer have been born in log Johnson, Nixon and Carter, to name a few.

Reagan hails from Hollywood, the capital

Nor should it bother Bush, Quayle, Dukakis or Bentsen. If any of these men had any spine, they wouldn't waste so much time talking about themselves and how they are "one of us." They would tell any reporter who asked about "the real candidate behind the image" to ram it.

I, for one, cynically smirk when Bush speaks of the hard days he spent in his oneroom flat in Texas. I smirk because most folks who live in cheap flats don't have a multi-millionaire father who is a phone call

I chortle when Dukakis talks about growing up in Brookline, a "working-class neighborhood," which just happens to be chockfull of doctors and lawyers.

These attempted appeals to the blue-collar voters have led to a campaign where the candidates talk more about themselves and each other than they do anything else.

And that's where the candidates have missed the secret of the "Reagan Magic," which appeals to such a wide range of people even those who don't really like his policabins. Most have been filthy rich. Kennedy, cies. Reagan never spends much time talking about himself. When he does, the reference is usually humorous and self-depreciating. of rich and insensitive people. It never When held up to Reagan, the other candidates look self-absorbed and defensive.

Reagan, however naively, operates from the assumption that everyone is the same, including himself. In his mind, everyone grew up in a small town, took a girl named Mary Lou to the prom and had her home by 11 p.m. He never has to claim he is one of us, he just believes he is and goes from there.

his year's candidates operate from the assumption that they are different. That's why George Bush has made the fact that he eats pork rinds, plays horseshoes and listens to country music a campaign issue. That's why Dukakis wears a hardhat or a John Deere cap at every campaign stop. That's why Dan Quayle is seemingly proud of his "C" average in college.

But the real issue in a campaign is not whether a candidate is "different," it's whether or not he will be any better at running the country than the next rich, privileged politician. More than anything else, talk of pork rinds and horseshoes is condescending and offensive. A candidate might as well say, "Look, ye beer-swilling cretins of middleclass America, I too eat what you call pork rinds and listen to the soft strains of the muse ye know as Willie Nelson."

Not that any of the candidates think this, but one gets the impression that they regard the average American as some sort of illiterate yahoo who is only impressed by talk of junk food, working-class hardship and combat machismo. The reasoning seems to be that one must be from the middle or lower classes to understand their needs. Bull.

The middle and lower classes need good jobs, wages, housing, education and health care, just like everybody else. By listening to the campaign speeches, one gets the impression that some sort of spiritual understanding of the average Joe is needed, and that only one candidate can have it.

Besides being too privileged and elite, the candidates are also seen as terribly boring individuals. And they are. But was fuddyduddy Ronald Reagan any more interesting?

His tales of the old movie days are devoid of the sleaze and glamour that makes Hollywood interesting. He spent World War II making movies for the Army. Nonetheless, he comes off as interesting. Why? Because he keeps the stories to a minimum, and the ones he does tell are usually relevant to something

Such is not the case with this year's candidates. The more they talk about how interesting they are, the more boring they become. Dukakis takes books like "Swedish Land-Use Planning" to the beach. Bush refers to the most nerve-racking events of his life as "Tension City." These guys are boring. So what? Is the average American any more exciting?

n the post-Reagan years, imagebuilding has become the most timeconsuming part of a candidacy. Perhaps Reagan was an advantage, in that he already had a made-in-Hollywood image. Nevertheless, the true secret to his image is that he seems to be himself - not a media creation, not a schizophrenic people-pleaser. He is probably less qualified to do the job than either Bush or Dukakis, and that should be the issue. It's time for the two to be confident about who they are.

And it's time for them to shut up about themselves.

English-speaking test for GTAs not adequate measure of ability

he fluency (or, rather, non-fluency) of foreign graduate teaching assistants has been the cause of concern recently, not only at K-State but across the United States. The complaints are not without basis and the problem needs a solution.

It has been suggested that only American graduate students be offered teaching duties. This was realized to be impractical; there are far too many foriegn graduate students. In fact, in most departments, it is not rare to find more than half of the graduate students to be from foreign countries.

And, if half of the graduate students are foreigners, then by law of averages, half of the GTAs are foreigners, too. Nevertheless, that does not mean that one has to bear with a GTA who is unintelligible and incomprehensible.

The solution Kansas adopted is that GTAs whose native language is not English must obtain a minimum score of 220 on the Speak Test in order to teach.

Fair enough. Or is it?

First of all, I tend to disagree about that native English speaker bit. According to this, students from countries such as England and Australia are not required to take the test. Well, these students have as non-American an accent as students from countries like India and Singapore. If students from England and Australia are educated in English throughout their school career, then so are the Indians and the Singaporeans. So why this

Secondly, if the test is supposed to determine if the GTA is intelligible, then why should it be administered to foreigners only? Why should unintelligible British or Ameri- countries outside the United States where can GTAs be allowed to get through without being tested?

Commentary

RIZWAN MITHANI Guest Columnist

Il things considered, the Speak Test itself tends to be a misnomer. It is difficult, if not impossible, to make intelligent talk into a silly microphone. It is one of the most unnatural ways to talk in any language, whether native of non-native, unless you happen to be some sort of recording artist

A typical Speak Test starts off with a question like, "How are you doing?" If this is your first week in America, you answer in a textbook-ish way, "I am doing fine." If you have stayed here for about two years, however, you say, "Pretty good."

Now if the next question does not come up for another 20 seconds, you are bound to get confused and nervous. From then on, you start making errors like you have probably never made in your life!

Quite a large chunk of the test is cultural. If you do not understand American culture, even if your English is good, you will tend to make frequent pauses. There are not many people carry their groceries in paper sacks: thus, it is unfair to expect a student who has been in the United States for only one week to see a grocery sack and identify it as so. And this is just one example.

Whatever your background and training in English, when suddenly asked to describe a camera or a telephone or, even worse, to talk about automobile pollution or world hunger, one is sure to be at a loss for words for at least 15 seconds. If the time allotted is 60 seconds, then you have had it.

Come on. Give me a break! How in the world am I supposed to intelligently announce a class schedule to a microphone?

y major complaint is against this idea of recording your voice. Believe me, it is unnatural. We are informed that the recorded tapes are listened to, and graded by, two graders. Now, then, why can't the test be a personal interview, instead?

Tell me to talk on one of three topics extemporaneously for half an hour to an audience and I may do a good job, but tell me to talk for 60 seconds on the impact of computers on future societies and I am sure to falter.

My comments do not encompass all the issues involved. Moreover, they represent only one side of the coin. A sincere debate on the issue by the concerned people would be most welcome. If a representative of the English Language Program chooses to respond, however, I request that such a person attack the issue and not the hyperboles ingrained in my commentary. EDITOR'S NOTE: Rizwan Mithani is a graduate student in computer engineering.

Wheat dubbed as 'Karl'

By Angela Smith Collegian Reporter

A new variety of wheat has been named "Karl" after a former K-State professor and released for public use.

The K-State Crop Variety Review Board released the wheat variety, which recognizes the career and accomplishments of Karl Finney, former professor of cereal chemistry and technology.

Finney is an internationally known cereal chemist who retired from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1983.

It takes 12 years of testing and development to go from the initial genetic wheat cross to a new variety, said David Frey, assistant administrator for the Kansas Wheat

Basically, this means that this year's wheat breeders are prepar-

"The odds against a cross becoming a commercially produced wheat variety are thousands to one, because thousands are discarded along the path.

"Those discarded either don't perform well enough for the farmer or they aren't good enough for the miller or baker," he said.

Tom Roberts, executive vice president of Wheat Quality Council, has high hopes for the new wheat Karl.

"We are looking forward to the wheat coming on and doing a good job for Kansas. If it proves to be good, it could be grown throughout the west-central high plains," Roberts said.

Finney is an appropriate candidate for the honor of having a variety of wheat named after him, Frey said, because Finney has helped ing crosses for the year 2000, Frey sort through more potential hardwinter wheats than anyone else.

The wheat Karl, previously known as KS831374, is a replacement for the state's most popular variety, Arkan, in the southcentral, central and eastern-central growing areas.

Karl's characteristics include high protein, excellent milling extraction, and improved tolerance to tan spot, said Rollie Sears, a wheat breeder who also worked on

The new wheat variety also has delayed rusting reaction, good test weight patterns, and large kernels,

Karl has a 2 percent increase of protein over other current varieties grown in Kansas. The wheat's lineage includes a combination of known varieties - Plainsman V, 3, Kaw, Atlas 50, Parker*5, and

Military air shows suspended

By The Associated Press

RAMSTEIN, West Germany -West Germany suspended military air shows Monday following the fiery crash at an aviation exhibition that killed 46 people. Scores of others who suffered critical burns battled for their lives.

Sunday's tragedy at the U.S. Air Force Base in Ramstein was described as the worst air show crash involving spectators. Some were burned beyond recognition when three Italian jets collided on a lowlevel stunt flight and one of them hurtled into the crowd in a ball of People ran in panic, many with clothes in tatters and large burns on their bodies.

Most of the more than 300,000 spectators at the annual air show were West Germans and Americans, and about 500 were injured. The identities of the dead were not released, but at least 11 Americans were critically burned.

"Some were missing skin on their arms. The sun had come out, and there were a lot of people who didn't have their shirts on. A lot had black burns, like their skin was burned black," said DeeDee Arrington Doke, a reporter for the unofficial U.S. military newspaper Stars and Stripes, who was at the scene. John Flanagan, an Air Force sergeant, told Stars and Stripes: "I saw this little boy just standing there. His hair was all singed and the skin was coming off his face. And he was just standing there, looking up at me.

"Nobody stopped to help him. They were running. We stopped the police and the police picked him up."

The disaster occurred as an Italian air force flying team in 10 jets, two groups of five each, performed a complicated maneuver less than 200 feet off the ground shortly before 4

Jim Beichler, a University of Maryland teacher, told the paper someone next to him had looked at one of the Italian planes and said, "He's going to hit. He's not going to "The plane blew up, and people started running," Beichler said. "One guy was on fire. Other people were wrapped up in barbed wire. There were small fires all around me." A ball of flame 200 feet high and equally wide raced toward the crowd after the crash that killed the three Italian pilots. Sgt. Eddie Lee, a spokesman for Ramstein, said officials were having trouble identifying the dead and a list of victims would not be released until "Eleven Americans are in critical condition at a U.S. military hospital in Landstuhl," Lee said, adding that there could be more such cases in other hospitals.

The ARD television network said the 345 people reported seriously injured included about 50 critically burned, and Suedwest Radio said: "Many of those in critical condition are in danger of dying."

CHICAGO - Two part-time actors said Monday they duped TV hosts Oprah Winfrey, Sally Jessy Raphael and Geraldo Rivera, and millions of talk-show viewers, by passing themselves off as participants in sex therapy.

However, a psychologist who recommended the pair as guests says they weren't acting.

"It was the idea of going on national television - from a performer's standpoint that's pretty big," said Tani Freiwald, 37, a full-time secretary and part-time actress who played the roles of sex-hating wife and sex surrogate on the shows.

"In my mind, it was almost fulfilling the prophesy Andy Warhol made in the mid-60s that everyone would be a star for 15 minutes," said Wes Bailey, 33, who also has a job looking after an elderly man.

Bailey played an impotent husband on a "Sally Jessy Raphael Show" televised in May and a 35-year-old virgin on a July "Geraldo."

In both cases, he said, he claimed to be undergoing therapy with a sex surrogate, in which a patient has sex with a stand-in chosen by the therapist.

Rivera said he was "not amused" by the hoax and his lawyer was investigating.

"This is something that goes right to the integrity of the broadcast itself. I'm really spitting mad," he said by telephone from New York.

Freiwald and Bailey, both Chicagoans, said they were asked to appear on the shows by a Chicago psychologist-author, Dean C. Dauw, for whom Freiwald was working as an office manager. They said a third person appeared with them on "Geraldo."

Ruling allows PLO to keep office

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration said Monday it would not appeal a federal court ruling that allows the Palestine Liberation Organization to keep open its office at the United Nations.

A year-old law ordered the administration to close PLO facilities in both New York and Washington, but U.S. District Judge Edmund L. Palmieri on June 29 struck down the provision regarding the U.N. office, saying obligations to the international body took precedence.

The administration's decision to accept that ruling followed a bitter internal dispute in which the Justice Department sought to file an appeal, while the State Department opposed such a move, according to U.S officials who spoke on condition they not be identified. The State Department's view prevailed.

The Justice Department, announcing it would not pursue the issue, said the decision "was based on a determination that, on balance, the interests of the United States are best served by not appealing." Monday was the deadline for an appeal.

The Anti-Terrorism Act of 1987 required closure of the PLO's U.N. and Washington offices on ground that the organization sponsors terrorism.

The administration had opposed enactment of the anti-terrorism measure, saying it could possibly violate international obligations. But once the act became law, the administration moved to enforce it.

The Washington office, which has no U.N. affiliation, was shut down, but Palmieri said the New York office must remain open because of the U.S. obligations under the U.N. Headquarters Agreement.

The State Department and the U.N. backed Palmieri's argument.

The PLO's representative in Washington, Hassan Abdul Rahman, praised the administration's decision, saying it "is the only sensible thing to do because otherwise they would have pursued the misguided policy of confrontation with the U.N. and of acquiescence with the pro-Israel lobby in Congress." Abdul Rahman, whose Palestine Information Office was shut down by the State Department last year, now heads the Palestine Affairs Center which operates out of the Arab League offices.

Republican Sens. Jesse Helms of North Carolina and William Roth of Delaware had urged the federal government to proceed with an appeal.

"At issue is the question of who determines the sovereign powers of the United States - the Congress and the president through the constitutional process, or the United Nations and a single District Court judge in New York," Helms wrote in a letter to White House chief of staff Kenneth Duberstein.

for changes Cat athletics preparing

By The Collegian Staff

Changes have already begun or will soon take place in the Athletic Department, and the main reason behind the changes is the Fred Bramlage Coliseum.

When the coliseum officially opens Oct. 1, it won't be just the basketball teams that benefit, said Steve Miller, athletic director.

The move into Bramlage should begin sometime next week and will include the offices for the athletic director, men's and women's basketball, baseball, golf and sports information.

However, the increase in space doesn't necessarily mean the University will increase its athletic programs. And just because some programs have left Ahearn Field House doesn't mean the facility has been permanently retired.

Offices remaining in Ahearn Field House - such as track, volleyball, tennis, sports medicine, academic director and assistant athletic director - will use the extra room to improve exisiting programs, not establish new ones, Miller said.

"The fact that we will move basketball makes some space available, but the facility was unusually cramped in the first place. The four groups using the facility were inconvenienced," he said.

Miller said he will not support an increase in the present use of Ahearn, adding that the emphasis will be placed on making the current programs more effective.

"It didn't make any sense (to add programs) when we knew we didn't have enough time anyway," Miller said.

A major step toward improving the quality of Ahearn is a proposal calling for a newly developed type of flooring that can be installed directly over the exisiting surface in Ahearn. Ideally, the floor will be installed during the semester break and no later than the end of spring break, Miller said.

A major portion of the funding for Ahearn's improvements will be taken out of the Athletic Department's budget.

Updating the floor will greatly enhance the indoor track facility, and will make K-State a candidate for the Big Eight Conference's indoor track meet. K-State has never been the site of the meet because of inadequate facilities, Miller said.

One change that has already been made is the refinishing of the old basketball court for use by the women's volleyball team this

'We are one of the few schools in the nation with its own volleyball court," Miller said.

K-State purchased a new basketball court for Bramlage. The cost of the court, bought from Robbins Flooring Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, was $47,000.

Long-range goals for Ahearn also include the installation of three indoor tennis courts.

"People need to recognize Ahearn complex is not solely a sports complex," Miller said. "(University)-funded sports such as (women's) softball and (men's) tennis will be added only when the the present programs are well maintained. Why divide the pie over and over again?" The first event scheduled for

Bramlage is Oct. 21. It is an exhibition NBA game between the Dallas Mavericks and the San Antonio

Also in the works is a "Legends Hall" to be installed at the new facility. The room, overlooking KSU Stadium, will be filled with memorabilia from Wildcat sporting events. It will have a kitchen and will be available for large parties, Miller said.

At Frank Myers Field, construction is planned to give the baseball team's facility a better look. After the last basketball game was played in Ahearn last March, the portable bleachers at the south end of the field house were removed to be used at the baseball field.

The 2,500 extra seats the bleachers provide, with the addition of 88 box seats, will make Myers Field the largest baseball facility in the Big Eight Conference.

"We're on the verge of becoming a big-time program, so we had to have the complex re-done to get that look," coach Mike Clark said.

Clark said the present condition of Myers Field was a detriment to recruiting.

"There were times we would hope the recruits would notice the field and would not turn around and look at the seating," he said. "We even had one recruit ask us where we kept the other bleachers during the summer."

Campus Editor Robert Short and Sports Writers Bill Lang and Mike Rouse contributed to this report.

Starters return to practice

What was scheduled to be a short workout turned into a two-hour marathon practice Monday as K-State's football team prepared for its season opener Saturday at Tulsa.

"We're going to play a lot of people, so we did a lot of work with our substitutions to make sure we get the right players on the field at the right time. Seven different (running) backs will probably play along with six receivers," coach Stan

Offensive lineman Bob Pacchioli and tight end Russ Campbell returned to practice Monday. Pacchioli suffered a neck strain during two-a-days, and Campbell hasn't been able to practice yet this season because of a foot injury.

Quarterback Paul Watson (torn ligaments in shoulder) now is the only key player who won't play Saturday, but Parrish received good news about Watson Monday also. He possibly could begin throwing as soon as Thursday, and Parrish expects him back a week earlier than previously anticipated.

Parrish has settled on sophomore Carl Straw as his starter. Senior Gary Swim will be the backup.

Decision on swimmer stands

LOS ANGELES - Although Angel Myers' supporters insist that taking birth control pills caused her to test positive for a steriod, the U.S. Olympic Committee on Monday stood firmly behind its drug testing and the decision to remove her from the U.S. Olympic Swim Team.

Although the USOC will not identify the banned substance involved in Myers' case, a statement released by her family said she had been informed that it was a steriod.

Although Myers' original appeal to the U.S. Swim Team was turned down, if that group decides she has a valid appeal, it could ask the USOC to reconsider its decision.

Taylor receives suspension

EAST RUTHERFORD, NJ. - Seven-time All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, who had vowed to make this his best season, was suspended for 30 days on Monday for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy for a second time.

Coach Bill Parcells and NFL spokesman Joe Browne said Taylor was suspended after testing positive following "a recent" mandatory pre-season drug test. They declined to disclose what substance Taylor was abusing.

The suspension means Taylor will miss four games, including the season opener next Monday night against the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

Seurer cut by Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Quarterback Frank Seurer, the former Kansas star and the leading passer in Big Eight history, was among five players waived Monday as the Kansas City Chiefs cut their roster to the 47-man regular season limit.

Seurer, 26, lost out to rookie Danny McManus, an 11thround draft choice from Florida State, as the No. 3 quarterback.

MU halfback to miss opener

COLUMBIA, Mo. — University of Missouri halfback Tony VanZant is expected to miss the Tigers first game Sept. 10 against Utah State because of a nagging knee injury, head trainer Fred Wappell said Monday.

VanZant, a 6-foot-1, 183-pound sophomore, underwent surgery on his right knee in May after tearing cartilage during spring practice. The knee has not healed as quickly as the coaching staff expected and is still too weak to take a direct hit, Wap-

He missed qualifying for the NCAA Championships by only two strokes in each of his last two collegiate seasons.

Director Steve Miller said a new coach would be hired by the end of this week.

"It is always tough losing a coach, especially so early in the year," Miller said. "I certainly can understand Rob's decision though."

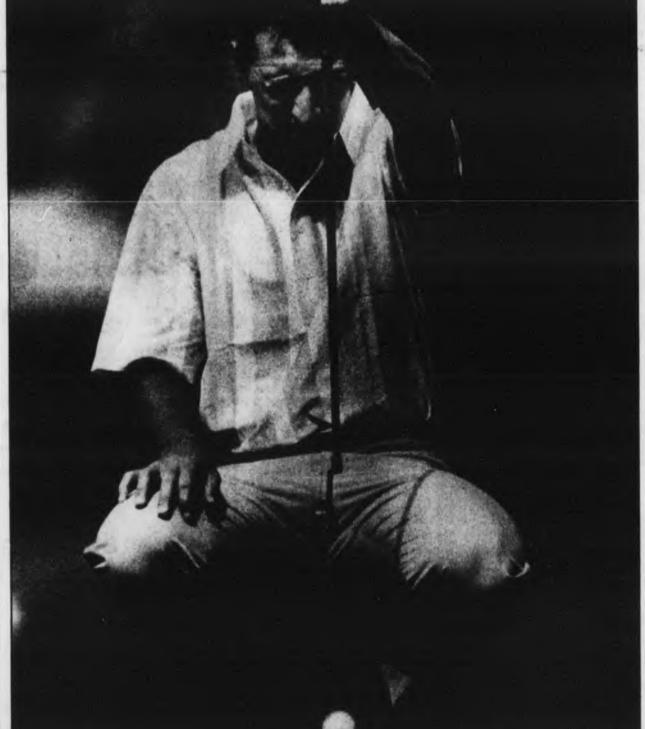

Miller said an interim coach would be hired to fill out this year. At the end of the year, the department will hire a permanent coach.

Sedorcek's future includes playing competitive golf and possibly becoming a pro.

Rain spoils first day

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK - The 1988 U.S. Open started the way last year's tournament ended - with rain.

Steady showers washed out opening day Monday at the National Tennis Center 90 minutes after play began.

Only five matches were completed, and only one of those involved a seeded player, No. 11 Zina Garrison's 6-0, 6-3 victory over Nicole Provis. Second-seeded Mats Wilander was leading former NCAA champion Greg Holmes 6-2, 6-1, 1-2 when play was halted.

No other men's seed got to play a single point.

The wet scene was reminiscent of the final Sunday at last year's Open when rain forced the men's final between Ivan Lendl and Mats Wilander to be delayed until Monday.

Garrison beat the rain by beating Provis in just 59 minutes. "I was really nervous to play the first match on the first day of the tournament," she said. "I didn't want to be the first seed to go out." Garrison had reason to be wary of Provis, an 18-year-old Australian who reached the semifinals at the French Open this year. But Provis, ranked 34th in the world, barely avoided a shutout. Garrison won the first 11 games before Provis staged a mini-rally and But Garrison broke back in the next game to end the match.

"I don't like to win zero and zero," she said. "It's like a jinx going into the next round."

Garrison, who was ranked as high as No. 5 in the world three years ago, has dropped to No. 12 and hasn't won a tournament this year.

"I've been playing some really good tennis, although my ranking doesn't show it," she said. "I've pulled to within 5-3 in the second set. reached the semis or quarters of most of the tournaments I've played in.

Acting as a go-between, the board is able to provide free help most students don't realize is available.

"We try to educate the client first," said Beth Galbreath, director of the board. "If they can't do anything more, we'll step in and intermediate."

The Consumer Relations Board has a reference list of landlords in the Manhattan area with whom they have received both negative and positive reports from students in the

With this historical background, the board has better knowledge of how to deal with certain landlords than might a first-time tenant, Galbreath said.

Any remarks regarding landlords are put on file for up to one year. Prospective tenants are free to use this information when looking for an apartment. For the most part, however, Galbreath and the other board members assist tenants in settling

The complaints which come through the Consumer Relations office are all validated by Galbreath.

"It's all determined by whether it's in violation of Kansas statutes," Galbreath said.

For instance, one Kansas statute only allows fourteen days for a landlord to do needed repairs from the day they are notified. The board works partly in cooperation with the Manhattan Human Resource Center, which investigates the possible violations of city codes that are reported by tenants. The city of Manhattan does not require licensing for anyone wishing to rent property to tenants, Galbreath said, and this can create problems in getting landlords to comply with

The Manhattan City Commission has proposed licensing in the past, but Galbreath said the commission fears the likelihood that all licensing fees for landlords will simply be passed on to the tenants. In the meantime, the Consumer Relations Board will continue to aid students and landlords in settling disputes which, Galbreath said, usually result from "a lack of communication."

Galbreath said an increasing number of students are taking advantage of the free services the board makes available. While the Consumer Relations Board cannot give legal help, it is capable of solving problems, settling disputes and giving advice, she

Dancers audition for place in company

By The Collegian Staff

For some it just marked the beginning of another dance season full of hours of practices and performances, but for others it was a shot at becoming dancers in a Universitysponsored dance production.

About 40 dancers auditioned Monday for positions with the K-State Repertory Dance Company, which will sponsor Winter Dance '88. Dec. 1-2 in McCain Auditorium.

Tammy Francka, senior in dance, said the audition did not make her nervous. It was her seventh dance audition since her freshman year, and she has always won a spot in the

"After you get to know the instructors, it gets easier," she said. "But I studio. The dancers can receive class know a lot of the people were really nervous."

Auditions were open to dance and non-dance majors. The number of dancers the company needs is not known because the three choreographers - Luke Kahlich, Judy Quirk and Nancy Keyser-Shade, dance instructors - have not completed the dances yet.

Keyser-Shade said her piece will require about 15 dancers. Last year's company had about 40 dancers.

The concert contains ten pieces, and those selected for the company will practice about two hours a week for each piece they dance in. For some, this may mean spending more than 15 hours a week in the dance credit for participating in the production.

Some of the dancers learned about the audition when they arrived at their jazz dance class and were told class was being canceled to hold auditions. They were given the choice of trying out for the company or observing the audition and writing a paper about it, Keyser-Shade said.

The surprise audition may have added tension for the dancers, but even if they had known about it, they could have done little to prepare.

They give you the patterns (at the audition) they want you to do, so you can't really rehearse for them," Francka said.

More than 80 percent of the dancers trying out were women. The statistic encouraged the men trying out. Jeff Winkler, senior in speech, was fairly confident about his chances of being chosen.

"Chances for getting a part right now are pretty good, due to a shortage of males trying out," Winkler

Compared with last year, however, Winkler's chances have diminished. Seven men auditioned this year compared with five last year, Francka said.

College offers special course

By The Collegian Staff

Future entrepreneurs can learn the fundamentals of starting their own businesses before facing the real

The College of Business Administration is offering a special course titled Entrepeneurship, which is open to undergraduate students interested in learning how to start their own businesses.

Entrepeneurship is a unique course, said Randy Pohlman, dean of the college and instructor of the course.

"(The course is) designed for people who want to become entrepeneurs - someone who starts their own business, raises the capital and takes the risk," Pohlman said.

The course places an emphasis on innovation and covers a variety of business topics, including patents, copyrights, franchising, and initial financing of a business, he said. "The centerpiece of the course is the business plan," Pohlman said. Students construct plans for businesses they might be interested in starting.

Throughout the semester, local business owners will talk to the class about starting their own businesses.

Previous speakers have been Bob De Bruyn, owner of Master Teacher, a business designed to help administrators and teachers become better educators; and Bernard Butler, owner of the Manhattan Pizza Huts.

The course focuses on starting a small business and managing a small business because the department already offers several courses in big business, Pohlman said.

Some students who took the course have actually started their own businesses. Monte Shadwick, former K-State student, started his own bar and grill in Salina called Shooters, Pohlman said.

The course is open to any undergraduate, regardless major, he said.

All-time record raises questions

By Lisa Pfannenstiel Collegian Reporter

Recent hot weather, which has caused record demands of electricity, has prompted "what if" questions concerning whether the demand may exceed local power companies' generating capacity.

KPL Gas Service, the local supplier of electricity, experienced an all-time record demand on Aug. 15. Customers required more than 2 million kilowatts per hour for two consecutive hours during that afternoon, said Hal Hudson, director of corporate communications for KPL.

This all-time record demand did not exceed KPL's generating capacity of 2.5 million kilowatts, but the incident did raise questions as to how the company would manage a demand exceeding its supply.

Power pools are the preventive measure used to secure a continuous supply of energy during a power loss.

KPL is a member of the MOKAN Power Pool and the Southwest Power Pool. The primary purpose of the power pools is to help ensure reliable electric service to the public, Hudson said.

MOKAN consists of 11 electric generating utilities in Kansas and western Missouri, and SWPP includes 39 utility members in seven states.

"Actually, (the power pool is) neighbors helping each other out,"

Power-pool services are used for both emergency and nonemergency situations.

Utilities participating in the two groups have interconnections to provide bulk power during emergency situations, he said.

"Our most recent emergency was in December of 1983, when the coal was freezing at the Jeffrey plant (causing a generator to go down), and (KPL) had to call on our neighbors for generating support," Hudson said.

A computer network immediately connects and transfers electricity from one utility to another, preventing power loss to consumers, he

During non-emergency periods, permanent ties are available for exchange of power among utilities.

This agreement is called the Economy Exchange Program, a planned effort to supply power at the most economical cost, Hudson

The power pools can save money during non-emergency times by purchasing energy for the lowest

However, during periods of high demand, the cost of electricity will rise, which is reflected on the customer's bills, he said.

If KPL would exceed its generating capacity of 2.5 million kilowatts, it would pay a fine to MOKAN for overextending its purchase contract, Hudson said.

"When supply becomes the issue, cost is not a consideration," he said. "We must assure our customers that a reliable supply of energy will be there when they need

"We have a new peak one-hour demand every year ... (but) we do not anticipate customer demand to exceed our capabilities.

In addition to the power pool support system, KPL has short- and long-range alternatives for providing additional energy.

A small peaking turbine could be added to cover the extra load as an initial alternative.

Long-range possibilities include the addition of a fourth generator at Jeffrey Energy Center, which is located north of St. Marys, he said.

semester. "The class prepared us for the lifestyle change and it was most beneficial to those students who never experienced small-town life," Dutton said.

Teams researched their respective communities through newspapers, interviews with community leaders, and site visits. Each team was supervised by a K-State faculty member, who provided the team with technical expertise regarding the project and served as a consultant to the Community leaders visited the class throughout the semester informing the students about the needs of their communities.

"With eight weeks to work, it was hard to come up with something tangible," Dutton said. "In most cases, the teams made recommendations for improvements and this got the ball rolling."

A stipend and a small scholarship was given to each student who participated in the program to offset the losses created by not having a sum-

Talks broke down at the July Manifesto coal mine in Jastrzebie, the last of 12 coal mines still on strike, after management refused to give workers a phone line to Walesa, according to Lech Bosiak, a Solidarity activist. Jastrzebie is near the Czechoslovak border in southern Poland.

The mine's strike committee was "waiting for Lech Walesa's talks at the famous round-table," Bosiak said.

Soldiers shoot IRA members

LONDONDERRY, Northern Ireland - Soldiers fatally shot three armed men in a car Tuesday, a few miles from the spot where an Irish Republican Army bomb killed eight soldiers on a bus and injured 27 others.

The IRA's legal political wing Sinn Fein issued a statement saying the dead were IRA members Brian Mullen and brothers

Gerard and Martin Harte. Mullen was a brother of one of eight men held for questioning following the Aug. 20 bus bombing. All those questioned were released without charge on Monday.

The shooting in Omagh, 50 miles west of Belfast, was seen as part of a stepped-up British response to the IRA's summer campaign against the army and police, which has killed 27 members of the security forces and triggered a wave of outrage in Britain and in the province.

Also Tuesday, two buses and a van were hijacked and set afire in Roman Catholic west Belfast, but no casualties were reported. Four mortar bombs and 25 pounds of explosives were found aboard a bus crossing the border from the Republic of Ireland, said police in Londonderry.

California fire destroys homes

A California brush fire destroyed at least five homes, while crews fighting forest fires gained ground Tuesday in Yellowstone National Park and the Forest Service sought more firefighters at employment offices.

National Guardsmen in Idaho were sent to the firelines, and Wyoming Guard volunteers were sent for fire training.

Firefighters were at work against fires charring woodland in Wyoming, California, Montana, Idaho, Oregon, Washington and Utah. And dozens of fires have been allowed to smolder for months in the vast interior of Alaska.

Across the Bay from San Francisco in the grass- and brushcovered Orinda hills, a fire burned out of control for two hours Tuesday afternoon in an exclusive section of Orinda.

Five houses were "totaled" and two others had an undetermined amount of damage from flames still burning late Tuesday after the blaze was largely contained, Fire Chief Ed Lucas said.

"The hills are steep, and when the wind comes up, it makes those hills like chimneys with flames just coming right up them," said Nancy Artist. She said the fire came within yards of her home.

NEW YORK - Burt Reynolds and Loni Anderson plan to adopt a baby that is expected to be born in a California hospital this week, according to a publicist for Anderson.

"We can't promise that the baby will be born this week, but that certainly is the hope," said Mickey Freeman.

Freeman did not know when the couple, who were married in May, "started the ball rolling" in locating an infant to adopt. "I presume they have been working on it a while."

"I love kids," Anderson, 41, said in an interview published in Tuesday's Daily News. "If I'd been with the right man when I was younger, I'd have had four."

Anderson, twice divorced, is the mother of a 23-year-old daughter. Reynolds, married at one time to actress Judy Carne,

Catholics testing for AIDS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Some male Catholic orders have begun testing applicants for the AIDS virus and rejecting those who have it, according to an article in the National Catholic

The reason behind the testing is the high medical cost AIDS patients present for the orders, which train men to be priests and religious brothers, the independent weekly paper reported in its Sept. 2 edition.

"We're demanding it because it wouldn't be fair to the community not to," said Father Joseph Blaney, provincial of the Oblate of Mary Immaculates based in Washington, D.C. "It's an economics issue."

Most Catholic orders have had a member with AIDS, the paper said. But the testing is opposed by many, the paper said, and is causing a growing controversy within the Catholic

"The consequences of testing far outweigh the consequences of not testing," said Don Krapf, vice president of the Catholic Health Association. Both the health association and the administrative board of the U.S. Catholic Conference oppose mandatory testing for AIDS and discrimination against people with

Walesa consults Polish leaders

By The Associated Press

GDANSK, Poland - Solidarity founder Lech Walesa will hold his first talks with the Polish leadership in six years Wednesday in a government effort to end two weeks of labor turmoil, his advisers said.

Walesa will confer in Warsaw with Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak at a meeting attended by a representative of the Roman Catholic Church but will not call off the strike at his shipyard in Gdansk, the advisers said.

The announcement resulted from four days of maneuvering started by Kiszczak's proposal on Friday that officials and worker representatives hold "round-table" discussions.

A communique from the Communist Party's ruling Politburo, distributed by the official news agency PAP, mentioned a round-table meeting, endorsed it and said Kiszczak should "carry on with the mission entrusted to him.'

It was not clear, however, whether the reference was to the Wednesday meeting or the minister's original proposal on Friday. No other official reference was made to the Walesa-Kiszczak talks.

Ten enterprises in Poland remained on strike Tuesday. At its height, the current labor trouble involved 20 sites employing 100,000 over the plant.

people and was the worst since 1980.

Solidarity spokesmen said there was no agreement for an immediate end to the strikes, in which a central demand has been making Solidarity legal again. It was suppressed after the declaration of martial law in December 1981 and outlawed in

On Tuesday evening, Walesa left the strikebound Lenin shipyard, where he works as an electrician, to confer with advisers and Bishop Tadeusz Goclowski at nearby St. Brygida's church. He emerged from the rectory with the bishop later to cheers and chants from supporters.

Government spokesman Jerzy Urban said earlier in the day that talks could begin as soon as Walesa called off the strike at the Lenin shipyard, where the Soviet bloc's first free union was born in the labor uprising of 1980, but aide Piotr Konopka said: "For the present, the strike is still on."

He said Walesa would attend the Wednesday meeting as president of the Independent Self-Governing Trade Union Solidarity, the labor federation's full name.

While the government expressed its willingness to talk, strikers at the Stalowa Wola steel mill in southeastern Poland said soldiers had moved into the town and helicopters flew

Hayden supports plan for prison ing projects in Hutchinson, Ells-By The Associated Press TOPEKA - Gov. Mike Hayden indicated today that he will push the state Department of Corrections' proposal for new prison construction when the 1989 Legislature convenes in January.

Hayden said he thinks the state needs to build one or two new prisons with a total of 1,200 new beds to help solve a persistent prison overcrowding crisis. He reiterated his support for projects proposed last year by Secretary of Corrections Roger Endell. Hayden made the remarks during a news conference, as attorneys for the department and a group of inmates at the Kansas State Penitentiary in

Lansing prepare for a "status" hearing in federal court Friday. "The department has determined the size of our needs to be in the range of 1,200 beds," Hayden said told reporters. "No one's proven the needs are not there." Currently, state prisons house almost 6,000 inmates in buildings designed to hold 3,786 prisoners. In April, U.S. District Judge Richard Rogers ordered the state to remove nearly 400 inmates by September from the penitentiary. Inmates from the Kansas State Industrial Reformatory in Hutchinson and the Kansas Correctional Institution at Lansing have asked to be included in the order. Hayden would not predict what action, if any, Rogers would order after further hearings in the case. "I expect the court to say the problem is not solved," Hayden said. "I think he'll tell us the state needs to go ahead and provide more beds." The 1988 Legislature passed a $39 million package of legislation designed to reduce prison overcrowding, much of it proposed by Endell. The package included build-worth. Norton and Stockton that would add 930 beds to the prison

Legislators agreed to give the department $750,000 to plan a new prison, but lawmakers said they wanted to explore less expensive alternatives first. Endell has said building one, larger prison would cost $57 million and two, $62

"The problem is out there whether we have the money or not," Hayden

The Oklahoma Legislature began a special session this week in an attempt to deal with that state's prison problems. However, Hayden has no plans to call such a session this year in Kansas. A special session he called last year to have lawmakers consider a highway improvement plan adjourned without a proposal being passed.

"It points out what I've said for years," Hayden said of the Oklahoma session. "Special sessions are a very effective public policy tool."

On another subject, Hayden said chances are "remote" that the Legislature will try to change state's oil severance tax laws in the 1989 session. He said lawmakers should wait to see how a statewide property reappraisal, scheduled to be completed by January, affects the industry before it makes changes in the tax.

"The severance tax on oil - crude oil — does appear to be one of the problems depressing production," Hayden said. "It'll be after the session before we'll really know the status of the oil and gas industry."

Theme versatile

By Nancy Prosser Collegian Reporter

-" could be "125 Years of considered a strange Homecoming theme at some universities, but it should provide more flexibility and creativity for participating groups this fall, said Janelle Larson, Blue Key National Honor Society's K-State president.

Larson said giving groups more responsibility in choosing their own theme allows them to express their personality and decreases the chances of duplicate ideas. It was a major goal for Blue Key to make the theme more flexible, she said.

The 1988 Homecoming game will be Oct. 1 when the Wildcats take on Louisianna Tech. The traditional Homecoming parade is set for 10 a.m. that morning.

Homecoming week at K-State traditionally involves competitions between living groups that express school pride and spirit. Points are accumulated by each group throughout the week.

The group with the highest score is announced during halftime of the football game, Larson said.

Competitions include sweatshirt design, Yell like Hell, bodybuilding, spirit banner, Pant the Chant, and float competitions. Preliminary events are Oct. 29 and finals on Oct.

Blue Key, a senior honorary, is in charge of coordinating the events for the week. The honorary's main responsibility, Larson said, is to organize events, make rule changes from the previous years and organize the parade.

Blue Key also organizes the balloting for the K-State Ambassador. The winning Ambassador is announced during the football game.

One change from last year's Homecoming involves the preliminary activities. This year the competitions will be on the Thursday evening before the football game in Ahearn, instead of Thursday afternoon in the Larson said the changes were made to include Ahearn in the week, since it no longer is used for basketball. The time change to the evening makes it possible for more students to participate, since there will be fewer class conflicts.

Larson said she was concerned over residence hall participation in Homecoming week. Residence halls pose a unique problem, since they don't have an allotted Homecoming budget, and depend on individual support, she said.

However, the halls will be participating in Homecoming activities, possibly as a collective unit of the Association of Residence Halls, Lar-

Town Center may lure Sears

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

The City Commission Tuesday agreed "to go to the mat" for an Urban Development Action Grant that would help Forest City Development establish Sears as a third anchor store in Manhattan Town Center.

Commissioner Kent Glasscock said, "I think we (the commissioners) all agree that we're going to go to the mat for the UDAG fund and get

Forest City has secured a letter of interest from Sears, Roebuck and Co. regarding locating the store in the mall, said Gary Ceepo, Forest City Development's project developer for Manhattan Town Center. "(Without) the UDAG funds, it will be virtually impossible to put the interested Sears store in the mall," Ceepo said.

Sears has expressed a desire for about 65,000 square feet of space, nearly four times as much as contained in the existing Manhattan store, he said.

In comparison, the J.C. Penney store in the mall has about 52,000 square feet of space and Dillard's has about 72,000 square feet.

The deal Sears is negotiating is "atypical," Ceepo said.

"Under any other mall proposition we would clearly say, 'No, thank you," he said. "(But) 65,000 feet says a lot more concerning what Sears thinks of this environment. For Sears to write a letter of interest, that means a lot to us."

Competition among retail stores is fierce, and the Sears store in Manhattan has a lease that expires in three years, said Mel Roebuck, another developer for Forest City.

"We have to get them into the mall before that lease runs out," Roebuck

"We must take advantage of the last gasp of UDAG and use it for Manhattan and for ourselves.

"It is not a deal to make money, it is to nail down the future of Manhattan," he said.

Forest City developers estimate that $1.15 million to $1.2 million in federal funds will be needed to complete the project. The deadline for application of the UDAG is Sept. 30, and Ceepo said he has little hope the UDAG program will survive until 1989.

However, Ceepo is confident the UDAG will be granted to Manhattan. One positive factor is that a "letter of exhibit" can be attached to the application, which will show exact plans for the use of the grant.

Without the UDAG, the mall would not get a Sears store until Forest City could get a deal that would be financially more feasible than the present one, Ceepo said. The grant will be loaned to the developers, and paid back to the city over a certain period of time. The loan repayments can then be used to fund other public works projects, said City Manager Mike Conduff. The grant is awarded in February, and if Manhattan was awarded it, construction of the third anchor could start as early as March and would take about nine months to complete, Conduff said. "We're hoping that in the spring of 1990, we will have a Sears store operating in the mall," said Chris

Heavey, manager of the mall.

Michael Dukakis said Tuesday that George Bush flunked a key "test of leadership" in the Iran-Contra affair and questioned whether his Republican rival has the judgment needed to deal with the Soviet Union. Bush shot back that Dukakis favors "unilateral cuts" in U.S. defenses.

The two contenders for the Presidency swapped charges in their escalating war of campaign words as their top aides met in Washington without agreeing on a schedule for presidential debates this fall.

Bush campaign chairman James A. Baker III said the Republicans would accept two presidential debates and one confrontation between vice presidential contenders, but nothing before Sept. 22. Dukakis aide Paul Brountas said he favored a more extensive schedule.

"We want more debates, they want fewer," he said. "We want to start them earlier, they want to start them later. We want to continue them up until the election takes place. They would like to end them much earlier," he added. The two sides will meet again on Thursday.

Dukakis bargained through aides with Bush over debates as fresh reports surfaced of lingering tensions said, "And he's talking about judgwith Jesse Jackson, the Democratic nominee's most persistent rival during the primary campaign. One source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Jackson met with top Dukakis aides last week and was angered when he was handed a list of states to avoid during the fall campaign - including several where he won primaries and caucuses earlier

But Dukakis spokesman Dayton Duncan called the report about the list "absolutely false."

Dukakis, who has sharpened his rhetoric in the face of widespread published reports that he has lost the campaign offensive, said Bush was a failure as a crime fighter and misguided on defense matters and he resurrected the Iran-Contra affair as a campaign issue.

"Making tough decisions is a test of leadership. George Bush endorsed the decision to sell arms to Iran and in doing so he failed that test," Dukakis

Referring to the Iran-Contra affair, dealings with Panama's indicted leader Manuel Antonio Noriega and Bush's support during the early 1980s for ousted Philippines President Ferdinand E. Marcos, Dukakis ment, about negotiations, about taking risks. I would be very concerned about someone with that kind of judgment negotiating with the Soviet

Bush kept up his own steady drumbeat of criticism as he campaigned in North Carolina. "We should not gamble America's future on another liberal governor coming out of nowhere," he said, likening Dukakis to former President Jimmy

Later, Bush said Dukakis wants "to make unilateral cuts in our strategic systems, the MX, the Midgetman, no testing, get rid of two (aircraft) carrier groups, as well."

The vice president also cautioned against complacency in dealing with the Soviet Union. "I'm glad there is change in the Soviet Union," he said. "But we'd better not let our guard down."

Bush said he was encouraged by recent "polling things" indicating an upturn in his fortunes in recent weeks. "That's turned around now after our upbeat Republican convention," he said.

Dukakis aides scheduled a briefing with reporters for Wednesday. They are expected to emphasize that despite a recent Republican trend in the polls, their campaign is on track with television commercials set to begin running within the next two weeks, an organization in place in most of the 50 states and an estimated $25 million raised for the fall campaign.

The money will be used in addition to the $46 million subsidy that both presidential tickets receive from the federal government.

Despite plans for Dukakis to campaign jointly with Jackson, there vere indications that relations between the former rivals were

Top Dukakis campaign aides met Thursday with Jackson to discuss his role in the fall campaign, and a source said these aides arrived with a list of states where they asked Jackson not to campaign.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the list included Michigan, Louisiana, Mississippi, Georgia and Texas. Jackson carried all but Texas and Georgia during the Democratic primary season, and finally, the two sides agreed he would campaign in all but Texas

Manhattan schools may gain additions

Members of the Manhattan Unified School District Board of Education on Tuesday discussed the use of additional space, programs and equipment for the school district, which has an extra 700 students this year.

Each member of the board was assigned specific school districts to research. The board plans to select consultants who will do further research on the unified district and give advice on the expansion of area schools. Board member Mary Nichols said she was concerned about who should be assigned the task of conducting a study on local demographics.

"If we can keep it local, then I say go with it," she said.

Two groups, Schaefer, Johnson, Cox, Frey & Associates P.A. and Planning Advocates Inc., are competing for the survey.

Basic issues debated were cost, what information the consultants will be expected to furnish, and how open-minded the board will be on receiving these findings. No limits have been set on the scope of the study at this time.

The board members agreed that any demographic survey should be conducted by a local group, which will use the data the school board has already obtained and provide additional information.

Tests shouldn't decide promotion, graduation

The Kansas Association of School Boards is right. Minimum competency tests alone should not be used to determine whether a student should be promoted to the next grade level or be allowed Currently the tests are given in both public and private schools in the second, fourth, sixth, eighth and 10th grades. The tests were intended to measure overall student performance - not to be used for major decisions, such as graduation.

The Legislature mandated the tests in 1980, but the mandate expires next year. If the competency tests are to continue, the Legislature will have to renew the mandate in January.

These tests were designed to collect data for the state to monitor the progress or lack of progress of Kansas students in their respective school districts.

The test is too short and often does not match the curriculum taught in the many Kansas school districts. Most administrators agree the test results have little value.

Although most school districts rarely use the test to chart a student's progress, a few are abusing the results and using them to determine high school graduation.

State-wide tests are expensive and when the results are less-thanaccurate, they are a waste of time.

School district officials should be able to chose their own competency tests — one that measures the curriculum taught in their particular schools. A student's advancement should not be based solely on a few hours of filling in little bubbles on a standardized

Higher enrollment may hurt

K-State not adapting to additional students

t happened last fall and has happened again. The preliminary enrollment figures indicate the enrollment on the first day of classes this fall was up by 1,400 compared with first day enrollment last year. Officials are anticipating that enrollment will parallel the 1982 figures for the first time in 6 years, and might even exceed 19,000. President Wefald and his associates ought to be applauded for this accomplishment.

It might be recalled that K-State experienced increased enrollment last year, and the continuation of the trend seems quite likely in the short run. That is why I am concerned about the half-hearted endeavour of the administration to cope with the needs created by the additional students.

The problem appears to be that the University is trying to pursue a follow-demand policy. Campus housing is a good example in this regard.

This policy of lagging behind current needs is likely to hurt the University enrollment in the long run. Scarce facilities paralleled with increasing enrollment are likely to repel new students and may pose a problem in retaining those already studying at K-State.

With increased enrollment the University is going to need more library facilities, parking spaces, fire protection, computation facilities and new buildings. But what needs immediate attention - and what meets the eye as soon as you set your foot on campus are crowded classes and inadequate housing.

The inability to increase the number of faculty members in proportion to the expanding size of the student body is likely to prompt a quality verses quantity issue. At present, most of the entry level classes are packed, and in addition it is difficult to get into some senior level classes.

Although it might not always be the case, the student-to-faculty ratio is a good indicator faculty in order to raise salaries. This plan of the quality of education at an institution. Forgive my ignorance for not knowing this ratio for K-State, but I can surely observe 60 students packed into my senior level finance class. An instructor in the College of Business, when asked for permission to enroll in his section, replied that he has 110 students in two sections when he ought to have 46.

Since last summer the capacity of composition classes per section has been increased from 23 to 26. Composition classes were one of the very few entry level classes which provided an atmosphere of close interaction between the freshmen and the instructor. Now we are beginning to lose that too.

The problem, of course, is a limited number of instructors are available to teach entry level classes along with high level courses. There have been some recent appointments in some departments, but there has also been drain from the system. For example, the Department of Economics has lost three key professors in the past six months. This does not seem unprecedented when it is observed that on a salary scale with 167 major and minor universities, K-State ranks at 160.

midst these developments, Faculty Senate has hit upon the absurd idea of cutting back the number of might show some promise in retaining valuable faculty at K-State, but it certainly does place the quality of education at this institution at stake and is inconsistent with the overall goal of increasing enrollment at K-State.

Apart from the strain some faculty and students are experiencing due to crowded classes, some new opportunities have come to focus for people fond of cooperative living.

Here's the deal. You live for an unspecified time, and the arrangement is temporary and you can be kicked out at any time, in a music room with five roomates and decorated with bunkbeds. This is the new special offered by housing this fall. Admitted, the housing has projected a very good image in the past and its food service still ranks No. 1 in the nation, but the planning may not even be in the top 1,000.

With Van Zile Hall lying useless and the alternative of subcontracting apartments in the vicinity of campus, it has to be either disbelief in increased enrollment projections or simply lack of coordination which held housing back from meeting the challenge.

s economists say, there is no such thing as a free lunch. It is about time to realize that increasing enrollment at K-State means additional costs. The thrust should be to collect more funds in addition to careful planning of future expansion. Mere rearrangement of resources is not likely to

State funding is not the only source. However, it is the most important and rightly so. Drastic increases in tuition are likely to backfire and discourage students to attend K-State for economic reasons. Our University has exhibited clear signs of growth. It is timely, since presidential elections are just around the corner, to pressure the state legislators and politicians to increase funding for K-

Unfortunately, Russel was incorrectly identified as a junior in accounting despite the fact that he witnessed the photographer, Joe Freeman, correctly record his major as Bible Ministries at Manhattan Christian College. Russel has never sought a degree from K-State.

This is the third time in the past year that a full-time MCC student has appeared in the Collegian and has been incorrectly identified as a K-State student or has had his or her major omitted from the caption.

MCC students have traditionally enjoyed our relationship with K-State. Full-time K-State students occasionally take advantage of the small class size and specialized courses offered at MCC and approximately 50 percent of MCC students are involved in the dual degree program (obtaining degrees from both institutions.) We at MCC value the use of K-State facilities such as the library and the recreational complex and enjoy participating in both intramural and varsity athletics, not to mention various social events. We appreciate the Collegian and distribute it daily.

K-State and MCC have a unique relationship which benefits students of both institutions. It would be a shame for either school to underestimate the other's value. MCC has many newsworthy events during the year and many quality students involved in both schools. MCC deserves the right to be properly recognized in this publication.

I am very displeased with the Aug. 30 front page review of comedian Robert Schimmel. As a member of the "packed crowd" at his Monday night performance, I can honestly tell you that his off-the-wall humor was greatly accepted by the majority of the crowd. As far as his billing being misrepresentative of his act, your writers must not have been around to notice the sign outside of Bushwacker's which specifically stated "adult humor."

So in the future, please send writers who are mature enough to appreciate adult humor so that they can give a review which is representative of the adult crowd.

John Wallerstedt was hired as the airport manager by the Mannattan Municipal Airport

Manhattan hires airport manager

The Manhattan Municipal Airport has ended a nine-month search for a new manager by hiring retired Air Force Major John Wallerstedt.

Wallerstedt, who is from Manhattan, took over the controls of the airport on Aug. 22, filling a vacancy existing since last December when the previous airport manager, William Fogerson, moved to a position with Capitol Air Lines.

Although Fogerson officially resigned in December, he remained on as part-time manager until April, said Bruce McCallum, director of public works for the city of Manhattan.

McCallum acted in the capacity of manager from the time Fogerson left until Wallerstedt's hiring in August.

Negotiations among officials from Manhattan, Junction City, Riley and Pottawatomie Counties caused the delay in hiring a new airport manager, said Mike Conduff, Manhattan city manager.

The officials were trying to establish the type of individual wanted to fill the position, he said.

One of Wallerstedt's first priorities as airport manager is to create a favorable impression for newcomers to the Manhattan area, he said.

"An airport is the front door to a community," Wallerstedt said.

Because of this, he is concentrating his efforts on improving the inward appearance of the airport terminal.

Enhancement and enrichment of facilities are short-term goals, he said, while allowing major changes to take their course.

One of the major changes Wallerstedt supports is the construction of an airport control tower.

Currently the airport is classified as a non-controlled airport since the loss of their small flight service station in July, Wallerstedt said.

The service station provided pilots with the necessary information needed to fill out flight plans, he said.

The loss of this service has not been detrimental to the airport as pilots could call a regional computer center in Wichita for the information, Wallerstedt said.

"The tower would be a plus for the field," he said. The city of Manhattan, which owns and operates the airport, has set up a committee to decide whether a tower would be feasible.

Wallerstedt, a 1963 K-State graduate in pre-law, set aside a possible career in law when he opted to join the Air Force, he said.

After recieving training in flying tactical fighter planes, he flew over foreign soil during tours of duty in Southeast Asia, Spain and Turkey.

"The greatest experience I ever had in my life was flying a tactical fighter," Wallerstedt said.

From 1980 to 1984 he was an advisor to the Commanding General and Staff on Air Force matters at Fort Wallerstedt said he has close ties to K-State since his son, Matt, was a linebacker for the Wildcat's football team from 1984 to 1987, and his daughter, Kristen, is a sophomore in elementary education. His wife, Penny, works for K-State with the Alumni Association.

Group works on tower proposal

The Manhattan airport could have a new skyline in the future — if the number of University and military construction of a control tower is approved by the city.

The city has established a special committee to look into the feasibility of building a new control tower, said Mike Conduff, Manhattan city manager.

director of public works, said although the Federal Aviation Administration has discouraged building a tower in the past, there is a possibility a tower could be approved.

An airport must have from 125,000 to 130,000 operations per year to receive federal funding for a tower, McCallum said.

McCallum describes an operation as the number of commercial, military or general aviation aircraft that take off or land at an airport.

"We have somewhat less than half of that. (But, the airport) is unique for an airport of its size," McCallum their plans, Wallerstedt said.

Currently, the Manhattan airport must communicate with the tower at Marshall Field at Fort Riley if they need information that a tower would provide, he said.

Although not an essential element - the tower would definitely be a plus for the field, Wallerstedt said. If the tower committee supports construction, one of the decisions to be made is how to get funding, Con-duff said. "Funding would be a policy making decision of the city commission," he said. "We have no funds set aside." McCallum estimated the tower would cost around $100,000 a year in additional monies to operate.

"(The $100,000) does not include construction or anything else," he McCallum listed several possible money sources for the tower, such as local tax monies, grants and user fees at the airport. The committee investigating the need for a control tower is composed of both air field and public interest representitives, Conduff said. Luann Maupin-Cramer, chairwoman of the special committee, said officials from the FAA, the small flight service station in Wichita and a contractor from Kansas City will join the committee at its first meeting. The contractor would be responsible for the operation of the tower after its construction, she said. 'We will be looking into possibilities and submitting a proposal to an air advisory board which will make a proposal to the city commission," Maupin-Cramer said. A different mix of traffic would be allowed at the airport if a tower was installed. This could lead to possible expansion in the future, she said. A tower could be a plus for the city also, she said. Businesses could be attracted to the area if the airport were upgraded.

"I think Manhattan is missing out on some economic benefits from a eral mandate that reduced the num- controlled field," Maupin-Cramer

The committee will meet at 1 p.m. Pilots of small aircraft now call the today in the fire station at the corner Kansas advisory station in Wichita to of Kimball and Denison to discuss gather the information needed for the need for a tower.

Chemical cutback will not stop 'greenhouse effect'

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - A group of climate researchers has warned that the "greenhouse effect" warming of the Earth will continue even if there are sharp cutbacks in the use of the chemicals which cause the problem.

The heatup "appears to be inevitable, even with ... drastic, and probably unrealistic reductions, of greenhouse forcing" by the release of carbon dioxide and other gases, the Geophysical Research-Atmospheres.

The group, led by James Hansen of the National Aeronautical and Space Administration, reached that conclusion after running computerized climate models in an effort to predict the climate in the future.

The models looked at the effect of chemical releases at three different levels: continuing rapid release of the chemicals, as in recent years; release in those chemicals.

In the first case, the Earth's average temperature was calculated to rise by 1.6 degrees Fahrenheit within

It would take 25 years for that increase in the second model.

And even with the drastic "and probably unrealistic" cutback in chemical releases, the temperature would rise that much eventually, and probably would climb by 0.8 degrees scientists reported in the Journal of at slower rates, and a drastic cutback within 15 years, according to the

The greenhouse effect has drawn increasing concern recently, although most meteorologists contend that it is too early to determine if it is responsible for the current drought and hot weather affecting much of the nation.

It occurs when carbon dioxide, largely from burning fossil fuels, and other gases - such as methane and nitrogen oxides - increase in the atmosphere. These gases let incoming heat from the sun reach the Earth, but block the Earth's own heat from traveling into space, much as a greenhouse traps heat indoors. As the gases become more abundant, more heat is trapped and the planet's temperature rises.

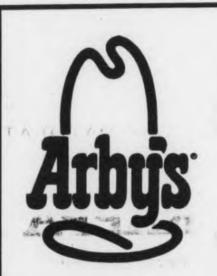

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration reported late Tuesday that global concentrations of carbon dioxide have increased by 25 percent since the mid-1800s.

Pieter P. Tans of NOAA's Boulder, Colo., laboratories said concentrations of the gas now top 350 parts per million in the atmosphere, up from about 280 parts per million in the mid- to late-19th century. Analysis of air trapped in ice cores indicates little, if any change.

Hansen told a congressional subcommittee earlier in the summer that the current hot, dry conditions are an example of things to come.

Full hall strains RESPECT program

By Melissa Paul Collegian Reporter

Students living in Putnam Hall demand RESPECT, and they get it. Residents Encouraging Study, Peaceful Environments, and Community Thinking is a program designed to protect the rights of students living in Putnam, said Mike Theobald, hall director.

The agreement ensures that residents have the right to study or sleep in their rooms at any time.

It also holds residents responsible for assisting with one non-social program per academic year, attending two academic and/or cultural events per semester, and abiding by the Quiet Guidelines, which require that all noise be contained within their rooms.

Initially, all students housed in Putnam knew and agreed with this and the demand for on-campus housing increasing, students who may have requested other halls are being placed in Putnam, Theobald said.

These students did not choose the RESPECT program, but are required to follow it. "It's the same situation as last year," Theobald said. Last year, the first floor was opened up for an overflow of males. This year, female students have been placed on the first floor. Theobald said this year's overflow was a surprise and a little harder to handle than last year's.

It will take time to fully implement the RESPECT program this year, but it won't be a problem, he said.

Overflow students are given the opportunity to relocate as spaces are available in other halls, Theobald said. Last year more than half of the program. Now, with enrollment up overflow students remained in Putnam rather than moving, he said, and it will probably be the same this year.

Cherie Wasson, senior in animal science, is the student staff member for the first floor residents of Putnam. She said having the overflow students is hard on the RESPECT program, but problems have also occurred with students who were required by their parents to stay in Putnam.

Wasson said she's working with the residents step by step, beginning with the basics now and working on other things throughout the year. "You've got to give it some time,"

Kristin Vorhies, freshman undecided, and Elisha Smith, freshman in special education, are living in Putnam because of the housing shortage. "The first few days I didn't like it, but now I do," Vorhies said. "I didn't really want to do it (RESPECT program), but it's something I needed to

Even after an opening is created, Smith said she will probably remain in Putnam. "I will probably stay. I think the thing that's getting everybody is that it's not air-conditioned," Smith said.

Vorhies and Smith said they believe there is less peer pressure to go out than there is in the other residence halls, and it's always their choice if they want to study.

Theobald said most students like living in Putnam because it's small and, thus, easier to get to know everybody. It's also easy to fulfill the RESPECT agreement, he said.

"This isn't a place of absolutes," Wasson said. "There's a lot going on here. It's just not as visible."

Center helps women

By The Collegian Staff

The Women's Resource Center must work to "warm the chilly climate" for women at K-State, said the center's new director.

Judy Davis, who assumed the director's position at the beginning of the fall semester, said she wants the center to do all it can to "make life for University women productive, safe and comfortable."

Part of the center's role is to work with faculty to make them aware that faculty biases against women could discourage women from entering certain academic programs, particularly traditional male programs, she said.

Davis spent the last six years directing the Crisis Center Inc., a Manhattan program for battered women. Reaching out to those who need assistance is another one her goals.

"The Women's Resource Center is available to individual students who find themselves needing help," she said.

Davis said the center, located in Room 03 of Leasure Hall, will either assist students in need of help or put them in touch with the appropriate agency on campus.

The Women's Resource Center offers educational programs ranging from safety to non-traditional career choices for women. The programs, she said, are not exclusively for females.

"I hope males will benefit from our services as well," Davis said. However, Davis said the series will not begin on Sept. 2, as previously publicized.

TOPEKA - A year ago Wednesday the gavel fell, and the Legislature opened its first special session since 1966 to debate a massive highway project proposed by Gov. Mike Hayden.

Six days later, after considerable sound and fury and late-night debates, it adjourned without passing a single bill. Lawmakers became hopelessly stalemated in their efforts to enact a comprehensive highway improvement program and failed to reach a consensus on anything.

The failed special session left lawmakers so worn and bruised there was barely a whisper of highways in the regular 1988 session, which started four months later. Moreover, any major highway program would have required a tax increase, something most lawmakers prefer to avoid when all 165 are up for re-election in

The most votes any plan received in the House was 29.

Hayden said he will study both recommendations before proposing a program of his own to the 1989 Legislature.

"I'm going to let both forces operate unabated," the governor said.

When the special session collapsed, Hayden blamed House Democrats, particularly House Minority Leader Marvin Barkis of Louisburg. But Democrats responded that Hayden's plan had little support from GOP lawmakers, either, and the governor failed to sell his program to the people.

Morris said the administration failed to convince people a highway program was needed. "That message is getting across," the senator added.

During the special session debates, a word was scarcely mentioned about the safety of the state's highways, Morris said.

KANSAS STATE COLLEGIAN, Wednesday, August 31, 1988 Union says Icahn misuses funds

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Carl Icahn is using TWA as his personal cash cow to the detriment of the airline and public safety, the flight attendants union charged Tuesday.

The union asked the U.S. Department of Transportation to block Icahn's plan to take Trans World Airlines Inc. private and to freeze TWA assets while it investigates his fitness to continue managing the airline.

Vicki Frankovich, president of the Independent Federation of Flight Attendants, charged that since Icahn took control of TWA a little more than two years ago, he has "milked" the airline's cash reserves and sold off assets to finance his stock market and takeover ventures rather than buy new airplanes and other safety equipment needed to assure TWA's

Through spokesman Bob Allen, Icahn called IFFA's allegations "spurious, malicious and erroneous" and designed "to embarrass the airline."

Today TWA has more planes, serves more airports and carries more passengers than in 1986," Allen said in a formal statement.

Still, TWA's fleet remains the oldest in the industry; the average plane is 14.6 years old, the union said. A TWA Boeing 727 that landed on its belly Saturday in Chicago when its landing gear failed to descend was 24 years old, according to the National Transportation Safety Board, which still is investigating the cause of that to spend just 1 percent of the gross value of its fleet on new equipment this year while other airlines are spending about 15 or 20 percent on new, fuel-efficient planes.

This, the union says, contributes to high maintenance costs and the airline's accident and incident rate, which according to the Federal Aviation Administration is the worst among the top 10 American airlines.

Old airplanes also cost more to maintain than new ones and TWA will have to spend more and more to keep its planes safe, the union says.

This would require a healthy cash flow," Frankovich said. "But according to disclosures in Icahn's own filings before the Securities and Exchange Commission, TWA's cash flow is not expected to be sufficient to repay the increased debt to be incurred under his privatization plan."

Icahn, who owns 75 percent of TWA's stock, will ask minority shareholders at a meeting Sept. 7 to sell their stock to him. Payments would be financed by the sale of $250 million in speculative, highyield bonds.

This would raise TWA's annual interest payments to $466 million, almost double the airline's 1987 operating earnings of $240 million, according to IFFA's analysis.

In addition, for his TWA stock, Icahn would receive $400 million in TWA assets, including a big chunk of Texaco stock, the union said.

"TWA is being managed today not as an air carrier but as an unsupervised mutual fund benefiting Mr. Icahn," Frankovich said.

campaign

TOPEKA - Gov. Mike Hayden and three national health groups today kicked off a campaign designed to make the state's high school graduating class of 2000 free of smokers.

The state's effort, in which schools will disseminate material about the hazards of smoking to children starting in the first grade, is part of a national program sponsored by the American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association and the American Lung Association.

Hayden marked the beginning of the campaign with brief remarks on the north steps of the State Capitol. Ten first-graders from across the state, who wore yellow "smoke free"

T-shirts, flanked him. Hayden, the children and campaign officials released yellow balloons at the end of

'We can't help but be reminded that the use of tobacco is the single most preventable cause of death and disease in the nation," Hayden said. "There is a strong correlation between cigarette smoking and the use of alcohol and other drugs."

Dr. Tom Houston, chairman of the state's Smoke Free Class of 2000 Committee, said the groups involved will monitor children in 30 schools across the state for the next 12 years. About 250 elementary schools about 25 percent of those in the state will participate in the program in some way, he said. "We're tracking the kids and seeing if there's a measurable difference," Houston said. "They're our experimental group."

Houston said studies show that about 20 percent of the nation's high school seniors smoke, compared to about 28 percent of the general population. He said a realistic goal would be to reduce that figure to 10 percent or below.

This is the kind of carnage we want to stop," Houston said. "They get hooked at an age at which they can't make a responsible decision."

Hayden also said he will continue his efforts to get the Legislature to pass stricter anti-smoking laws. Lawmakers last year banned the use of tobacco in public school buildings in which classes are held.

"I favor the elimination of smoking in the Capitol building," Hayden said. "I will be visiting with legislative leaders about that."

Hayden also said he has started an incentive program to get members of his staff to quit smoking. He said if a person on his staff can quit for six months, he or she will get a raise for the next six months.

Hayden won't tell choice for justice

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - Gov. Mike Hayden said today he's decided who will fill an impending vacancy on the state Supreme Court, but he declined to identify the the new Chief Justice David Prager, a Democrat, officially will retire from the seven-member court on Thursday. In July, the Supreme Court Nominating Commission sent Hayden, a Republican, the names of two judges on the Kansas Court of Appeals and a Topeka lawyer as nominees.

Hayden said all three met his litmus test - whether they agree with him that state laws can be modified to put limits on civil damage awards in an attempt to help solve a liability insurance

"You'll have to wait," Hayden told reporters at a news conference when asked whether he would name his selection. "Not too long."

The commission forwarded the three nominees' names to Hayden on July 7, and he had 60 days in which to fill the vacancy on the high court. If he declines to make the choice, the task falls to Justice Robert H. Miller, the chief justice-designate.

The nominees are Chief Judge Bob Abbott and Judge Fred N. Six of the Court of Appeals and attorney Charles N. Henson. All are Republicans.

When Prager replaced retiring Chief Justice Alfred Schroeder last year, it marked the first time in the history of the court that Democrats held a majority. Former Democratic Gov. John Carlin filled Schroeder's vacancy.

Hayden said the three nominees' views on tort revision proposals to change the civil justice system to solve the insurance crisis - contained "very little differences."

The governor said he did not discuss pending litigation or proposed legislation with them, but past cases. The Supreme Court has declared limits on civil damage awards in some cases unconstitutional, and Hayden has suggested the Legislature give voters a chance to approve an amendment to the Kansas Constitution allowing such limits.

Hayden said all three nominees had studied tort revision in advance of their nominations.

"It was a very difficult decision," Hayden said. "All three were very knowledgeable."

Watson's injury results in another QB controversy

Mid-Week Commentary

PERRIN Sports Columnist

If there's one thing you can count on every season in K-State football, it's a quarterback controversy.

Last year it was Gary Swim and Tim Hanson. The year before, it was Hanson and Randy Williams.

At the outset of preseason practices, with Coach Stan Parrish leaving little doubt that redshirt freshman Paul Watson would be the starter, it looked like this could finally be the year that the quarterback position gained a touch of stability.

So what happens? Watson, a notorious scrambler, goes out early last week and tears a shoulder ligament badly enough to keep him out of the Wildcats' season opener Saturday at Tulsa.

Almost immediately after Watson's injury, the speculation

"We'll have to be more stationary with what we do throwing the football," Parrish said. "(Watson) gave you that extra dimension."

Watson, whose recovery is moving along ahead of schedule, may start throwing in practice on Thursday of this week and could be ready to go as early as K-State's Sept. 17 game in New Orleans against Tulane. Parrish has said he "won't penalize" Watson for being hurt, hinting that Watson will return as the starter.

This could be a difficult switch to make, particularly if K-State wins at Tulsa or is competitive with powerhouse Iowa in the home opener Sept. 10. As seldom as K-State has won in recent years, making a quarterback change after a victory could be questionable wisdom.

From walk-on to starter Dillon proves size doesn't matter

By Chris Wilhelm Sports Writer

It's been a long, rough road, but Tom Dillon is finally in the driver's

After graduating from Manhattan Luckey High School in 1984, Dillon walked on to the Wildcat football team in his first spring at K-State under head coach Jim Dickey. He wasn't given a serious look, and sat out of school for a year and a half.

Dillon then returned to football under coach Stan Parrish's "12th man" plan. He stuck with it and is now preparing to start his first game as tailback for the 'Cats.

"I was told all my life that I wasn't big enough to play football and that I couldn't play for K-State," Dillon said. "I kind of believed it. People were telling me that and I guess I thought they knew what they were talking about."

He was wrong, and so were his

As a kickoff returner for K-State last season, Dillon ranked third in the Big Eight with an average of 20.6 yards per return. He was fifth on the team in rushing with 76 yards on 19 carries and he caught three passes for

While the rushing statistics aren't those of a Heisman Trophy candidate, for a 5-foor-6, 165-pound tailback who didn't get his chance until relatively late in life, they do reflect a world of heart.

"I realized (after sitting out of school for a year and a half) that I wanted to play football again," Dillon said. "I had only been away from the game for two and a half years and it was still burning in me.

"I decided that I didn't want to be like one of those 30-year-olds who wakes up and realizes that he didn't do something that he really wanted to do," he added. KANSAS CITY, Mo. - Tom Candiotti's shoulder tightened up

As far as not getting his chance his first time around with the 'Cats, he said coach Dickey wasn't really looking for new talent.

"They wanted me to try out as a receiver. I don't have real great hands and I didn't like the position. That down and across the middle (pass) route just wasn't my route," Dillon

"My position coach told me that if I hung around and stuck with it that I might make the traveling squad by my senior year. I felt then that they didn't really have any interest in me. I think they were more interested in getting more production out of their old players than looking for any new

Dillon was surprised two years later when coach Parrish called on members of the student body to stand up and be recognized as football

"I thought it was over," Dillon 3aid. "That's why I didn't play ball for two years. I didn't think that there was any future for me playing football. I went to the 12th man tryout figuring I had nothing to lose."

Dillon was one of about 100 students who initially tried out for the 12th man program. He was one of only 35 who were called back after the initial workouts and he is the only one who remains.

Twin Oaks softball complex boosts Manhattan's economy

By Bill Lang Sports Writer

Manhattan received an economic boost this summer with the opening of the Twin Oaks softball complex at Frank Anneberg Park.

Ivan Wilkinson, recreation supervisor for Manhattan's parks and recreation department, couldn't put an exact dollar amount on the money that came into Manhattan during the summer. But he did estimate the economic impact at more than $100,000.

"Obviously everybody that comes into town has to spend the night somewhere," Wilkinson said. "They have to eat, they've got to buy drinks, they've got to go shopping ... so the facilities," Wilkinson said. "But on a economic impact on Manhattan has got to be (up there).

"The hotel people will tell you that business was way up this year," he added. "Some were up 40 to 50 percent."

Wilkinson said the average visiting team spends $1,500 during its stay in Manhattan. "So take 'x' amount of teams and times that by $1,500 and you come up with a large fee," Wilkinson said.

He also said the actual economic value for his department is not as big as it is for the city.

"Usually the entry fees for the teams will help cover the costs for the good weekend, we might make $1,000 or sometimes we might just break even."

During the month of July, Wilkinson said the estimated direct impact on the city of Manhattan was $700,000, with a rollover figure of $2 million. The rollover figure accounts for the original money spent in stores, restaurants and hotels being spent again.

Wilkinson said the main goal of the new ball diamonds and the rest of Anneberg Park was to lure people to Manhattan.

"We have a new ball complex, a brand new mall, it's a college town. We have a lot to offer and we want people to see it," he said.

The success of the park was something that Wilkinson expected.

"We did about what I thought we would do," he said. "We're not anywhere close to what Hutchinson's Fun Valley is. But in a few years we could bring in the amount of money that it does."

Wilkinson said the new facility got off to a fine start during its grand opening in May, and has been booked solid during almost every weekend since.

"We started out with the Men of Steal's National Traveling Softball Team," Wilkinson said. "Our first tournament was May 28th and 29th. ... After that, we've had a tournament booked on the Twin Oaks Ball Diamonds every weekend - with the exception of July 2nd - until this last weekend."

Because of NCAA rules, the exhibition match between the Wildcats and the University of Nebraska last week was cancelled because Nebraska had not yet begun fall classes.

K-State's football team spent Tuesday's practice working on substution drills and preparing for Tulsa, the Wildcats' seasonopening opponent. K-State will play Saturday at 6 p.m. at Tulsa.

NCAA finds steroid use still exists

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - An offseason program begun last spring by the National Collegiate Athletic Association at 25 schools found nearly one-third of football players at some colleges tested positive for

"The range we saw was from zero to up to 30 percent positive at some schools," Frank Uryasz, director of sports sciences for the NCAA, told The Kansas City Star. He told The Associated Press that the overall average of players who tested positive was between 3 and 4 percent.

Steroids, synthetic versions of the male sex hormone testosterone, have been linked to increased sports injuries and serious health risks.

NCAA officials said the findings, to be released in greater detail this fall, suggest the current policy of testing players only prior to NCAA championship events and bowl games may deter steroid abuse, but has not ended it.

Last fall, only 1.3 percent of 1,589 athletes tested positive for drugs before NCAA championships and bowl games.

Uryasz said the off-season testing confirmed suspicions that college athletes are switching from oil- to water-based steroids to avoid detection. Some experts say water-based steroids usually wash out of most athletes within 14 days, so players preparing for bowl games have time to clean their systems of the drugs.

KU enrollment remains stable

By The Associated Press

LAWRENCE — After large increases the past two years, enrollment is stabilizing at the University of Kansas, according to preliminary figures for the first day of classes.

The university said the headcount as the fall semester began Monday was 26,719, an increase of 94 from the first day last year. The figure includes students at Lawrence, in the various offcampus programs, and at the University of Kansas Medical Center in Kansas City, Kan.

The modest increase is more in line with 1985, when first-day enrollment was up 102 to 24,660. The following year it jumped 1,083 to 25,743, and last year the increase was 882 to 26,625.

The Monday enrollment at Lawrence and in off-campus programs, including the Regents Center in Johnson County and the Capital Complex Center in Topeka, was 24,448, an increase of 125 from 1987. The medical center was down 38 to 2,398.

Judith Ramaley, executive vice chancellor of the Lawrence campus, said the university sought to bring enrollment there under control through such things as application deadlines and selective admission criteria for out-of-state students.

"To maintain our quality, we have taken steps to assure a match between our teaching capabilities and numbers of students," she

"We have also been emphasizing preparation," she said. "The regents recommended curriculum, we believe, is an excellent way to prepare to take advantage of KU's offerings. The application deadlines have helped assure that entering students participate in orientation, a program that acquaints new students with the university and the wide variety of options open to them."

Chancellor Gene Budig noted there was also an increase in average ACT scores for entering freshman, up to 22.1 from last year's 21.9.

Budig said he was especially pleased that 40 new National Merit Scholars enrolled at Kansas this fall

Smokeless cigarette to be tested

No safety claims made

By The Associated Press

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — A cigarette that produces flavor by heating a capsule instead of burning tobacco will be test marketed in October, R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. said Tuesday, but health advocates said smoke is smoke and the new brand won't be cleaner.

"Just because they remove a vast amount of the visible smoke does not eliminate all of the noxious chemicals," said Athena Mueller, general counsel for Action on Smoking and Health in Washington, D.C. "The visible particles are reduced, but it doesn't make it safe for non-smokers."

Reynolds, however, said the lowtar, low-nicotine Premier could become its best-selling brand.

"We believe it has the potential to capture a significant share of the market," said Richard Kampe, president of the tobacco company's development division. "It's a technological breakthrough that addresses all of the criticism that's been generated against cigarettes."

Kampe said the product will be aimed at smokers over age 25.

"This is an example of American ingenuity at its best," he said. "It's important for all of us to understand that a (health and safety) controversy does exist. Here is a cigarette that offers good taste and pleasure by heating rather than burning."

A carbon heat source is lit at the tip of the cigarette, and it heats air that is then drawn past the flavor capsule containing tobacco extracts.

Reynolds Tobacco, one of the nation's largest cigarette manufacturers and a subsidiary of Atlantabased RJR Nabisco Inc., began selling the new brand this week to distributors, supermarkets and discount chains in three test market cities.

Beginning Oct. 1, Premier will go on sale in St. Louis, and Phoenix and Tucson, Ariz., at a cost about 25 percent — or about 30 cents a pack — more than the company's other brands. Betsy Annese, director or public relations for the tobacco company, said the cities were chosen because they have "the right mix of retail outlets and a very good distributor network."

Dave Brenton of Mesa, Ariz., founder of the Smokers Rights Alliance, said he didn't believe Premier would satisfy people who want to eradicate smoking.

"We believe that Reynolds has provided this product in an attempt to pacify the outcry from the antismoking crusaders out there," Brenton said. "I'm afraid that if that is what they really are attempting, they are doomed to fail, because what we have seen is people out there saying 'Look, this doesn't make us happy either.' They're not going to be pleased until nobody consumes tobacco in any form."

Kampe said the term "smokeless cigarette" is a misnomer. But he said the cigarette is without odor and produces only a trace of ash or smoke that could irritate people nearby, he said.

"It reduces many of the controversial compounds associated with burning cigarettes and virtually eliminates sidestream smoke," he said. "This is not a safe or safer cigarette. It's a cleaner cigarette."

Joyce Taylor, branch director of the Arizona Lung Association in Tucson, said smokers won't know what they're inhaling.

"My theory is that regardless of more healthful."

what they're saying, if they're going to light it, they're still going to have carbon monoxide, which is one of the major irritants in smoke, and nicotine," she said. "They're not telling us what's in that packet. They don't want the FDA to be involved, because then they would have to tell everybody what they put into tobacco smoke."

Company officials are not making any health or safety claims, which could invite scrutiny by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

William Grigg, an FDA spokesman, said "If a product is sold with claims to make cigarettes safer, it is a medical device" and subject to FDA approval.

Mueller said it was "certainly a possibility" that the smokeless cigarette would ultimately be regulated by the FDA because R.J. Reynolds was "already advertising it as

Officials seize drugs

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — More than 1,200 people were arrested this month in a 30-nation drug crack-down unprecedented for its international teamwork, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh said Tuesday.

The operations, centered in the United States and South and Central America, led to the seizure of 11 tons of cocaine and the destruction of 244 tons of marijuana, 118,000 coca plants and 13 cocaine laboratories, Thornburgh announced.

Authorities also demolished seven hidden airstrips and seized $3.8 million in cash, he said.

The Aug. 1-28 campaign involved a variety of operations, including intensified border searches, the discovery and destruction of chemical stores, and increased patrols of airports, highways and rivers known to have been used for illicit drug shipments.

In Florida, Arizona and Texas, about 100 members of the National Guard helped inspect over 6,000 vehicles, leading to the seizure of marijuana.

Thornburgh, revealing the operation at a news conference, said "The statistics are not as important as the signal that has been sent to the drug kingpins. Henceforth they will increasingly face the combined fury of law enforcement agencies of all nations whose people they victimize."

He called the international cooperation an "important milestone" and the "first type of operation of its kind" on the war against drugs. Regional operations, those involving more than one or two countries, have not been tried before, he said.

The participating countries, all members of the International Drug Enforcement Conference, shared resources and intelligence and, in a few cases, staged cross-border operations. Officials insisted that the United States did not orchestrate the effort.

John C. Lawn, head of the Drug Enforcement Administration and president of the conference, said in a statement that several European nations and Canada stepped up monitoring of aircraft, boats and cargo arriving from South America. Lawn was in Bogota, Colombia, Tuesday for a conference meeting.

Thomburgh said the operation did not cost extra money, but represented a more effective use of existing resources.

DEA officials said there was no central director for the dozens of operations carried out around the Western Hemisphere.

"There's nothing he can't do," Parrish said of Watson. "If I could compare him to somebody it would be to (Oklahoma State's Mike) Gundy. He can scramble, he can run. He has great accuracy, a strong arm."

In a year where Parrish has toned down the touts and boasting, these are some pretty strong words about a quarterback who hasn't played a down of college football. But maybe Watson truly is all of that and more. Recruited by many of the nation's top football schools, Watson narrowed down his choices to K-State and Florida State before settling on the 'Cats.

But as good as Parrish says Watson is, you can't blame the average fan for being skeptical. Swim arrived as a junior college transfer last season with similar billing and didn't live up to expectations.

It shouldn't be a much easier situation for Watson this year. And in the end, Watson's injury may be somewhat of a blessing, if only because it removes some of the pressure.

By the time Watson takes the field against either Tulane or Louisiana Tech at KSU Stadium Oct.1, the pressure may be nonexistant, particularly if K-State does as many "We did a magnificent job of set- expect and loses its opening games.

Dallas airliner takeoff crash kills 13

By The Associated Press

GRAPEVINE, Texas - A Delta Air Lines 727 jetliner burst into flames as it crashed on takeoff Wednesday, killing 13 people. But 94 survived as passengers, some cradling infants, scrambled out of the shattered

At mid-afternoon, six hours after the crash in hazy sunshine at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, Delta spokesman Bill Berry in Atlanta said 13 fatalities, including an infant, were confirmed but that the numbers of victims could continue to fluctuate. The count was complicated by the difficulty in determining how many babies were aboard, he said.

Thirty-four survivors were hospitalized, Berry said. Survivors included the captain and two other pilots, one of whom was working as a flight engineer, he said.

"We were just terrified," said passenger Mona Thomason. "We jumped on the wing, but it looked like we were jumping into a pit Investigators had no immediate indication of the cause of the crash, said Michael Benson, a spokesman for the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington.

"Apparently the pilot made an attempt to abort. ... There apparently was an engine problem," Fred H. Rollins, Delta's district manager for marketing in Salt Lake City, where the plane was headed.

A 16-member NTSB panel arrived late Wednesday from Washington to bolster a three-person team from Fort Worth. Member Lee Dickinson would not speculate on a cause, but said the team would remain at the scene at least five to seven days. He said it was uncertain if the aircraft flight data recorder, known as the "black box," had been recovered.

Spokesmen for Boeing and for Pratt & Whitney, the manufacturer of the plane's three engines, said they would also send investigators.

Fire and rescue crews quickly reached the wreckage in a level field about 1,000 feet beyond the end of the runway. It was at the opposite end of the airport from the site of the crash of a Delta Lockheed L-1011 on Aug. 2, 1985, in which 137 people died.

"We didn't make it 50 feet in the air. We skidded and then the engine exploded," said passenger Jim Hammock of Garland. "There was pandemonium. People were jumping on the plane's wing and burning themselves on it because it was so red hot. We got out of the way fast because we thought it was going to explode."

Penn Waugh, a Dallas attorney who was on the flight, told reporters the plane "never got in the air."

"You heard the thing crumple so you knew you were going to crash the whole time," said Waugh, who was uninjured. "You were just looking for a way to get out of the plane. You're hoping you weren't going to die."

Most of those hospitalized suffered burns, cuts or broken bones. Bill Whitman, a spokesman for Harris Methodist-H.E.B. Hospital in Bedford, said 64 survivors were brought to the hospital, of whom 19 were admitted.

All those admitted were in satisfactory to stable condition, and the most serious cases involved smoke inhalation, Whitman said.

Flight 1141 originated in Jackson, Miss., and was taking off for Salt Lake City when it went down at 9:03 a.m.

Americans marrying later, study finds

By Angela J. Smith Collegian Reporter

Young people in the United States are living at home longer, marrying later, and taking more time to become self-sufficient, according to a government study.

Assistant Education Secretary Chester E. Finn Jr., said the study of youth aged 14 to 24 indicates they are "staying home longer."

Finn said the figures in the report show young people "are living with their parents longer and they are slower to form their own families."

The trend has reached the Midwest with a number of young people remaining home after they receive their college education, according to

munications, said, "I consider living organizations. at home a transition period between college life and completely being on

"It gives you a chance to get on your feet and save some money for the future."

Jill Holder, a former graduate assistant at K-State, said she lived at home for two years so she could save money and establish a nest egg for the future.

"They seem to be becoming autonomous, self-supporting individuals at a slower rate than was once the case," Finn said.

"Youth Indicators: Trends in the Well-Being of American Youth" is a report compiled with information which has been collected since 1950. The information is taken from federduate in journalism and mass com- al agencies and private

Not only are young people living at home more, but they are also marrying later, according to the study.

Father Norbert Dlabal, chaplain of St Isidore's Catholic Center, said, Young people are more apprehensive to make a commitment to another person.

"I also think the economic considerations have a lot to do with it. They realize it's a load to pay the bills. In a sense, they are taking advantage of their parents' household."

First Christian Church Minister Ben Duerfeldt said, "I am doing as many marriages, but people are older. I would say the average age is 5 to 7 years older than it was several years

Rick Miller, instructor for human a marriage/family therapist, said education seems to push marriage back for many young people. "The family is still important to young people, but getting an education seems to be just as important,"

Miller said contraceptives contribute significantly to people marrying

"Thirty years ago people would get married so they could have sex. Now people have sex without getting married. (Today) they have a lot of contraceptive choices," Miller said.

Mike Cormaci, senior in agricultural economics, said he believes the demands made on his generation make the difference.

"I feel that one of the possible reasons is partly due to the demands that development and family studies and are placed on people our age. Marriage is another responsibility that they have to deal with that may limit them in their working environment,"

> The report contained the following findings:

> ■ The share of youth aged 18 to 24 who lived with their parents or in college dorms rose from 43 percent in 1960 to 53.6 percent in 1985.

> The number of first marriages per 1,000 never-married women aged 20 to 24 fell from 220.1 in 1970 to 104.4 in 1984.

Median income for women aged 20 to 24 fell from $12,517 in 1980 to $12,192 in 1986, using constant 1986 dollars. The comparable figures for young men fell from $16,113 in 1970 to $14,152 in 1986.

Irish violence swelling

By The Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland An Irish Republican Army bomb exploded Wednesday in an apartment booby trap set for British soldiers, killing an elderly neighbor and a woman. The IRA apologized for the trap that went "tragically wrong."

Also on Wednesday, police said three men killed in a British army ambush Tuesday were IRA terrorists armed and dressed for action. The attack was seen as the start of a British crackdown on the outlawed IRA. West German police captured two heavily armed suspected IRA guerrillas heading toward a British Army barracks at night after they drove through a remote border crossing.

The apartment bomb in Londonderry, about 60 miles northwest of Belfast, was triggered by an elderly man who climbed through a window, worried that the young man living there had not been seen for several days, police said.

The blast demolished the apartment, killing an elderly man and a woman standing outside and injuring another man, said spokesman Sgt. Winston Winters.

An IRA statement and the police account indicated the IRA abducted the apartment's occupants several days ago and planted the booby trap, hoping an army search party would enter the apartment and trigger the explosives.

The IRA's Londonderry unit apologized in a statement circulated to the news media.

Since November, the IRA has killed 20 civilians unintentionally and has apologized repeatedly.

This summer, it has escalated its war to drive the British from the pro-

Toxic waste ship denied entry

PLYMOUTH England - A ship carrying toxic waste that the government refused to accept for disposal sailed away Wednesday after two days in international waters off Britain.

The destination of the Karin B, loaded with 2,100 tons of industrial solvents, was unknown, said a port control official in this southern city.

The wastes, which originated in Italy, were dumped secretly and illegally in Nigeria and then removed in two shiploads by contractors for Italian authorities.

The Karin B, which left Nigeria July 30, was rejected by Spanish and Welsh ports before appearing off Plymouth on Monday, said the environmental group Friends of the Earth. West Germany also said it would not accept the waste.

A second ship, the Deep Sea Carrier, sailed from Nigeria Aug. 15 carrying 1,000 tons of the solvents reportedly for Revenna, Italy, which objected strongly to accepting the cargo. It showed up off Gibraltar and was off Portugal Wednesday, said the environmental group.

Mandela moved from hospital

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa - Jailed black nationalist Nelson Mandela has been moved from a hospital to a private clinic while he recuperates from tuberculosis, the government said Thursday. The move sets the stage for a possible release from government custody.

Mandela, 70, was transferred on Aug. 12 from Pollsmoor Prison, to nearby Tygerberg Hospital, where he was diagnosed with the disease.

Mandela, leader of the outlawed African National Congress, has been in prison for 26 years.

He has been making a speedy recovery from his illness, his doctors have said, and was moved late Wednesday night to the Constantiaberg Clinic in Cape Town, a spokesman for the prison service, Danie Immelman, told the independent South African Press Association.

The move appears to confirm widespread speculation that Mandela would be placed in a private clinic and gradually reintroduced to the South African public before the government decides whether to release him outright.

Former gang member 'too old'

YORKVILLE, Ill. - A high school senior who hit "rock bottom" in jail as a gang member went from the streets to student council president. But he faces a legal battle to keep playing football in hopes of winning a college scholarship.

Robert Vaughn, 19, is a former street-gang member from Aurora and is now a "B" student at Yorkville High School in this affluent western Chicago suburb.

His family moved in 1986 to Yorkville where Vaughn, the only black at the school of 640, is now the student council president and a star running back for the Fighting Foxes, gaining more than 700 yards last year.

Vaughn is fighting an Illinois High School Association regulation that says he is too old to play organized high school

Attorneys for Vaughn filed a lawsuit Aug. 22 challenging the association's refusal to grant him an exemption from the rule. Vaughn turned 19 July 10 and the rule says he is ineligible because his 19th birthday was before Aug. 15.

Singer may visit space station

HOUSTON - Singer John Denver, who wants to ride aboard the Soviet Mir space station, is spending three days at NASA's Johnson Space Center undergoing a medical evaluation given to all astronaut applicants, a spokesman says.

Denver, 44, began the medical evaluation Tuesday, and is paying $1,500 to $2,000 for it, a space center spokesman said. Aviation Week & Space Technology magazine reported recently that Denver asked the Soviets to launch him to the Mir space station after he failed in repeated attempts to ride on the U.S. space shuttle.

But Carrie Click, a spokeswoman for Denver, said the Soviet Union has contacted numerous Americans — from scientists to politicians to Denver — about having an American fly in the Soviet space program.

"John did not approach them," she said.

Glickman urges site cleanup

WICHITA - Rep. Dan Glickman is urging the Environmental Protection Agency to take a tougher stance in connection with the cleanup of the Furley hazardous waste site near Wichita.

The 80-acre dump was closed by state officials in 1982 after contaminants from it were found in nearby groundwater. In a Tuesday letter to Morris Kay, EPA regional administrator, the Democratic congressman expressed disappointment at what he said was lax enforcement by the agency. "Furley is just one example of how this administration's regulatory policies are affecting each and every American by increasingly exposing them to environmental hazards," Glickman said in a separate statement issued Wednesday.

Riley troops leave for Europe FORT RILEY - The Big Red One is on the move, heading to Germany and a round of war games as part of the Reforger

The first of 26 planeloads of soldiers left Tuesday from Forbes Field in Topeka, and departures are to continue at the rate of approximately three flights a day through Sept. 4.

The Army's First Infantry Division, based at Fort Riley, is sending 6,700 soldiers to the maneuvers. The troops will travel by convoy from Frankfurt into the southwest part of West Germany to take their positions for Exercise Certain Challenge, a 100,000-force NATO drill that is the centerpiece of Reforger.

The war games are scheduled Sept. 12-22, with the Fort Riley soldiers scheduled to return home through the first part of October.

The soldiers board a variety of military and civilian aircraft for the flights to Germany. Some soldiers are assigned to the older and less comfortable C141s, but most will draw some model of the stretchier "jumbo jet," a C5A Galaxy, L1011, DC-10, or 747.

Drowning may be accidental

JUNCTION CITY - A soldier whose body was recovered... from the Republican River in Junction City on Tuesday was the victim of an accidental drowning, a preliminary autopsy showed. Col. Manny Bala, chief of pathology at the Fort Riley Army Base, said results of additional tests would not be available a few weeks.

The victim was identified by the Geary County Sheriff's Department as Terry Lee Davis, 23, of Caseyville, Ill. He was reported missing Monday morning. The body was found by another soldier.

Treaty in jeopardy; Soviet radar culprit

By The Associated Press

GENEVA — The United States on Wednesday threatened to take action to suspend or terminate the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty unless the Soviet Union dismantles a radar complex in Siberia. A statement from the U.S. delegation to a weeklong conference that reviewed the accord made plain that the Soviets gave an unsatisfactory response to U.S. concerns about the Krasnoyarsk radar installation. The Soviet Union made no immediate comment. The chief Soviet delegate at the conference scheduled a news conference today.

Pinochet, who commands the army, has led the military government that has governed Chile since September 1973, when the elected government of Marxist President Salvador Allende was overthrown in a bloody coup by the armed forces. Allende died in the coup.

Pinochet was picked in a meeting with the chiefs of the navy, air force and national police to be the sole candidate in an Oct. 5 presidential referendum.

The opposition cites several opinion polls that give a 2-1 advantage to Pinochet opponents in the ballot. Government-contracted polls give him a slight edge in the vote.

Columnist questions required core classes Courses too often focus on white, western heritage

t's 7:30 a.m. and your alarm goes philosophy class of the year.

"Geez," you think out loud. "Why should I have to get out of my cozy bed for philosophy, when I'm a textile design major? This has absolutely no impact on what I want to the teacher trying to make me interested in it. I wish the stupid University wouldn't make us take such dumb stuff, when I could be taking more classes in my major. You know, important stuff I'll need to know in the real world."

You can change the above scenario by inserting the words history, English or any class if you don't want to. You can learn to do other required class in place of philosophy. And you can change the major to just about any major on campus where a core curriculum of classes is required to graduate. In any case, the effect is the same. Students are being required to enroll in, and pay for, classes they didn't want to take in the first place. all the students a basic core of common edu-Not only that, but they are also limited in the cation to build from, so that if a specific amount of classes they may take in their major.

Why are outside classes so important if off. You roll out of bed and get many students don't want to take them anyready to head to your first way? Why aren't all schools like Brown University or Grinnel College, where there is no, or a limited, required core of classes? That way students can avoid time killers like history and psychology when they really want to spend all their time and money figuring out do. It's just a waste of my time and the time of engineering problems, or designing architectural masterpieces.

Are these schools really fulfilling their obligation to their students? Are they really colleges, or are they Vo-Tech schools in disguise? Unfortunately, many students don't realize until they are here that they do have a choice. You don't have to take that English II a specific job just as well, if not better, at a two-year technical school without taking all the extra unrelated classwork.

It's easy to forget that college is a place for an education, not a place to acquire a specific skill. And, hopefully, these classes will give career doesn't work out, they don't have to return to school. They should have enough knowledge about other aspects of life that they can adjust to a new situation.

Apparently, the University thinks that a core curriculum of classes is important, and has thus set up a cafeteria style system of core class selection, where the student can choose one class from a list of possible classes to fill each requirement. This was probably designed to give the students more of an illusion of freedom to try to indulge their individual tastes, as well as to keep everyone from crowding into one required class.

he problem is that once we have decided that a core curriculum is indeed a good idea, we then have to required.

Some classes seem obvious. Of course you need English to be able to write well. But some classes are less obvious. If history is required, what sort of history - western, eastern, or ancient? What makes one more important than another? And if western history is taught, how is it taught? Are the readings from the same old, white, male masters that everyone should know? Or is there a diversity of material encompassing women and ethnic backgrounds? Or should we perhaps not even think about selecting works on the basis of the race or sex of the writer, just on the quality of the work?

Many classes have these sorts of problems when selecting a course of study. Many instructors wish to continue teaching the same old core of master works for years and years, arguing that we all need a common core of knowledge to base our society upon.

But is it really fair to the students to continue to teach a biased white male approach to all the classes when our society is becomdecide what sort of classes should be ming increasingly diverse? Or is this a signal to those of different backgrounds that they are unwelcome in the predominantly white male world of higher education?

These are questions that must be addressed by the faculty and faculty senate. But they are also questions that each of us as students must resolve among ourselves when we select courses from the smorgasbord in the catalog. Will we take women's studies, or Greek history? How can we avoid bias, while still getting a full education?

think the best solution to the problem is to quit debating the problem of course material so much, and instead offer more classes in logic and critical

If we learn to think critically about the material thrown before us to read, then hopefully we can personally overcome ignorance, and cultural biases in the class curriculum. Not only that, but we will be able to think for ourselves independently and identify biases and falsehoods in that not-so-far-away "real world." Isn't that what a college education is supposed to do for us anyway?

Minority recruiting highlights problem

At a press conference last week, University officials announced that about 10 new minority faculty and staff have been hired. Preliminary enrollment figures show an increase from last year of about 20 percent in undergraduate minorities, with minority students currently numbering 327, up from 276. For the first time, K-State is including minority development in the strategic planning process.

On the surface, the figures for minority recruitment of faculty and students are encouraging, and the "effort" by the administration to correct the very serious deficiency of the University is at least a beginning.

But perhaps one should question how the University's commitment to recruit minorities came to be in the condition that it is. And why now the sudden "commitment"?

Regarding the latter, a cynic might suggest that the recent Convocation address by John Slaughter concerning the relationship between racism and college curricula prompted the scurrying to please and appease.

If that is so, however, then Slaughter's intent to draw attention to the problem in order to solve it will have been

It is the long term "commitment" that is of concern - the same one that was supposedly expounded nearly two decades ago regarding civil rights and equal opportunity employment and the proclaimed abhorrence of racism and discrimination.

Perhaps the fact that the recruitment of minorities is considered an "effort" is the problem itself.

"Effort" implies an assumption that not many minorities exist who have much else to offer to the white American society than what they have already offered. "Effort" implies that the University or any institution must go out of its way - or condescend, even - to recruit minorities. "Effort" implies a bother that must be dealt with only until the furor dies down.

Sadly, it appears the "effort" of the past decades has succeeded only on the last point. It has not succeeded in creating an understanding between races and classes that would make even the term "recruitment of minorities" obsolete.

Minorities should not be recruited because they are minorities, but because they are qualified people who have something valuable to contribute to this University and this society. The "effort" should only exist in creating an understanding, and understanding can only be achieved through proximity. This, ironically, may take more "effort" than the administration even conceives at this time.

How much proximity, after all, is achieved with only 327 undergraduates and 10 faculty in a University with thousands of people?

All I wanted was my drop/add appointment card, and a chance to get the classes I needed.

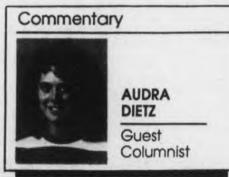

At last my journey was over. I staggered up to the table only to see the stack of cards swept away by the appointment card monitor. "Wait!" I shouted. "I've been toiling in this long line for days. I just need a card. I don't Desprately, I pleaded my case. No one else was around, and I didn't see what difference it made to her if I got my appointment card one minute before noon. Legally, I still had 60 seconds. But it was no use. She said it was impossible to obtain an appointment card until the afternoon.

Now, I knew it wasn't impossible. I could see the cards stacked neatly on the table two feet behind her. (She probably had to walk farther than that to get her lunch, but she wouldn't get me a card.) If I could just get past Mrs. Monitor, I could have obtained one myself. It's not like I asked her to part the Red Sea or let me play with her sacred computer terminal. I guess she thought reaching behind her was too much of a strain.

I did have an appointment card earlier, but it was robbed from my backpack. My books, my money and my P.E. socks were untouched. I feel safer carrying my credit cards on campus than my drop/add slip. I can get the plastic replaced. I guess VISA just isn't as valuable as an appointment card.

K-State should make a MASTER APPOINTMENT CARD and sell it to desperate students trying to graduate on time. It could be good for any drop/add needs all semester. They could even charge the going interest rate-by-the-hour for NOT waiting in fter lunch, I reluctantly returned to the Farrell basement. I almost brought my pup tent and a can of Pork & Beans. Camping might have helped pass the time. It took me about three days to add one class. It's frustrating to know that we have the technology to get to the moon and back, but not to get through a drop/add line in a reasonable amount of time.

Line schedules aren't any better. Every semester, I pick up my own schedule and plaster my name all over it in permanant, black magic marker. And every semester, someone swipes it. I know this seems trivial, but why do people steal things that are free anyway? It must be the thrill of beating the system, or just beating me. No matter how hard you try, chances are, the line schedule you end up using isn't yours. The one you picked up in the bookstore probably got swiped too and you had to go get a new one or borrow one from your roomate. Maybe it's a training project for potential IRS agents.

All this just goes to show you, that you can't beat the system. But you sure as hell can hat's all for now. Be sure and tune in next week for another editon of "Farrell Fantasies." I hear they're giving away a trip-for-two to the Boston Book Binding Factory for anyone who actually leaves their Willie Re-Fill Cups at the front gate.

Chief justice retires

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA — Chief Justice David Prager of the Kansas Supreme Court said farewell Wednesday to associates and friends at a reception in his honor at the Kansas Judicial Center.

Prager, 69, retires effective today. He will be succeeded as chief justice by Robert H. Miller, also 69, who has served on the court for 13 years. Miller, senior member of the court after Prager, ascends to chief justice by reason of his seniority.

U-LearN center moving

By The Collegian Staff

Students anxious to know a friend's new phone number or gather material for a speech will have to wait one more week before they can call U-LearN for the information.

U-LearN, K-State's information and resource center, will reopen in Leasure Hall. The center, which was previously located in Holton Hall, was closed this summer because of a lack of accommodations.

Conflicts in class scheduling in Leasure caused the delay in U-LearN's opening this fall, said Jodi Hays, supervisor of U-LearN. The center will remain in Leasure for one year or until renovation in Holton Hall is completed.

The new location should be easily accessible to all students, said Fred Newton, director of counseling center.

Hays said they hope to get a large neon sign to put in the window so that everyone will know where U-LearN is located.

She said U-LearN's primary function is "to provide information to students to connect them to appropriate resources." U-LearN's goal is for students to get correct information quickly. There are two ways for students to use U-LearN for informational purposes, she said. Students may walk in and use the resources available, or they may call and ask for the information. Changes at U-LearN this semester will include more outreach programs, Hays said. She has also hired four additional staff members and seven work-study students.

Flint Hills Breadbasket helps many

for needy families

By The Collegian Staff

The Flint Hills Breadbasket will distribute powdered milk to needy and low income families from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today at the Breadbasket building at 905 Yuma St.

This milk is the first that the United States Department of Agriculture surplus food commodity has received for distribution to low income families in several months, said Atina Hanna, executive director of the Breadbasket. "It was an unexpected and welcome shipment," Hanna said.

To qualify for the Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program, recipients must be Riley County residents and meet certain income guidelines. A household of one cannot have a monthly income in excess of $625; a household of two, $837; a household of three, $1050; and so forth, adding $212 for each additional family member.

A home economist from the Riley County Extension Service will be on hand to provide recipes and give demonstrations of the many different ways to use powdered milk in home cooking.

Hanna said that last year the government decided not to distribute any more surplus USDA food under the Temporary Emergency Assistance Food Program. In July, the Senate approved a bill to reinstate the program. Shipments of cheese, milk, flour, butter, rice and cornmeal should start arriving in November.

Milk now available | Canned, boxed food items sought

By Kelly Campbell Collegian Reporter

Marked boxes for donations of canned and boxed food items are in all the major grocery stores in the Manhattan area as part of the Labor Day weekend food drive, which began Wednesday and will end Sept. 7. The food drive is sponsored by the Flint Hills Breadbasket.

Donations by student organizations and area clubs are welcome. They can be taken directly to the Breadbasket building, 905 Yuma St., on weekday mornings.

The Breadbasket is the center for the community food network in Riley County.

We are like an hourglass," said Atina Hanna, executive director.

"We collect, solicit and salvage food items. We actually go out and dig potatoes and pick apples, tomatoes or watermelons. We then funnel the food out to needy families in the county through various social service activities and programs."

Items collected from the food drive will be dispersed to the 31 food assistance organizations served by the Breadbasket community food network.

Needy families are referred to these organizations through social services. Hanna said the Breadbasket usually can distribute enough food to last families three to five days to help them through a financial crisis.

The most needed items at this time are peanut butter, canned tuna, canned meats, sugar, crackers, coffee, macaroni, and canned vegetables and fruits.

"But shoppers don't have to buy items to donate," Hanna said. "Look to your own pantry this weekend and bring in items you have had for some maintenance, she said.

Manhattan residents are also invited to bring perishable food to the Breadbasket. Home grown fruits and vegetables are plentiful right now and surplus items are frequently Hanna said she urges gardeners with excess crops to donate to the Breadbasket. Volunteers will pick the items, she said.

The organization needs people to help with many things, such as typing, filing, organizing the food storage area and helping with building

"Back then..."

Few students finish their education without at least one memorable night. But what that night consisted of was far different in the 60s and 70s than the memories students are making today.

Dress was more casual and hair styles longer in the mid '70s, and students, without the benefit of backpacks, carried their books.

K-State students celebrate a basketball win over Missouri in 1964 with a dime dance at the Union. At the time, a Manhattan ordinance banned dancing in Aggieville.

K-Staters have traditionally prided themselves as partiers, but as times have changed, so has the definition of wildlife.

When Terry Ray, owner of Kite's Bar and Grille, Last Chance Restaurant and Saloon, and The Station Restaurant and Bar, attended K-State from 1961 to 1967, fun meant allnight vigils on the president's lawn to try to convince him to cancel classes after a big victory, going on panty raids, or the ultimate in mid-60s fun, swallowing goldfish.

On weekend nights, Ray said he and his friends, like many other adventurous K-State students, would frequent a pet shop across the street from Kite's after a few cold ones.

from Kite's after a few cold ones.
"I think they sold most of their goldfish to people who wanted to swallow them," he said.

After students became tired of swallowing goldfish, the fads grew more risque. Amy Button Renz, a 1976 graduate who now is the director of membership for the KSU Alumni Association, said students discovered a new way to have fun without clothes. They would streak by sorority houses, bars and any place else they could get people's attention.

Renz said she remembers standing outside her sorority house with a group of girls one night, cameras in hand, snapping photos of a streaker as he ran by.

Another popular fad was "pie in the face," which was actually a pan full of shaving cream. Renz said students would choose others to receive a pie in the face, and put contracts out on them.

Although Renz said she was not amused when she received a face full of shaving cream, she now looks back on the incident and laughs.

"I don't think it was meant to be mean," she said. "I think it was all in fun."

College life, however, was not one big party. Indeed, strict rules enforced on students in the 1960s kept them from having too much fun. When Ray first came to K-State, University women had a curfew of 10:30 p.m. Monday-Thursday, 1 a.m. Friday and Saturday, and midnight Sunday, he said.

"If you were going to Aggieville in those days, you went early," he said. "After 10, it was basically a stag

He also said sorority houses ruled that their members could not go into bars unless escorted by men.

But not all rules were made by the University. One restriction placed on students in Aggieville was enforced by the city of Manhattan. Until 1972, a city ordinance banned dancing in Aggieville, Ray said.

But students and Aggieville both survived the strict times. By the time Renz came to K-State in 1972, most of the rules were a thing of the past, she said, and students were basically free to do whatever they wanted. And although different bars have come and gone over the years, Aggieville has remained the the place to party.

Pat Bosco, associate vice president for institutional advancement and dean of student life, and a 1971 K-State graduate, remembers The John, an Aggieville bar that had padded toilets instead of bar stools. Photos of K-State coaches with toilet seats for frames used to hang above the bar, he said.

A few of the more popular Aggieville bars Renz remembers from her college days are Kite's, Dark Horse Tavern, Mother's Worry, Mr. K's, and Rockin' K, a cowboy bar.

Ray said the number of bars in Aggieville has fluctuated from four, up to 12, then back down to six bars.

He attributes the recent decline to the change in the drinking laws.

But not only has the change in the

But not only has the change in the drinking age affected business in Aggieville, it has made a drastic difference in the way students under 21 years of age party. Renz said beer used to be the staple refreshment at functions sponsored by Greek houses or residence halls.

"There wasn't a pressure to drink if you didn't want to, but it was readily available," she said.

But now that it is illegal for a majority of K-State students to drink, everything has changed.

"They've had to come up with alternative functions that don't involve drinking," Renz said. Dry functions are becoming more popular on campus, but drinking still remains a favorite way for students to party.

"Drinking and having a good time is just as strong as it was 20 years ago," Bosco said.

Bosco said students tend to be more careful with alcohol, especially drinking and driving, which did not concern many people in the past. The major problems when he attended K-State were alcohol and marijuana, and they are still problems today, he

"Drugs were present 20 years ago, and they certainly are evident today," he said.

Bosco also said students now have to worry about more than hangover remedies. Students' fear of the AIDS virus affects how they party.

"I think that would have an impact on social interaction behavior," he said.

Bosco and Renz said they have noticed other changes in the K-State student body, especially in the students' dress. Renz said that when she was in school, students dressed more casually, mainly in work shirts and overalls. But now, students spend much more time and money on their appearances.

"I remember not being real concerned about what I wore to class each day," Bosco said. "I haven't seen a pair of blue jeans ripped in the knees in a long time."

The one item that distinguishes students from others was missing in the 1970s. Nobody carried a backpack.

"Students actually carried their books in their arms," he said. "Backpacks were non-existent."

Ray and Bosco said they remember K-State's exciting football years, when the football team had winning seasons, and the old stadium was packed with fans.

Bosco said the school held large pep rallies, ones that "would attract thousands." They were held on Fri-

Scientist gives space seminar

By Jeff Piland Collegian Reporter

Long periods of weightlessness during space flight can have negative effects on the human body and its biological systems. These problems and other NASA experiments were the topic of a seminar presented by Robert W. Phillips Wednesday evening in Ackert Hall.

Phillips, doctor of veterinary medicine and professor of physiology at Colorado State University and a NASA payload specialist, will be a member of the space shuttle mission Space Laboratory Life Sciences I, scheduled for March 1990. It will be the first mission dedicated to the study of life sciences.

"A number of changes occur in astronauts or animals when they go into space," Phillips said. Among the changes are loss of red blood cells, loss of bone and muscle mass, diminished cardiovascular system capacity, vestibular disturbances (motion sickness), and possible inhibition of the immune system, he said.

"These are normal responses to being in a zero gravity environment," Phillips said. "They allow you to live better under those circumstances. The problem occurs when you return to Earth."

Experiments aboard Space Laboratory Life Sciences I will include the first study of lung functions in space and animal studies with rats and squirrel monkeys.

One problem astronauts have faced since the beginning of space flight is motion sickness, Phillips said. It afflicts about half of all space travelers.

"Right now we have no way to predict who is going to get sick," Phillips said. Motion sickness is caused by sensory conflict, he said. When experiencing weightlessness, the central nervous system receives conflicting messages from the eyes and gravity receptors in the inner ear.

"The best thing you can do in space is sit down in a corner and close your eyes," Phillips said.

"The American public isn't spending millions of dollars to send us up and sit in the corner with our eyes closed. So we carry barf bags and tough it out."

Shuttle missions cost from $750,000 to $1 million per hour of crew time. This makes it necessary to design experiments and equipment that are simple to use.

Film goers may be surprised

By Erwin Seba Senior Staff Writer

People who go to see "Last Tango in Paris" simply because it has an X-rating may be disappointed because the film is not pornographic, said Marilyn Woodward, a Union Program Council adviser.

"It actually has a story," she said. Woodward said the film, which is being shown today in the K-State Union, was selected by the members of the Kaleidoscope Films committee last year according to the UPC guidelines regarding X-rated movies.

Lisa Altenbernd, senior in speech and chairwoman of the Kaleidoscope committee, said "Last Tango in Paris," which was directed by Bernado Bertolucci, is rated X because of the issues it portrays as well as the scenes it depicts.

"It just raises interesting questions and the way it raises the questions is why it's rated X," she said.

why it's rated X," she said.

Altenbernd said the film was selected because of who directed it as well as its artistic value.

Bertolucci is also the director of "The Last Emperor" which won nine Academy Awards last year, including an Oscar for best film.

Another of the UPC guidelines requires that an X-rated movie have a noted cast. "Last Tango" stars Marlon Brando, who was critically acclaimed for his performance, according to reviews printed in Time and Newsweek in 1971, the year the film was released.

Woodward said "Last Tango's" historical importance was a factor in favor of its consideration.

"It was a ground-breaking film at the time it came out," Woodward See X-RATED, Page 12

Students pack Rec Complex daily

By Amy Bullock Collegian Reporter

Two sweaty runners brush past another jogger during their final lap of a quick mile and cause the runner to stumble.

No, this is not a scene from a track meet, but rather a scene from Chester E. Peters Recreational Complex, where between the hours of 4:30 and 6 p.m. an average of 500 people are busy working out. Overcrowding at the Rec Complex is one more effect of the University's recent 8 percent enrollment Raydon Robel, director of recreational services, said more people are using the complex than what is usual for this time of year.

"At prime time, between 4:30 p.m. and 6 p.m., the flow of people coming in is a lot for the building to absorb. The numbers we are seeing are more reflective of January, when our intramural programs have moved inside," he said.

Joyce Halverson, assistant director of recreational services, said that another indicater of the immense number of people using the complex is that almost every parking space available at the Rec Complex is filled at 5 p.m.

Several purchases are being made to accommodate the increase of students using the facility. The purchases include three new life cycles, two additional rowing machines, and two more recumbent cycles.

The weight room poses the biggest problem in terms of overcrowding, Halverson said.

"This is our number one priority area. With the small square footage and immense number of people using the weights, movement in the room has become quite slow. People are having to wait a long time to get to use the machines," she said.

However, users of the weight room can anticipate the addition of two new weight machines and remodeling of the shoulder press, arm curl, leg press, long pull machine, and tricep machine.

The employees at the Rec Complex have also been affected by the increased flow of people.

"In the afternoons, we have three people (working) instead of two and even with that we are still running around and are staying very busy," said Doug Carr, building manager for the Rec Complex and senior in architecture.

The Rec Complex is open from 6:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m.

K-State graduate wheeling to Olympics

By Tim Hostetter Special to the Collegian

Like many athletic children, Downs (located in Osborne County in north-central Kansas) native Kevin Saunders imagined himself an Olympian — a dream for many but a reality for few.

This spring Saunders, 32, became one of the few athletes who earned a trip to the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul, South Korea. But as a child Saunders never conceived of the way he'll compete in the Olympics: in a wheelchair as a paraplegic.

Saunders has lived in Corpus Christi, Texas, for more than 10 years. There in April 1981 he was caught in a grain elevator explosion that killed 10 people. Saunders, who was working as a federal grain inspector for the U.S. Department of Agriculture, was thrown 300 feet by the force of the blast and landed on his back.

He suffered broken shoulder blades and a skull fracture. Encased in a body cast, he was in intensive care for a month and in a hospital for a year.

"I was lucky to be alive," Saunders said. "It had to be God's will that I lived. Rehabilitation was long and tough but I made it."

Paraplegic Olympians debuted in the 1984 Summer Olympics in Los Angeles. Men competed in a 1,500-meter race, women in an 800-meter race. In Seoul, the wheelchair competition will include a pentathlon, which happens to be Saunders' forte.

"Twenty years ago, the idea of paraplegics competing in the Olympics was considered crazy by most people," said Suanders, a 1974 graduate of Downs High School.

Although he placed second to Doug Kennedy, a friend from Alabama, during the Olympic Trials in May at Edinboro, Pa., Saunders holds the U.S. wheelchair pentathlon record of 5,337 points, set in Tulsa, Okla. a month prior to the Trials.

The pentathlon includes

1,500-meter and 200-meter races, along with the shot put and javelin and discus throws.

Saunders holds the U.S. record in the 200 (30.37 seconds) but he said he is strong in all the events.

"The key of my success is that I do well in all five events," Suanders said. "I won the 200 and javelin at the trials and was at least third in the other three events, so I'm confident I can hang close. Kennedy will be tough to beat, though."

A paralytic accident is always traumatic, but it is especially traumatic to a person as physically active as Saunders. He was a multi-sport athlete in high school, and played football at Pratt Community College before transferring to K-State in 1976.

At K-State, he played on the school's Big Eight Championship rugby team and majored in agriculture, taking his degree in 1978.

In July 1983, Saunders' brother Gerald coaxed him into competing in the annual Peach Tree 10-kilometer race in Atlanta. The race is one of the nation's biggest road races and has a wheelchair division.

"I had never heard about wheelchair racing before. I thought guys in wheelchairs just read and played chess," Saunders said.

Little did he know that wheelchair competition was becoming quite serious. In fact, such athletes are organized under the National Wheelchair Athletic Association.

And little did he know that, against the other wheelchair competitors or that July 4, his standard wheelchair would look and race like an old, bulky '40 DeSoto against an '88 Corvette

"The other wheelchair guys were laughing at me at the starting line They told me I wouldn't get far in my chair, but I didn't understand," Saunders said

"They started the wheelchair racers 30 minutes before the runners and the rule was, if a runner catches (a wheelchair participant) before the end of the race, you have to drop out. K-State graduate Kevin Saunders has qualified for the 1988 Summer See SAUNDERS, Page 12 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea, as a wheelchair pentathlete.

Saunders, a member of K-State's 1978 Big Eight Championship rugby team, was crippled in a grain elevator explosion in 1981.

Manhattan trying for state games

By Chris Hays Sports Writer

Officials representing various Manhattan organizations had a meeting Tuesday to begin planning a proposal that could make Manhattan the first host of the new Sunflower State Games.

The event, which is designed to encourage competition in Olympic sports and to help amateur athletes develop their skills, is tentatively scheduled for next summer.

Manhattan is one of 23 cities that has been contacted by event coordinators and the Manhattan committee — the Sunflower State Games Task Force — has until Sept. 16 to submit a proposal.

"We had an outstanding meeting with people from all of the different groups that we will need to have help from ... like the athletic department, housing, the chamber of commerce," K-State Athletic Director Steve Miller said. "It was just a meeting of the minds for now. Once we agree collectively on what needs to be done, then we'll break down into various groups."

Miller and the task force "guesstimate" the event will cost around $100,000 for the city to host, but Miller said Manhattan's financial gains would be tremendous.

"This is such a worthwhile event. It would mean so much to Manhattan. The gains would be far beyond any losses or negative figures," Miller said.

Sunflower Games Inc., the event's organizers, estimates that between 4,000 and 5,000 people will compete in the games and that each athlete would spend about $60 — possibly generating between $250,000 and $300,000 for the city's economy, not counting what parents and fans will spend.

Miller said Manhattan has a good chance of landing the first-ever event, but the committee does have a few concerns.

"Right now the time factor concerns me. We have to come up with a good proposal in about two weeks," Miller said. "Hotel space is another problem. There just are not that many (hotels) in Manhattan, but I do think Manhattan has a lot of pluses.

"We have great facilities. Some are the best in the state," he said. "I also think that our central location favors us."

"I think that hotel availability will depend on what dates the games are scheduled," said Becky Blake, director of the Manhattan convention and visitors bureau. "There are some times, especially during the summer, when there is a lot of hotel space available."

One problem that could hamper Manhattan's efforts is the fact that volunteers could be hard to find during the summer with students leaving town and residents taking vacations. But Miller remains optimistic.

"With the University being out that will deplete some of our sources for volunteers, but I think Manhattan has an excellent chance to host the games," Miller said.

"We're going to need an incredible amount of volunteers and even though the majority of the students will be gone, I still think that the base is out there. We'll just have to try harder," Blake said.

Since the Manhattan task force is new to such a project, Miller says it has relied on the format used for Nebraska's state games as a guide.

"I think 32 states have games like these so we do have some formats to look at," Miller said.

Blake said the task force is also thinking of working with Junction City, which is not among the 23 cities vying to host the games, to possibly submit a combined proposal.

"We intend to put together a real attractive proposal," Blake said. "We're considering incorporating Junction City into our proposal somehow. That could strengthen our base."

The organizers for the event plan to have competitions in 16 different sports including track and field, basketball, cycling, gymnastics and swimming. They will be set up in four divisions: children, adults, middle-aged and senior citizens.

'Cat volleyball team wins season opener

By The Collegian Staff

K-State's volleyball team opened its 1988 season with a three-game sweep of a muchimproved University of Missouri-Kansas City squad, 15-8, 15-3, 15-7 Wednesday at the Sweeney Recreation Center in Kansas City, Mo.

"It struck me as a typical earlyseason match," said coach Scott Nelson. "We were tense to start the match."

The Wildcats were so tense that they fell behind 7-1 in the opening game before Nelson was forced to call a time-out.

"After that we seemed to relax," the ninth-year coach said. "It was a good experience for us to open on the road and get the first-match jitters out of the way."

Outside hitter Shawnee Call led the Wildcats with 10 kills and Lynda Harshbarger added five to go with her two service aces and four digs. Another outside hitter, Mary Kinsey, added four kills.

Tami Tibbetts came off of the bench to spark K-State in the third game with five blocks. Nelson said most of the blocks came against Cataline Suarez, the former University of Kansas player who was an all-Big Eight performer two years ago. She is playing her first year at UMKC after sitting out a transfer year.

Suarez led UMKC with 12 kills and seven digs.

K-State will open its home season 1:30 p.m. Saturday against Oral Roberts University.

"We are looking forward to playing at home," Nelson said. "We have had some very competitive matches with Oral Roberts over the last couple of seasons."

NFL needs to re-evaluate substance abuse policies

New York undecided on Taylor's stand-in

By The Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — And starting at weakside linebacker for the New York Giants is ... who knows?

That might be the biggest question around the Giants locker room these days in the wake of the substance abuse-related suspension of Lawrence Taylor. It's also the question that none of the Giants coaching staff is answering with the season opener against the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins on tap for Monday night.

"Come to the game," coach Bill Parcells said Wednesday when asked about who would replace Taylor.

Actually, replacing Taylor, a seven-time All Pro, with one person is hearly impossible and probably something the Giants will not try to "We have a philosophy on defense, but because you lose one player you don't change your whole philosophy," Parcells said. "So we will do what we think is right for this worry about next week, next week."

Parcells has several options for replacing Taylor. The most obvious would involve using a combination of reserves Byron Hunt and Andy Headen at the weakside linebacker, with recently signed holdout Carl

BILL LANG Sports Writer

Let's face it, Lawrence Taylor and the National Football League need

Taylor, a seven-time All-Pro linebacker for the New York Giants, was suspended for 30 days Monday after violating the NFL's substance abuse policy for the second time.

Giant's coach Bill Parcells and NFL spokesman Joe Browne said Taylor was suspended after testing positive on a recent mandatory preseason drug test. They declined to identify what substance Taylor was Taylor was treated for a cocaine problem in 1986. He followed that with his finest season, helping the Giants win the Super Bowl. Taylor set a club record with 20½ sacks and became only the second defensive player in league history to be named the NFL's Most Valuable Player.

What Taylor's suspension has done is make the NFL drug policy look weak because it is for only the first four games.

What it amounts to is the NFL must have an idea that drug rehabilitation is like a car-wash where you go in and come out looking better in a short amount of time. Sorry, it just doesn't work that way.

The suspension means Taylor will miss four games, including the season opener Monday night against the Super Bowl champion Washington Redskins.

What's really bad is Giants' personnel might have been able to help Taylor before the season. They had said he was moody and sometimes volatile when he was at practice, something that was out of the ordinary for him. Other times he acted paranoid and defensive.

Parcells took an idiot's view of the whole situation, saying, "However, that player could have been hurt in the first play of practice on Wednesday and we'd have had to make an adjustment."

True, but we're talking about something Taylor will have to battle for the rest of his life, not just an injury that could keep him out for four games.

Taylor, 29, is the ninth NFL player suspended this summer for substance abuse problems. He stands to lose $62,500 a game from his $1 million salary, probably less than he spent on the illegal substances in the first

Taylor's first run-in with substance abuse was disclosed in Feb. 1986, and he underwent rehabilitation for about a month in Texas. He later outlined his battle with cocaine in his book "LT: Living on the Edge," which has just been released in paperback.

Obviously this man needs help, and fast. Former Cleveland Browns coach Sam Rutigliano spoke recently on ESPN's Sports Look about the Taylor incident and what needs to be done about it.

"Actually, he should miss the whole season," Rutigliano said. "What he's doing is just getting a quick fix help-session. He needs someone who is going to hound him both night and day and make him realize that he can't control his life and that he needs help.

"If he doesn't do that, he'll be in and out of drugs for the rest of his life."

Cleveland started its own drug rehabilitation clinic, called the Inner-Circle, in 1981. In it, players who had gone through rehabilitation helped ones who had just entered. The Browns had players sit out the entire season, stuck with them through the tough times, and helped them overcome their addiction to drugs.

Obviously Lawrence Taylor, the Giants' front office, and NFL executives need to take a few days off and spend them in Cleveland.

This is a case where some old dogs could learn some new tricks.

RAMSTEIN, West Germany -Prosecutors began an investigation of the Ramstein air show disaster but said Wednesday no criminal charges were likely, and officials said they had mistakenly listed a 4-year-old boy among the dead.

U.S. officials raised the death count to 52 but the West Germans said their mistake about the badly burned child lowered the toll to 48 killed in the crash Sunday of an Italian jet. West German officials also said up to 30 badly burned survivors may die.

Many grieving families still had not found missing relatives by Wednesday and officials said 138 reports of missing persons remained unresolved. Some badly burned children lay in hospitals, apparently orphaned by the accident.

Scores of people were seriously injured when three of 10 low-flying Italian jets collided and one became a fireball that swept into the crowd during the annual air show at the U.S. Air Force base in Ramstein.

The three pilots were killed. The Italian air force official who coordinated the team's stunts said one caused the crash by flying into an intersecting maneuver at the wrong altitude and speed.

Thousands of townspeople, family members, dignitaries and fellow aviators crowded a small church Wednesday at Udine, Italy, for the funeral of the pilots - Lt. Col. Mario Naldini, 38; Lt. Col. Ivo Nutarelli, 41, and Capt. Giorgio Alessio, 31.

Juergen Dietzen, the Rhineland-Palatinate state spokesman, said "a communications mistake" caused the erroneous report of the boy's death. He would not elaborate.

"That reduces the death toll to 48," he told The Associated Press, adding that the 4-year-old was "seriously injured."

Dietzen said the bodies of 25 people - 22 spectators and three pilots had been identified and no U.S. citizens were among them. Two were children, he said.

The spokesman, whose state includes Ramstein, said 166 people still were hospitalized.

Maj. Kathy White, a U.S. Air Force spokeswoman, told the AP at Ramstein revised figures showed 52 people dead.

She did not say whether the 52 included deaths on Wednesday. A day earlier, the Pentagon said its figures showed 40 people had died, six of them U.S. citizens.

The extraordinary, three-hour meeting was aimed at solving Poland's strongest wave of strikes since the 1981 martial law crackdown.

"I am an optimist," a smiling Walesa told reporters and several dozen cheering supporters after the meeting.

Walesa had no other comment as he left the Roman Catholic episcopate in Warsaw by car. He conferred with top Solidarity advisers and church officials for two hours after concluding his talks with Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak.

said. Harold Schneider, associate professor of English, said the movie was praised for the way it depicted sex.

"It represents a change ... about picturing, representing sex," he said. But, the film's sex scenes are not explicit, Schneider said.

"There's nothing overtly, openly sexual (about the movie)," he said. "It makes you think it is, but it isn't."

The members of the Kaleidoscope committee unanimously recommended "Last Tango" to the UPC executive committee for approval. The committee members agreed on unanimity in case there were complaints about showing an X-rated film on campus.

"There was a feeling around campus we had a real chance to win every game," he said. "We weren't as anticipatory toward basketball season."

But even though times at K-State have changed and fads have come and gone, students have not changed much, Ray said.

"Students are students," he said. "They're here for an education, but they want to enjoy themselves."

Well, by the fourth or fifth mile of the race, one of the runners did catch me ... and some official pulled me off the road. After that, I told myself that wouldn't happen again," he added. It didn't.

Saunders purchased an ultra-light racing chair and started serious training. Although he perfers the shorter races and the pentathlon, Saunders has raced in three marathons, including the Boston Marathon.

"The 1,500 meters is a good event to compare us with regular runners," Suanders said. "The world record for runners is 3:36. For wheelchair athletes, the record is 3:50. We move pretty fast."

Saunders first took aim at the Seoul Olympics after watching the wheelchair competition in the 1984 Games. For the last four years, Saunders has trained and competed for six to eight hours a day, six days a week.

"I'm a little surprised how well he has done," said his mother, Freda. "I know there were times when he wanted to give up but he didn't. I think he believes he can do just about anything now."

U.S. begins removal of missiles

By The Associated Press

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Five years after West Europeans took to the streets in massive anti-missile protests, the United States on Thursday began removing its intermediate-range rockets in accordance with a superpower treaty signed last year.

A truck convoy hauled nine Pershing 2 missiles from a base near Stuttgart, and U.S. officials said they would remove the remaining 420 medium- and shorter-range missiles from Western Europe in the next 36 months.

"This is an important event in post-war history," West German government spokesman Friedhelm Ost told a news conference in

The stationing of the missiles had sparked huge protests in Western Europe, including a coordinated demonstration in several cities that drew hundreds of thousands of people in began the following month.

But the anti-missile fervor waned, and by the time President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev signed their treaty banning intermediate-range nuclear missiles in December, only a handful of protesters was still active in West Germany.

A group of anti-missile activists who came to witness the removal applauded as the 15 U.S. Army trucks carrying the missiles left the Heilbronn site in southern Germany, about 35 miles north of Stuttgart.

A rocket motor explosion at Heilbronn in January 1985 killed three U.S. soldiers and injured 16 others. West German news reports said the accident led then-Defense Minister Manfred Woerner to promise residents that Heilbronn would be the first site from which missiles would be removed. U.S. Navy Cmdr. Gerry Ryan of European

> "The remainder of the U.S. Army European-based, intermediate-range nuclear missiles are scheduled to be removed over a 36-month period," he added.

> The Soviet Union began removing its missiles from Czechoslovakia and East Germany in February, before the U.S. Senate had ratified the treaty.

> East Germany's official news agency ADN said in March that the Soviets had completed the removal of all 54 shorter-range SS-12 missiles, but said nothing about the 53 SS-23 missiles also covered by the treaty.

The official Czechoslovak news agency CTK reported in July that all of the 39 SS-12 shorter-range missiles based in that country had been removed in February and March.

West European countries to counter Soviet rockets pointed at the West.

But the United States ultimately deployed only 429 missiles in West Germany, Britain, Italy and Belgium after plans to station the rockets in the Netherlands were scrapped.

Of those deployed, 108 Pershing 2 missiles and 96 cruise missiles were stationed at four bases in West Germany.

U.S. officials have said that some of the rockets would be destroyed at the Frankfurt site, and that the nuclear warheads would be shipped back "to the appropriate authority," in the United States.

Under terms of the treaty, the Soviet Union and United States agreed to eliminate all land-based nuclear missiles that have a range from 300 to 3,000 miles.

Judge chosen for court

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - Frederick N. Six, one of the state's most respected attorneys when he was in private practice in Lawrence and a member of the state Court of Appeals for the past year, was elevated by Gov. Mike Hayden Thursday to the Kansas Supreme Court.

Six, named to the Court of Appeals by Hayden a year ago to the day, replaces Chief Justice David Prager, who retired effective Thursday. Six will begin sitting with the seven-member court when it opens its new term Sept. 12.

Justice Robert H. Miller, a member of the Supreme Court for 13 years, became chief justice by reason of seniority on Prager's retirement.

Six is the first member of the Court of Appeals advanced to the Supreme Court since the appeals court was created 111/2 years ago. Previous governors have been reluctant to take judges off the Court of Appeals, saying they didn't want to rob one court to fill vacancies on the other.

Six told a news conference he considers service on the Supreme Court the top achievement of his life. He said he was pleased to be the first promoted from the Court of Appeals and said he hopes Hayden has set a precedent.

"I am looking forward to serving with (the Supreme Court). I have great respect for them," said Six, whose record in 131/2 years on the state Judicial Qualifications Commission and 28 years in private practice persuaded Hayden to pick him. "I always said serving on the Supreme Court would be an achievement I'd be proud of," Six told reporters in the Supreme Court hearing room at the Kansas Judicial Center. "I have no interest in any other position beyond this one."

In selecting Six, Hayden passed an opportunity to appoint a judge with roots in western Kansas. He picked Six over Chief Judge Bob Abbott of the Court of Appeals, who is a native of Hodgeman County in southwest ISLAMABAD, Pakistan - Moslem guerrillas launched rockets at Kabul and its airport Thursday, and Afghan fighter planes struck deep into Pakistani territory in one of the most violent days of Afghanistan's 10-year-old civil war.

In a report from Kabul, the official Soviet news agency Tass said "opposition units today subjected to massive bombardment with ground-to-ground rockets the Kabul international airport area. The rockets damaged depots and transport aircraft." The report added that several rockets exploded in residential districts of Kabul, and authorities had put out the resulting fires.

Reports said it was not clear how many rockets had fallen. There were no immediate reports of casualties and state-run Kabul radio, in its nighttime broadcast, made no mention of the attack.

Both the Kabul attack and the bombing of villages near the Pakistani frontier city of Peshawar appeared more daring and destructive than any operations this year. Afghan insurgents began fighting communist Afghan forces in 1978.

Pakistani sources reported Thursday that seven Soviet-built Afghan fighter-bombers hit villages 30 miles east of the Afghan

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley condemned the bombing as the "latest and most extreme incident of armed intervention" against Pakistan's territorial integrity, and said it violated the 4-month-old Geneva accords.

Student fund nets $250,000

By Kendra Gensemer

Collegian Reporter

Student Senate has an extra $250,000 to spend this year.

The additional money students spent on tuition this year will come back to them through the Educational Opportunity Fund, Student Body President Troy Lubbers told Senate in its Thursday meeting.

This is something that's going to really help the University," Lubbers said.

The money used to create this fund comes from one percent of the six percent tuition increase. Each of the regents schools experienced the six percent increase. K-State's increase in enrollment made the dollar amount of that one percent about $250,000.

A committee composed of the student body president, the chief student affairs officer and the chief finance committee officer will decide how to allocate the money.

Each university would know best how to allocate the money, Lubbers said. Student Senate may have funding for programs that it previously could not help, such as the Childcare Cooperative or Minority Affairs," he

Senate also revised the elections committee for the upcoming student government elections in early November. It will be composed of 12 members this year, instead of Last year Senate changed the number of voting places on campus from two to four because of increases in enrollment, making necessary a larger elections committee. Committee members are chosen by a Senate committee, which is currently taking applications and interviewing students.

The additional voting places will be located in Cardwell Hall and Derby Food

Polish workers end strike

GDANSK, Poland - Shipyard and steel workers ended strikes Thursday, and Lech Walesa urged others to halt Poland's worst labor turmoil in seven years now that the government has agreed to discuss Solidarity's future.

A Solidarity spokesman said the walkout at the July Manifesto mine, where the nationwide strike wave began more than two weeks ago, appeared to be nearing an end.

But by Thursday night, Walesa failed to convince striking bus and dock workers in the Baltic port of Szczecin to end their strike, and the strike committee decided to press for settlement of their local issues, said the spokesman, Arkadiusz Rybicki.

Walesa met with ranking officials Wednesday for the first time in six years and the government agreed to discuss the outlawed union and other issues. Restoring Solidarity's legal status was the main demand of the strikers.

Workers at the Stalowa Wola steel mill in southern Poland began leaving the plant at 7 p.m. after receiving a telephone appeal from Walesa and a message from the Roman Catholic episcopate, a strike committee spokeswoman said.

At least 3,000 strikers were in the Lenin shipyard, where Walesa works as an electrician, including workers from other yards in this Baltic port. They hoisted Solidarity banners as members of their strike committee led them out.

Olympic tickets selling high

SEOUL, South Korea - Police launched a crackdown Thursday on black-market sales of tickets for the opening and closing ceremonies of the Olympics.

Ticket brokers have sold $200 seats for the Sept. 17 opening ceremonies at up to $5,400, police said. Many of the buyers

Police believe more than 20 groups have been engaged in such transactions. They said investigators are questioning one broker to determine how he purchased large blocks of tickets.

Nearly 1 million people applied for the 20,000 opening ceremony tickets put on sale locally, and a lottery decided who could buy them.

Organizers said more than half of the sporting event tickets put on sale in South Korea have been sold, with many for preliminary competition and demonstration sports still unsold.

About 4 million of the total 4.5 million tickets are being sold in South Korea, with prices ranging from $3 to $55.

Books on display in Moscow

MOSCOW - Books by former Soviet officials who fell afoul of Josef Stalin went on public display Thursday after decades of being banned from library shelves, an official report

However, other books, including some of "Zionist" or anti-Semitic content, others promoting national strife and pornography, remained off-limits to the general reading public, a government official said. A total of 800 books were exhibited at the Lenin Library, the nation's leading library, including works by victims of the late dictator Stalin's political purges, generals who fought against the establishment of Soviet power, and members of the provisional government overthrown by the Bolsheviks in 1917 October Revolution, according to the official news agency Tass.

Helicopter crash kills 6

BARSTOW, Calif. - A California Air National Guard helicopter crashed in a Mojave Desert mountain range Thursday, killing all six people aboard, authorities said.

The crew of the HH-3 search-and-rescue helicopter was made up of four Guardsmen and two Air Force personnel, said Sgt. 1st Class Carolyn Hamilton, spokeswoman at National Guard headquarters in Sacramento.

The helicopter was from the 129th Air Rescue and Recovery Group based at Moffett Naval Air Station at Mountain View. It was participating in a training exercise at George Air Force Base when it went down at 10:55 a.m., Hamilton said.

The bodies were discovered by a rescue team, said Capt. Kent Knight of the California Highway Patrol, which dispatched a helicopter to the scene.

The crash occurred about 18 miles southeast of Barstow in the Cinder Cone region of the Rodman Mountains, said San Bernardino County sheriff's spokesman Jim Bryant.

California Highway Patrol Flight Officer Ken Davis, one of those who flew to the scene, said the helicopter struck a ridge in the mountain range.

"We do not know the cause of the crash. That is being investigated," said Air Force Tech. Sgt. Jorge Caballero.

Cause of crash not known

GRAPEVINE, Texas - Investigators Thursday found the flap indicator handle on a shattered Boeing 727 in the wrong position, but a federal safety official said it could have been jarred that way in the fiery crash, which killed 13 people.

The handle, which is located on the console between the pilot and the first officer, indicates the position of the aircraft's wing flaps.

At a news conference Thursday night, National Transportation Safety Board member Lee Dickinson said the handle on the Delta Air Lines jet that crashed Wednesday was found to be in the "up position," opposite where it should have been for a proper takeoff.

But he went on to say the handle could have been pushed into the wrong position by the impact or by a crew member during the plane's evacuation.

Phone tip leads to body

OLATHE - A Lenexa man was charged with first-degree murder Thursday in the shooting death of his wife, whose body was found after a long-distance tip to police Wednesday.

John R. Williams, 30, was charged in the slaying of Diane Williams, 25, whose body was found in the couple's suburban Kansas City home. He was held in the Johnson County Jail Thursday under a $100,000 bond.

Police went to the house Wednesday after receiving a telephone tip from a man in Phoenix, Ariz., identified only as a business associate or friend of John Williams. The man told police his friend had just killed his wife and was about to kill himself.

Police said they planned to interview the Phoenix man. The Williams couple had moved from Phoenix in January, police

Ag college numbers increase

By Amy Lyons Collegian Reporter

Although national figures have shown a decrease in agriculture students over the past ten years due to the farm crisis, agriculture student numbers are up this fall at K-State and are expected to rise even higher in the future.

Enrollment figures are up 10 percent over the fall of 1987, said David Mugler, associate dean and director of resident instruction for the College of Agriculture.

There are 478 freshmen enrolled in the college, Mugler said, stressing that this is an unofficial, preliminary

"We won't know the full story until the 20th-day figures are released," he said. "But we feel really good about this year's enrollment for a lot of reasons."

The college is encouraged by the increase and by their share of the 1988 freshman class, Mugler said.

"We have cornered exactly 10 percent of the 1988 freshman class, for a 10 percent rise over last fall's preliminary figures," he said.

Mugler estimated that the entire agriculture enrollment will rest around 1,600 by the 20th day of classes, Sept. 16.

"It takes a large freshman class to maintain high enrollment numbers," Mugler said. "Also, retention of these students is a key."

Mugler said the college's jump in student numbers in the last few years was a "small surprise stemming from many key factors."

An improved reputation in agriculture, a beefed-up scholarship fund, and a hard-hitting recruitment effort have all played a role in attracting students to the college, he said.

"Our figures are on the rise," he said. "We at K-State have avoided what other land-grant schools couldn't this year, but I think it is a general trend.

"I believe people — and Kansans in general — now have a better understanding of what ag is. They realize it is the total food chain, not just farming.

"Just 15 to 20 percent of agriculture graduates end up 'back on the farm' ... and that's a surprise to most people," he said.

Recruitment has been a big factor in bringing students to the college, Mugler said. "Thanks to a greater collective effort on the part of faculty, students, alumni and friends, we have welcomed more people to our college. "I believe the last couple years have been better for agriculture," Mugler said, adding that recent happenings in the industry have "caused a stir" and "created some excitement in agriculture."

The decrease in student numbers over the past 10 years began after. a peak at K-State of 2,344 students.

"Nationwide, the number of ag students peaked in 1978 at 98,000 students at 70 land-grant universities," Mugler said.

Across the nation, from 1979 to 1987, ag student numbers decreased up to 50 percent at some universities, according to an article in August's issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education.

The article said that deans from the 50 land-grant institutions it surveyed agreed that the decrease "stemmed from the misconception that all agriculture-related jobs were on farms, as well as the agriculturaleconomy crisis that signaled a bleak future for all of agriculture."

Auto tellers vulnerable to robbery

By Robert Manchon Collegian Reporter

Although about 20 robberies took place at automatic teller machines at banks in the Kansas City area, Manhattan residents shouldn't have the same problem.

"It's a very common problem (in the city)," said Jerry Rubenstein, detective for the Kansas City Police Department.

"Most robberies take place at ATMs which are located across from shopping malls, when merchants make late-night cash drops," Rubenstein said.

Few robbery complaints have been made from individuals after withdrawing money, he said.

Since Jan. 1 there have been no incidents of robbery at ATMs in Manhattan, said Sgt. Larry Freeby of the Riley County Police Department.

Customers should keep their eyes open. If they see someone loitering near the ATM, return later or call the police for assistance, Freeby said. If there is a continuing complaint, patrols are stepped up, he said. Usually the police conduct routine surveillance of the ATMs. The secluded ones in the Westloop area are patroled routinely, Freeby said. However, most of the ATMs in Manhattan are located in well-lit areas.

The FirstBank of Manhattan had several drive-up ATMs recently installed which allow customers the extra security of banking from their automobile.

"If anything more could be done to protect the customer, the bank regulators would require it," said James Smallwood, vice president of the FirstBank.

It is no more dangerous to use a bank's ATM than one at a supermarket, because whether the ATM is inside or out, customers must still walk to their cars, Smallwood said.

The FirstBank has not had any problems with robbery or destruction of ATMs, Smallwood said.

The 1987 crime statistics do not show how many robberies or holdups took place at ATMs, said Tom Moore, special agent for the FBI.

However, 68 automatic tellers throughout the nation have been robbed or destroyed in an attempt to break into the machine, Moore said.

A group of individuals were involved in many of the Kansas City area robberies that occurred in July, and are now awaiting trial, Rubenstein said.

The individuals are charged with a string of random robberies all happening in different parts of the city, he said.

Time to take serious look at watches

There probably isn't another country in the world (besides Switzerland) that offers its consumers as many options for timepieces as the "good old U.S. of A."

There are grandfather clocks, travel clocks, car clocks, kitchen clocks, stove clocks, alarm clocks (my personal favorite), scuba watches, shock-resistant watches, watches to wear around the neck, watches for the pocket, and, of course, watches for the wrist.

In December Dillard's even sold a watch for the finger. And yes, ladies and gentlemen, the ring watch actually keeps correct time.

For a mere $75 women can buy a clock cummerbund. The face, which is about 6 inches in diameter, is classically styled and is perfect for every woman's career wardrobe. No need to worry about that messy task of winding and setting the clock belt - it's a quartz.

Watches tell a lot about the people who wear them. One lawyer said he can tell how jury members think by their watches. Digital watch wearers are conservative, but are logical thinkers. Mickey Mouse watch wearers are liberals living in their own magical king-mericans are obsessed with time. dom. If the person isn't wearing a watch, forget it! Watch non-wearers are out of touch with reality or don't have anything better to do with their time than actually serve their

Over the years, timepieces have gone through some major changes. When times were simple, clocks needed only the numbers one through 12, an hour hand, a minute hand, a second hand and some ticking noises (for atmosphere).

The first major shake-up in the clock world was the digital watch. First- and secondgraders could be heard rejoicing all over the world about this timely invention.

Digital watches had several benefits. First, they looked like something out of Lost in Space reruns, and modern and cool (the best combination in the world). Second, kids only had to know the numbers one through 59 to sound like they really knew how to tell time.

Around 1984, the Swatch company created a stir in the conservative world of time. The company's objective was simple: make the dull job of telling time new and exciting. Swatch watches came in an array of colors and designs and were under $30. But this company refused to stop at watches. They made shirts, pants, socks, belts, bags, even umbrellas, all aimed at style-conscious teen-agers with disposable incomes.

These slaves to fashion were religious consumers of everything Swatch produced, even the Swatch watch-guard. What a concept ... a piece of rubber to protect the plastic Swatch watch face from scratches. The Swatch watch marketing team was brilliant. They also are responsible for starting the trend of wearing more than one Swatch on your wrist or ankle, depending on your mood.

Swatch watches had one drawback - it was almost impossible to tell time on them (at least on the most modern and coolest swatches that didn't have numbers on them).

was 11:45 a.m., and his girlfriend Nancy was 45 minutes late. Bob was getting irritated so he called her. Turns out Nancy wasn't late at all, it was only 10:45. Ah yes - the high price we pay for Today's time trend, as far as I can tell from all the moon and star watches I'm seeing, is going back to the classical look. You know, the watches that have leather wristbands, are made of metal, and have faces with numbers, hour hands, minute hands, and second hands. Then again, I still see a few Swatches so I'll say that during this season, anything goes.

The subject of time has another dimension -it's a challenge. People either seem to hit it or to miss it. To be a prompt person takes balance, coordination, and, most importantly, precise timing.

If one spends too much time preparing for a certain event, the result could be detrimental to one's social life. These people run the risk of arriving first at a party — the ultimate

That's why the "master race" developed datebook planners. They are simply a recruiting tool to sway others into a lifetime of promptness.

> Most people haven't quite mastered the balance aspect of time yet. They always start with enough time, but somewhere along the way, the fear of being too early floats into their heads. The consequence of being too early is by itself enough to slow anyone to a state of tardiness.

How do I know so much about the prompt people and their hang-up with time? My parents are both members of the "master race." After trying to breed more punctual people, they were horrified to discover they had created a child with a mutant gene called tardiness. The doctor says when my therapy is completed I'll be feeling fine and on time. Luckily, my parents are supportive and patient - very patient.

Unfair plan devised for basketball tickets

After months of studying the best way to distribute and sell tickets for basketball games at Bramlage Coliseum, the Athletic Ticket Task Force has developed an unfair plan.

To begin, of Bramlage's 13,500 seats, only 6,000 have been allotted for season tickets for the more than 18,000 K-State students.

To compound the problem, the student seats are all in a single section — from the front row to the top of Bramlage. At Ahearn, the students' seats were placed around the court so students could see better and lend their enthusiastic support more effectively.

Sure, Bramlage was built mostly with alumni money, but student support means more than money. No one will argue a basketball program is built on money alone. Students deserve more and better seats.

Another fault with the ticket-selling plan is it favors living groups. The plan says that ticket seekers can set up camp any time, that a group of five may buy tickets for 100, and that random roll calls will be taken.

The policy favors living groups because living groups have a bigger pool of people to draw tent-sitters from.

Seek to gain a good education, not just stylish college diploma

hy are you in college? What is your purpose in being here? In today's world many people grow up under the assumption that they will attend college and no intentional thought-process supplies a real reason for the decision. If pressed, many students will say, "I want a college degree so I can get a good job," in a voice which implies, "of course."

The college degree will be the ruin of American society because it is no longer the education but rather the certificate itself which is important. Contrary to what we as a nation preach about the importance of education, the American people are indifferent. The United States put a great emphasis on education during the 1950s, recognizing it as the foundation of a great society. At that time a project to educate the entire population was initiated. A lasting effect of those past educational ideals is that a large percentage of the population now obtains a college degree. But even as the project succeeded in increasing the number of educated individuals, it failed in emphasizing the degree, the certificate itself, over the education.

The American motivation for a college degree is the job — and the income to support a "good life." The good life, America's greatest aspiration in the 1980s, is the carrot on a string luring people to universities. But instead of an education, they seek only a degree. The certificate alone is sufficient to get a job and, in turn, a good job means a good lifestyle.

The word "lifestyle" now describes the American dream. It captures ideas such as "great car," "beautiful home" and "perfect spouse" in a single word. "Lifestyle" says that an individual has a unique way of life that Commentary is worthy of admiration. Obtaining a "lifestyle" requires only a college degree.

he difference between a college education and a college degree is marked primarily by the attitude of the participant. College students are now largely coupon collectors, and their purpose is to collect enough course-credit coupons on a transcript to win a college degree. The college degree, to a student with that attitude, represents the conclusion of a task, the end of the learning process. The basic lesson of education, however, should be that learning never stops.

Education changes the student, opening new perspectives. New knowledge allows an individual to see the world from different viewpoints. Acquiring such an education is the responsibility of the individual, requiring a desire to learn instead of a tolerance to be

The new American dream discourages the true education of Americans because now a college degree is enough. No effort is required in school beyond that necessary to get a good grade point average. The individual can be satisfied with whatever knowledge has seeped in while attending college. It is enough to earn a degree, get a job and enjoy a

Education allows people to see beyond this narrow perspective. The founding fathers envisioned a society of informed and rational individuals, free to enjoy whatever life they wanted, but also responsible to the nation. They envisioned willing participants in the democratic process. A collection of individuals, pursuing only their own lifestyles, will fail to notice society crumbling around them, let alone take action to prevent it. Educated people would see that their own well-being is connected to the well-being of their nation.

o don't get a degree. Get an education. Change your attitude and your Make self-growth your purpose. Study because it will give you new perspectives, rather than because you have to. Try a nonrequired philosophy class, psychology class or computer class — maybe even a class that won't count toward your degree.

And finally, in this election year, apply something you've learned in school to your voting decision. Presidential campaigns look like toothpaste commercials because the American people choose candidates with the whitest teeth and freshest breath. That's a lifestyle choice.

Dance review bad

This is in regard to the Carrie A. Miller's review of the Welcome Back Dance in the Aug. 29 Collegian.

She says in her article that the dance was "once again a success." The disc jockeys either make or break a dance. Yet Miller said that the DJ played a bland, popular, dancy mix of the worst of Tiffany, Michael Jackson and the Fat Boys.

How does she get off on saying the worst of these groups? Karen Smaldone, UPC

Program Adviser, said there wasn't a complaint from any of the students at the dance concerning the type of music played. Smaldone also said she received compliments throughout the night concerning the music. I don't know what kind of music Miller likes, but it must be some far-out polka or big band music, because she must not like '50s, '60s or top 40 dance music. Because she thinks she can cut down a well-known D.J. company, such as Best Sound Around in a 15-minute review on three songs that they played, she should step down from her under-the Collegian. qualified position.

Everyone I talked to at the dance thought the music was a great blend of old and new music. We all know that Miller gets paid a dollar for every inch she writes. No wonder she writes about nothing - she gets paid by the length. She should get paid by how wellwritten and informing her articles are.

I'm not going to let some reviewer with obviously no DJ experience try to wreck Best Sound Around's company name.

Besides, all of Miller's articles in my opinion have been bland and the worst articles in Robert Disberger

To most people, it would seem obvious what this person is seeking - someone to help with English course work and studies on Irish cultures. Yet to others, this is a coded message with a totally different meaning.

To sadomasochists, this person is trying to find someone to work with him or her on English, acts involving whipping and spanking, and who also takes part in Irish culture, acts involving a lot of blood.

Tom Murray, professor of English, has studied the language used by the subculture of sadomasochists. Murray said he was introduced to the coded message form of communication by a student who showed him a personal similar to the example.

Murray did his study with Thomas E. Murrell in Columbus, Ohio. They talked to the vice squad of the Columbus Police Department, sadomasochists and dominatrices. Dominatrices are women who are paid to take part in sadomasochism.

From the information they gathered, Murray and Murrell wrote their book, "The Language of Sadomasochism." In this book, While studying sadomasochism, Murray said he discovered that many of the participants do not fit the usual stereotype of wearing leather and chains.

Last spring, members of the subculture had a convention in Texas. They weren't afraid to have their pictures taken or to be interviewed. Murray said. # Parking problems addressed by studies

By The Collegian Staff

A parking structure, additional parking spaces, a zoning system, and limited reserved spaces are just a few of the possibilities recommended by two research studies that may solve the University's parking problems.

The University may have to buy more land if it intends to build more parking facilities, said Mark Taussig, landscape architect in the Division of Facilities Management. A continuing problem is increasing enrollment, he said. Not only has the increased fall enrollment made parts of the two studies out-of-date, but it has also filled the 1,200 parking spaces added during the summer.

The first parking facility study was completed by a University ad hoc committee. This committee, made of faculty, staff and students, was appointed by George E. Miller, vice president of administration and finance.

The result was an 85-page report, including the history of campus parking facilities, various solutions, and 15 recommendations on improving parking facilities - the last of which was to hire a consulting firm.

The consulting firm currently reviewing the parking facilities is Barton-Aschman Associates, Inc. The firm will complete five "workpapers," each covering a different subject concerning present and future parking facilities.

Three of the workpapers have been completed and the fourth will be finished by mid-September. The final paper is projected to be done by the end of the fall semester.

Once the consultant makes its final recommendation, a committee will evaluate it - just as for each workpaper - and the final decision will be left to Miller.

Taussig said he is confident it won't be long before action is taken to implement the recommendations.

"The administration is looking to make it as small of a problem as possible," he said.

Injured pilot helps rescue

By The Associated Press

DALLAS - The last survivor of Delta Flight 1141 reached by rescuers was the pilot, who passengers say coaxed them out of the burning wreckage while pinned on his back beneath debris.

Capt. Larry Lon Davis, 48, was listed in fair condition at Parkland Hospital on Thursday, the day after the plane crashed on takeoff from Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The jet lost power suddenly and bounced three times before skidding catching fire. At least 95 people survived the crash; 13 died, including two flight attendants.

Many of the survivors escaped near the cockpit, which broke off from the fuselage and rolled slightly.

David Carmichael, a 35-year-old restaurateur from Monticello, Ark., said he could hear Davis telling passengers to remain calm as they scrambled to get out of the plane near

"He was conscious, and he was hurting," said Cpl. Bill Taylor.

Many students on the K-State campus hold part-time jobs to earn needed funds and also extra spending money. In the past, many students have worked at the residence hall food centers and also in the Union Stateroom cafeteria and in the catering service.

This semester, however, the number of students employed by these services is down dramatically, and the reduced number of employees is

"I guess it is possible that students this year simply have more money and do not feel the need to work as many hours as they did in past semesters," Molt said. "But it is a real problem in my department when we cannot employ adequate help for every shift." She said the lunch shift is in dire need of help.

Union Food Service Director Mally Sisson said she first noticed the drop in student employee applications last year, but that it is worse this year. Sisson said she still needs at least 40 more students in catering.

"We have raised wages at the Union to $3.60 (from $3.35) in the hope of attracting more students to work," she said.

History stabilizes life

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

"We tell ourselves stories in order to live."

That is how we deal with our memory, our history, said Sue Zschoche, assistant professor of history. We assign a meaning to the stories and interpret them to tell ourselves what we are all about. she said. To lose that memory, that history — that story — would mean to be able to respond only to the history of a moment, random and meaningless. Zschoche's definition of history was part of her answer to the question of "Why Bother With History?," a lecture Thursday organized for the Freshman Seminar class, but open to the public. That question, however, is moot, she said.

"We are born historians, that is the way our brain works. At bedrock, our memory is history," Zschoche said.

Without our collective memory, our collective history, "the U.S. as nation — as a people — would cease to exist ... and without it, our ability to function would be severely limited," she said.

She compared the "story" of the United States to the type of stories a person tells at different stages of growth. As human beings mature, out of necessity, their stories become more complex and ambiguous, she said. Those who have learned to live with their story have come to a self-understanding.

We say they have grown up,"

America's story, Zschoche said, is closer to that of a 3-year-old, and too ambiguous to be settled into one simple story.

"It is clear that in putting together our collective memory, we, quite intentionally, have been selective ...," she said. "We have consigned a huge portion of our collective memory to a kind of amnesia."

Only with the Vietnam War, the reaction against the Civil Rights movement and the Watergate scandal, came the recognition that U.S. motives were not as simple or as noble as described in the "story."

Zschoche referred to Godfrey Hodgson, a British historian and

The art of fashion from the '60s

The bold colors and endless design variations of tie-dyed clothing has made a comeback over the last year.

T-shirts, shorts and sweaters have fallen prey to the artistic whims of the tie-dye designer.

Dye it.

Or just go buy it.

The possibilities are endless with tie-dye. In bright, bold designs, the tie-dye craze is back.

"There are some that would say fashion has traditionally gone through about a 20 to 25 year cycle," said Janice Huck, assistant professor of clothing, textiles and interior design.

The mini-skirts and tie-dye items that have been big this spring and summer were big in the '60s, she

The number of years for a cycle to recur is gradually declining due to better communication, she It is easier and faster to find out what the rest of the world is wearing, thus shortening the cycle lengths, she said.

Local stores are offering a wide variety of tie-dye There is a "big demand for the '60s styles again," said Melody Anderson, assistant manager for Maurices clothing store.

T-shirts, shorts and sweaters are just a few of the tie-dye items the store carries. Expression seems to be the name of the game and tie-dying allows individuals to express themselves While many consider art to be only something that is displayed on an easel or in a gallery, young people seem to have a knack for incorporating art into their clothing. "Young kids and college students love it," she

Whether or not adults like the return of tie-dyed garments is still questionable. "Oh, that's back again" is a remark frequently made by adults according to Carrie Law, graduate student in journalism and mass communications and a salesclerk at a local clothing store. Adults may "laugh at it," but sales have been steady for tie-dye items, Law said. The store has been selling tie-dye apparel since last spring, she said. "It's a good item to carry right now," she said. Tie-dyeing is one of the oldest forms of patternmaking on cloth according to Astrith Deyrup, author of "Tie Dyeing and Batik." Long before Columbus discovered America, South Americans were tie-dyeing threads.

Some of the most beautiful patterns were developed in Indonesia, India, China, Japan, and Africa, according to Deyrup.

Tie-dyeing became important in the United States in the late '60s and early '70s.

This was a time of self-expression and tie-dye was a way to do it artistically.

Tie-dyeing is a technique in which, before dyeing, parts of the fabric are knotted, tied up with thread or string or raffia, or sewn and the thread

These secured portions of the fabric resist the dye in varying degrees depending upon the tightness of the knot or tie. These resisting parts remain the original color of the material.

Further tying will secure other portions, or the previous ties may be undone to allow a second color to take over the original fabric color. For those who cannot afford the price of a purchased garment, there is always the option of making it at home. 'No two outfits are alike when you make it yourself," said Tina Cardona, junior in architecture. With tie-dye, your personality reflects what you create, she said. The actual process of tie-dying is simple.

1. Prepare the fabric and plan the design.

2. Tie, fold, stitch, or clamp the fabric.

3. Dye and rinse the fabric. 4. Re-tie or over-tie and re-dye for subsequent

5. Untie and iron the fabric.

The hardest part of tie-dying is deciding what type of design you want to create and how to implement that design.

The book, "Fabric Printing By Hand," by Stephen Russ offers a few suggestions.

This list of tie ideas is by no means exhaustive;

here are just a few: Place a small pebble behind the fabric. Drape the fabric over it in the form of a small bell tent. Tie a collar - material tied tightly with string - round the tent, as close under the pebble as possible. Rubber bands do this quicker than string or rope. Begin as before, only before putting the tie cover over the outside of the fabric, place a small piece of waterproof sheeting such as plastic over it. Then proceed to tie.

Begin as before, and tie below the first collar any number of additional collars, some broad, some

Don't expect perfection if you decide to make your own tie-dye garment. And if you go with a store-bought item, the individuality will be somewhat lost.

Whichever you choose, home-made or storebought, the mystery of tie-dye and its fascinating designs will continue to catch the eye of many

Bush, Dukakis rhetoric heats up

By The Associated Press

George Bush, venturing into Michael Dukakis's backyard, accused his opponent Thursday of fighting efforts to clean up dirty Boston harbor. Dukakis attacked his rival's claims on education and asked "Where was George?" when school programs were being cut.

"He was playing hooky," Dukakis said, answering his own question.
The presidential candidates campaigned at opposite ends of the country, each trying to take the offensive and demonstrate that their fall campaign is near full swing well before the traditional Labor Day kickoff.

A day after declaring himself to be a life-long environmentalist, the Republican nominee traveled to Massachusetts and took a boat tour of the harbor - an event aimed at making its pollution problems an embarrassment for the governor.

The vice president was encouraged by a new poll showing his race with Dukakis deadlocked even in Dukakis' home state, where he has won three terms as governor.

"Two hundred years ago tea was spilled in the Boston harbor in the name of liberty," Bush said. "If tea were spilled in the Boston harbor today, it would dissolve in the residue of my opponent's neglect and delay."

Dukakis, ridiculing Bush's claims to be an environmentalist, said Bush was "one of the charter members of the environmental wrecking crew" of the Reagan administration.

He also charged Bush had told California voters he opposed offshore oil drilling while telling Texas audiences he supported it. Dukakis said his own "environmental policy doesn't change with the time zones."

through the South. In Little Rock, Ark., he said that despite his wealth, "I identify with people that need help."

Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen was on vacation in Wyoming.

In Boston, Bush contended that as governor Dukakis opposed and delayed cleaning up the harbor and had sought permission from the Environmental Protection Agency to delay a ban on dumping wastes in the harbor.

Dukakis drafted papers seeking the delay in his first term, but it was his successor, Ed King, who actually filed the request in 1979.

Bush said that in 1978 and in 1984, with Dukakis as governor, Massachusetts sought federal waivers for meeting secondary sewage treatment standards.

"He did not want to meet the clean water requirements," Bush said.

Dukakis campaigned at an Oakland public school gathering and linked the vice president to education program cuts during the Reagan administration. He ridiculed Bush's vow to be "the education president" as an "election-year strategy."

He said the Reagan administration eliminated remedial math and reading programs for 500,000 poor child-ment rate climbed .3 of 1 percent between June and July, inching up to 4.6 percent. The rate also was 4.6 percent in July 1987.

The state's jobless rate was 4.3 percent in June.

In reporting the increase, the state Department of Human Resources said the rise reflected a seasonal session.

"The decrease in jobs from June to July is seasonal," said Dennis R. Taylor, secretary of human resources. "It is the result of further layoffs by state and local schools and the ripple effect felt by the transportation industry, the trade industry and the services industry."

Seasonal lavoffs related to education include not only teachers but trend caused by schools not being in school bus drivers and workers for contract school cafeteria firms.

Figures released by the agency showed 59,726 people were without jobs in July, compared to 56,703 the previous month.

In July 1987, the unemployment rate in Kansas also was 4.6 percent. The number of people out of work then was 58,484.

The department said other seasonal employment losses took place in number of jobs.

Wildcats looking to avoid nightmare

By David Svoboda Sports Writer

The 1987 season could be considered nothing short of a nightmare for K-State's football team, as the Wildcats limped to a 0-10-1 record.

As nightmares go, the shorter they are, the more intense they can be. And during the nightmare-filled 1987 season, an 81-second bad dream during the season's fourth game may have been the toughest for the Wildcats to shake all season long.

The 81 seconds in question took place during a game in KSU Stadium against the Wildcats' foe this Saturday, Tulsa University.

The Golden Hurricane entered its 1987 meeting with K-State with a record of 0-4; the Wildcats were 0-3. And in this battle of two winless

"We looked at the tape just the other day," K-State Coach Stan Parrish said earlier this week. "That minute-and-a-half was an absolute disaster. I didn't want to look at it again, but we did it as a reminder of how not to play football."

The Tulsa scoring onslaught began with Lenny Williams blocking a punt by K-State's David Kruger, and Mike White recovering the ball

On the ensuing kickoff, Tulsa's Mark Palmer recovered a fumble at the Wildcat nine-yard line. Two plays later, quarterback T.J. Rubley ran in from four yards out.

Thirteen seconds after Rubley's score, Tulsa defensive back Tyson Garner recovered a K-State fumble at the Wildcat 15-yard line. Two plays later, Rubley found Erick Harrison in the end zone for a 14-6 Tulsa lead. open and hit him with a 14-yard touchdown pass, giving the Golden Hurricane an insurmountable 28-6 advantage.

In unison, the jaws of the 28,400 in attendance dropped and the K-State sideline instantly resembled a crowd gathered for a wake. There was one nightmarish twist to the whole scenario, however: the wake was the Wildcats' own. Tulsa went on to win 37-25.

K-State's fortunes after that game have been well documented. The Golden Hurricane won two of their final six games following the contest and finished 3-8.

Where does that leave these two programs entering Saturday's 6 p.m. contest in Tulsa's Skelly Stadium? It leaves them looking for the same things - consistency and a victory.

Tulsa's first-year head coach Dave Rader said he expects the 1988 meeting between the two schools to be much like last year's battle.

"Turnovers will probably play the major role in determining who wins the game, as is the case in most college games," Rader said. "Obviously, we don't want to be the ones turning the ball over."

Parrish, whose squad entered the 1987 game against Tulsa without two of its biggest offensive weapons, running back Tony Jordan and wide receiver John Williams, has a fairly healthy team entering this year's meeting.

Healthy, that is, everywhere but at quarterback, where an injury to projected starter Paul Watson left Parrish scrambling for a replacement. He found him in Carl Straw.

Straw, a sophomore from Fair Lawn, N.J., appeared in just four games last season, and his backfield mates - Lee Pickett and Tom Dillon - will join Straw Saturday in having never started a college game.

Tulsa's quarterback, on the other hand, is a known commodity. Rubley, who was 14-of-25 for 164 yards and one touchdown against K-State last season en route to 2,058 yards passing on the year, returns for his sophomore season as the Golden Hurricane field leader.

Meet Tulsa's hometown hero

Rader: youngest coach in Division 1-A ranks

By David Svoboda Sports Writer

You've heard the story. Hometown boy, high school sports star, stars for his hometown college team and goes on to play in the pros.

He's the city's favorite son, and he can't shake the town and the town can't shake its memories of him.

That's why when he returns to his hometown to work and hopefully live out the remainder of his life, it's often something special.

Tulsa head football coach Dave Rader is that hometown boy.

And now, after toiling for four years as an assistant coach at the University of Alabama and at Mississippi State University, and working for a single season as the assistant head coach at Tulsa, Rader is back as the center of attention in his hometown as the head football coach at his alma

All of this has the fairly reserved Rader at a loss for words.

"It's really a neat time for us to be back in our city," Rader said. "It was a chance to come back home and give something back to a city that had given us so much."

Rader, his wife and two children are indeed celebrities in Tulsa, and Rader attended Tulsa's Will Rogers High School and was the Tulsa Prep Player of the Year in baseball during his senior year.

At Tulsa, however, it was on the gridiron that he did his best work. He was a two-year starter at quarterback, and ranks 9th on TU's all-time passing chart. He tied a school record for fewest career interceptions with just nine in 338 passing attempts. After his Tulsa career was complete, Rader was drafted in the 11th round of the 1979 National Football League draft, and played during the 1979 and 1980 seasons for the New York Giants. Making stops in Alabama and Mississippi along the way, Rader completed his journey home in Dec. 1986, when he was named assistant head coach at Tulsa. Then-head coach George Henshaw resigned on March 8 of this year following a disappointing 3-8 season in 1987 and Rader was named that day as his replacement.

Upon taking the reins at Tulsa, Rader became the youngest coach in NCAA Division I-A college football. The 31-year-old Rader says the age issue is overblown.

"To tell you the truth, the fact that I'm the youngest coach isn't that big a deal because I've never been any older," Rader said, laughing. "It's kind of like the the current vice presidential race. I don't think age is an issue there, either."

What Rader says is an issue is the importance of not letting down the folks in his hometown.

"I sure would like to do well in my hometown and represent my community," he said. "I'd like to be football coach here for some time.'

If he is, the hometown boy will have become a man right before his community's eyes, and the story will be complete.

Pirates expecting to make $2-3 million

By The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates, who lost $11 million three years ago, expect to make a $2 milligh to $3 million profit thanks to a substantial attendance increase and one of baseball's lowest payrolls.

The profit would be the first since a public-private group bought the Pirates from the John W. Galbreath family in October 1985. The Galbreaths lost an estimated $20 million in their final two years of ownership.

A net profit would be the Pirates first since they won the World Series

"I hope the players stop referring to me as El Cheapo," he said.

The Pirates, who were 24th among the 26 major league teams in playerdevelopment spending two years ago, now rank fifth, and Danforth said, "That's where we think we should spend our money."

Player development costs include minor league operations, scouting and off-season programs such as the Florida Instructional League and Danforth, the former chairman of Westinghouse Electric Corp., said the Pirates have sold 2.1 million tickets and expect to break their all-time attendance record of 1,705,828 later this month. The Pirates have drawn 1,617,127 with 13 home dates

"This was beyond our wildest dreams a few years ago," Danforth

The Pirates' 1988 revenues will be about $27 million, compared to $20.2 million last year. They had an operating loss of $1.95 million in 1987 and $3.38 million in 1986.

The Pirates' payroll was expected to be $6 million, until the recent acquisitions of veterans Gary Redus, Glenn Wilson and Dave LaPoint inflated that, but Danforth said, "We think we can afford it." By contrast, the New York Yankees' payroll is about $20 million. The Pirates were in danger of leaving Pittsburgh before Danforth and late Pittsburgh mayor Richard Caliguiri spearheaded a 1985 effort to find local ownership. Thirteen individuals and corporations contributed $2 million each, and the city loaned the group $20 million raised through a bond sale. The Galbreaths sold the team for about $22.5 million.

Insect problems plaguing campus, Kansas

Nature can control pests

By Lisa Pfannenstiel Collegian Reporter

Two major insect pests, the euonymous scale and the squash bug, are about to meet their natural enemies as a result of a biological control effort by the K-State Agricultural Experiment Station.

The euonymous scale infests omamental trees and shrubs, which are commonly found in Manhattan, while the squash bug plagues squash and pumpkin.

Until now, preventing outbreaks of these pests involved spraying infested plants, which is difficult, costly and not always effective, said Jim Nechols, assistant professor in entomology and a biological control

Biological control is a method researchers can deliberately implement. It creates new control opportunities by bringing in natural enemies that aren't common to the area or by improving the performance of existing controls, he said.

"What we are trying to do is bring about a natural balance," Nechols said.

The euonymous scale and squash bug require separate methods of research, he said.

"Euonymous scale has probably caused millions of dollars worth of damage to (ornamental) trees and shrubs state-wide," Nechols said. Part of the reason the scale insect is so destructive is that it has few, if any, natural enemies in the area, he said.

Individual scale insects are barely visible with the naked eye. They suck the juice of plant leaves for food and also secret a protective wax. This makes their eradication difficult, Nechols said.

Heavy scale infestations often kill branches or entire trees or shrubs. The lady beetle, a predator insect, has been imported from Korea to combat the harmful scale. Nechols received 38 of the beetles and released them into a protected cage around a plant heavily infested with the scale.

He monitored the test group, observing their ability to adjust to the foreign climate and then released them at a selected site in Manhatttan during the last week of July. "(The beetles) were undergoing some stress during the high summer temperatures," Nechols said, so he misted the cage with water to protect

He is also wants to see if the beetles will gain a foothold over the

Nechols' initial objective is to establish this test group in its environment and then observe if the lady beetles have an effect on scale

Next year more lady beetles will be available, so if the experiment fails. Nechols will import a new group in the spring, he said.

"It sometimes takes more that one attempt before successfully establishing a beneficial insect," he said. This experiment is the first of its kind at K-State and only the third in the entire United States, he said. In contrast to the euonymous scale project, the squash bug does have an existing biological control. Tiny parasitic wasps that attack the squash bug egg exist naturally in our environment. "Presently, the squash bug parasites are not doing the job, and we don't know why," Nechols said. The goal of this project is to improve the wasps' performance, by studying the biology of the wasp and of the squash bug, he said.

Nechols is also studying gardeners' and cultivators' farming techniques, to see if their methods positively or negatively affect the wasp and bug populations, he said.

The parasitic wasps attack the egg stage of the squash bug as opposed to the adult stage.

The wasp sticks its ovipositor similar to a bee's stinger - through the squash bug's egg, depositing its own egg. As it feeds, the wasp egg See INSECTS, Page 12

Dry summer causes decrease in Kansas firefly population

By Scot Dye Collegian Reporter

If one your favorite hobbies is catching those little flying bugs that light up the night skies, you may have noticed a decrease in your success rate this summer. This is because there aren't as many fireflies this year as there were several years ago.

Habitat destruction and lack of rainfall contributed to the smaller number of fireflies this year, said Lawrent Buschman, associate professor of entomology at K-State's Southwest Kansas Branch Experiment Station in Garden City.

More than 2,000 species of fireflies exist worldwide and about 24 species live in Kansas, Buschman Fireflies live in warm, moist habitats. The larvae feed on snails, earthworms and small insects, or scavenge other soft-bodied organisms. This summer's dry conditions have been tough on both the fireflies and their prey, he said.

The firefly, also commonly called the lightning bug, has a characteristic light organ on the bottom part of its abdomen. This organ is made of fatbodied cells and is richly supplied with nerves and tracheae, small passages which supply oxygen for use in

The light results from the oxidation of the chemical compound luciferin in the presence of the enzyme luciferase, both found in the light organ. The reaction is controlled by the insect's nervous

The light produced is called "cold" because the firefly uses the energy from the reaction so efficiently that little is converted to heat.

"We've got the biochemistry figured out. What we don't know is the evolution — how did it develop?" Buschman said.

The light organ of the male is larger than that of the female. He said the light organ can be as large as two segments on the male and as small as one segment on the female, but that it can vary from one type of firefly to the next.

Each species of firefly has its own characteristic flashing pattern that is believed to be a mating signal.

The female usually rests on foliage and the male flies around flashing the signal of its particular species. The female recognizes the signal and responds by flashing the correct signal. They meet and then mate, Buschman said.

He said if people know the correct signal, they can communicate with the firefly using a pen-light. By flashing the male signal, a person can locate the females or by flashing the female signal, a person can attract the

"You can even get them to land in your hand," he said.

During the day, fireflies rest on foliage out of direct sunlight.

Except for one species, adult fireflies do not feed, but live on energy stored during the larval stage, Busch-

The female of one species is a specialized predator that feeds on other species of fireflies. Using "aggressive mimicking," she imitates the signal of other female fireflies, attracts the males, captures them and feeds on them, he said.

Fireflies are prey to spiders, frogs, lizards, birds and bats. To protect themselves, some fireflies have developed special defenses, Buschman said.

"Many fireflies contain a toxic material in their body which causes the predator to reject the firefly and others have a distasteful secretion," Fireflies live for one to two weeks and their major function is to multiply, Buschman said.

"They live for an average of seven days and then die," he said.

Management dept. changes curriculum

By Alan Wilds Collegian Reporter

Changes in the Department of Management's curriculum were made this year to better prepare graduates for employment situations in the business world.

Department head Yar M. Ebadi said the curriculum was changed from a very broad and general program to one that is very indepth and more academically sound. Ebadi said three areas of emphasis are now being offered to students.

The first is Management Information Systems, which requires students to become very computer-oriented through various classes. The second is Human Resources Management, which deals with behavior and organization.

Production Operations Management is the third area and deals with manufacturing and production. Ebadi said an area of general management is still being offered for students who do not want a concentrated study of a certain Ebadi said there are many advantages to the program being updated, adding the main advantage is that students will now be provided with higher quality instruction in their courses.

depth knowledge of management and be more attractive to employers after graduation," Ebadi said. The program will also be more attractive to the faculty since many of them specialize in the three areas of study that are being offered, he said.

"This will enable the department to receive more faculty and students." Ebadi said.

The change was brought about by several things, but the primary objective was to make the program more academically sound, he

Various employers did not like the old curriculum, and it was not on the same level as other schools' management programs, Ebadi said. It will be easier for a management graduate to find a job now that the changes have been made, he said.

Ebadi said the program will affect all graduates in the management department.

"The more students know about it, the more they will like it," he said.

Although the program is in a transition phase, with some students who entered the department under the old curriculum, Ebadi said he thinks the changes will not cause problems.

"We will continue to update the program as needed," Ebadi said.

Hayden complained last year that the Supreme Court Nominating Commission was not sending him enough nominees from western Kansas to fill vacancies on the Court of Appeals.

Since taking office 19 months ago, Hayden has appointed five judges to the Court of Appeals. This was his first appointment to the Supreme Court.

Kathy Peterson, Hayden's press secretary, said the governor never promised to appoint judges from western Kansas but had simply expressed a concern that he wasn't getting enough geographic balance in the nominees presented to him.

"The real issue was he wanted a

Hayden also had indicated the positions of Six, Abbott and Henson on tort reform would be a key factor in who he picked.

However, Six refuted speculation he passed Hayden's "litmus test" of looking favorably on amending state malpractice laws to limit damage awards. He said if the governor had asked him any such questions he would not have responded. He was interviewed by Hayden Aug. 23.

"No litmus test was given and no response was made," Six said.

Peterson said Hayden did not ask the three nominees specific questions relating to their stands on tort reform, but asked about cases they have handled relating to tort reform and formed his opinion of their positions from their answers to those questions.

Rocket carries secret payload

By The Associated Press

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. — A Titan 2 rocket that once sat in a silo armed with a nuclear warhead was launched into space Monday, carrying a secret Air Force payload believed to be four spy satellites designed to eavesdrop on Soviet ships.

The launch marked the first time one of the refurbished missiles had been used as a space booster, and apparently was the second time U.S. spy satellites had been sent into orbit in less than a week.

"It was a spectacular launch with all systems operating as expected," said Air Force Capt. Norma Payne.

But the spokeswoman added that officials would not know for two to three days whether the classified payload achieved its intended polar orbit circling the Earth from North to South poles.

The rocket almost certainly carried a four-satellite addition to the Navy's White Cloud Navy Ocean Surveillance System, an electronic eavesdropping system that locates and identifies Soviet and other ships by detecting radio and radar transmissions, space policy analyst John Pike said before the launch.

"The Navy really likes them," said Pike, of the Washington-based Federation of American Scientists. "They are very important for being able to keep track of the Soviet fleet.

Pike said a White Cloud launch "consists of one mother satellite and three subsatellites," and that when orbit is reached, the mother satellite deploys the other three spacecrafts so all four are strung out a few hundred miles from each other in polar orbit.

The $37.5 million Titan 2 roared off Space Launch Complex 4 West and into fog-shrouded skies at 2:25 a.m. PDT, Payne said at this sprawling military base 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

The liquid-fueled, two-stage rocket is 103 feet high and capable of lifting 4,200 pounds into a 100-nauticalmile circular orbit.

Starting in the 1960s, Titan 2 rockets were kept in silos in Arkansas, Kansas and Arizona, where they served as intercontinental ballistic missiles, each carrying a ninemegaton hydrogen warhead.

But the missiles were removed from service "because the propellants were corroding the innards of the missile and they had a tendency to blow up," Pike said.

Gadhafi said Americans who believe President Reagan's charge that he sponsors terrorism are "very simple people, ignorant people."

Elections: So little time, so much to do

Rivals test campaign themes

By The Associated Press

Presidential rivals George Bush and Michael Dukakis campaigned on opposite sides of the country on Labor Day, with Bush linking his Democratic opponent to Jane Fonda and "the liberal left," and Dukakis asking, "Can we afford four more years" of Republican economic policies.

Vice presidential nominees Lloyd Bentsen and Dan Quayle also were on the road Monday for the symbolic kickoff of the fall campaign, using the opportunity to find fault with the heads of the opposition tickets.

With little more than two months remaining before Election Day, the rival candidates tested campaign themes at rallies in key states.

Republican nominee Bush was in California where he said the campaign is "foremost about jobs and peace. It's about protecting the gains we've made in jobs and peace and it's about how to make new breakthroughs in both areas.'

Dukakis told a holiday rally in Detroit "the time has come to bring prosperity home to every home in every neighborhood in America. The time has come to stop ignoring foreign competition and start beating it."

The Massachusetts governor cited Census Bureau statistics he said showed that "the rich have become richer, the poor have gotten poorer" during the Reagan presidency.

"My friends, I ask you, can we afford four more years of that?" he

"High paying jobs being replaced by low paying jobs, average weekly wages down over the past eight years, benefits down over the past eight years," he went on. "My friends, I ask you, can we afford four more years of that?"

Campaigning in California, Bush said Dukakis opposes the MX and Midgetman missiles, the Star Wars missile defense program and two new aircraft carrier task forces.

"I wouldn't be surprised if he thinks that a naval exercise is something you find in Jane Fonda's workout book," said the vice president, in a reference to the actress who was a leading activist against the Vietnam

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. -President Reagan is planning dual fall campaigns: an overt political one on behalf of George Bush and the other an effort to wring a wish list of items from an election-minded Congress.

"I'm sure the president's philosophy right now is very much — 'So little time and so much to do'," said Kenneth Duberstein, Reagan's chief of staff.

But Reagan's mix of lambasting Democrats on the political stump and then seeking cooperation from them on Capitol Hill is not one that necessarily has produced legislative successes in the past.

"If lame duck means he's in his last year in office, then he's a lame duck, but if it means he can't get anything done, it doesn't fit," contended White House spokesman B. Jay Cooper, in Santa Barbara with the Reagan entourage.

Cooper said that among other things, Reagan intends to push for Senate passage of the U.S.-Canadian Free Trade Agreement and designation of a Cabinet-level Department of Veterans Affairs.

Reagan plans dual campaigns

With some fanfare, the president also will sign the new housing bill seen as an election-year boost for both parties.

The president also will look for the near-certain approval of his two Cabinet nominees, Nicholas Brady as Treasury Secretary and Lauro Cavazos to head the Department of Education.

Included on the more contentious side of the ledger are the renewal of aid to the Nicaraguan Contras, welfare reform and passage of the remaining 11 appropriations bills.

When he signed an appropriation bill in mid-August, Reagan told Capitol Hill not to repeat its past habit of sending him "a single megabill ... that wraps up the various appropriations bills in a single bill that spends $600 billion of the taxpayers' money."

And in his radio address on Saturday, Reagan gave notice he'll veto any welfare legislation Congress sends him if it does not contain a work requirement.

On his way back from a vacation at his ranch in California, Reagan planned two stops Tuesday - the dedication of the Gray Communications Center at Nebraska's Hastings College and an address to the American Legion in Louisville, Ky.

The Hastings stop is viewed as a favor to a long-time acquaintance -Washington public relations executive Bob Gray - who is a native of the small Midwestern town and worked as the director of communications for Reagan's 1980 election

Pilot fakes Soviet hijacking

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia - A pilot who claimed he was forced by two masked hijackers to fly them to Austria a week ago actually helped his brother defect to the West, the news agency CTK reported.

The plane of the Svazarm paramilitary organization landed Aug. 29 on a field in a village in lower Austria near the Czechoslovak border.

But the pilot took it back to Czechoslovakia. He was identified only as 36-year-old J.C. from Bratislava, a member of the Svararm airplane club.

CTK said an investigation showed he took aboard voluntarily his 44-year-old brother, the brother's 6-year-old son and a 39-year-old woman, all from Plsen. The pilot will be prosecuted for "unlawfully taking abroad a means of transport" and for "assistance in the criminal act of fleeing from the republic," punishable by three to six years in prison, CTK said.

Chinese train load peaks

BEIJING - China's railroads handled 213 million passengers between July 1 and Aug. 31, an all-time high for the summer peak season, the official Xinhua News Agency reported Monday. According to figures from the Railway Ministry, daily passenger load was 3.44 million people, an increase of 251,000 people from last year, Xinhua said.

It attributed the sharp increase in the number of train passengers to a jump earlier this year in the cost of plane tickets. A steady increase in the past few years in the number of Chinese tourists traveling around China has also contributed to Taiwanese tourists, allowed for the first time in nearly 40 years to visit the mainland, also added to the crush.

Air show death toll at 52

RAMSTEIN, West Germany - The death toll from the Ramstein air show disaster has climbed to 52, and a West German official said Monday that six people reported missing after the fiery tragedy still have not been located.

More than 400 missing person reports were filed within two days after the Aug. 28 air crash, and police have closed almost

"There are six people missing still," said Juergen Dietzen, spokesman for Rhineland-Palatinate state, where the U.S. Air Base at Ramstein is located. But he said that does not mean the six West Germans are victims of the crash.

"Perhaps they went to the air show at Ramstein and then went on holiday without informing anyone," Dietzen told The Associated Press in a telephone interview. "And it's not even certain they were at the air show."

Meanwhile, another person died on Sunday from severe burns suffered when three Italian fighter planes crashed during an aerial acrobatic display and one of the aircraft plunged into the crowd.

The dead include the three Italian pilots involved in the crash, 45 Germans, two Americans, and one victim each from France and the Netherlands.

Alaska airplane crash kills 1

SITKA, Alaska - One person was killed and nine others aboard a commercial aircraft were injured when the plane crashed near a mountain lake Monday shortly after takeoff from Sitka, the Coast Guard said.

The crash was reported at about 3:35 p.m. near Indigo Lake, about five to 10 miles east of the Sitka airport, Coast Guard Cmdr. Bruce Merchant said.

Merchant said the twin-engine Britton-Norman BN-2 operated by Island Air crashed in a mountainous area at about the 2,000-foot level. Nine passengers and a pilot were on board the flight from Sitka to Petersburg, he said.

One person, whose identity was not immediately released, died at the scene. The other nine were evacuated by helicopters from the Coast Guard and from Mountain Aviation, a private air service, Merchant said.

He said all were taken to hospitals, where two people were in serious condition.

Merchant said the cause of the crash was not immediately known. The weather at the time was rainy, with clouds at the tops of the mountains that surround Sitka, he said.

Telethon raises $41,132,113

LAS VEGAS - Jerry Lewis, vowing to tug at the hearts of viewers, used a parade of celebrities and emotional appeals from victims Monday to raise a record $41,132,113 in his 23rd annual Labor Day telethon to fight muscular dystrophy.

The 211/2 -hour event also featured appearances by corporate sponsors who contributed $34,379,537 not included in the telethon's final total.

This year's figure exceeded by about $2.1 million the previous record of $39,021,723 set last year.

"The success of the show is a tribute to the warmth and generosity of the American people, who go further each year in supporting MDA's fight against muscle diseases," Lewis said following the show.

Because of the longevity and the money raised up to this year — $443,182,370 — the annual Labor Day event has become known as "the" telethon.

Randy Travis gains confidence

NASHVILLE, Tenn. - Country singer Randy Travis says that when he was a teen-ager, singing in front of an audience didn't bother him, but that was all he could do on stage.

"To sing was no problem, but talking scared me to death," said Travis, a former short-order cook who got his start in clubs in his native North Carolina.

"I didn't know what to say. Finally I worked in to saying 'Thank you,' then from there to introducing the song," he said. He's gotten more comfortable since he hit the country charts in 1986, but says he had another bout of nervousness recently when he performed in London before rock star Mick Jagger and his girlfriend Jerry Hall.

"You know in his case, he's going to hear every little mistake. But the show went great and he and Jerry came backstage afterwards," said Travis, 29.

"To start with he was a little stand-offish, I guess you'd say he didn't really know what to say, or didn't want to say anything, but once we started talking he was very friendly.

When Donna F. Rooks was approached with the idea of opening an art gallery at the Manhattan Town Center, she decided she could do it with the help of her friends Betty Mosier and Ellen Hoover.

The women opened "The Art of It All" in October 1987, hoping it would promote the community's cultural awareness. They began the gallery with no funds, and no one but themselves to staff the gallery 72 hours each week, Rooks said.

They handled the staffing problems by inviting 250 people to a tea, where the three women asked whether any of the guests wanted to volunteer to work at the art gallery. Fifty to 75 guests said they would work three hours a day once a week or once a month.

The volunteers represent all walks of life, including former military personnel, students, former students and housewives. They volunteer to get out of the house, meet new people and learn something about art, Rooks said.

For artists in the area and the region, The Art Of It All has given them a chance to show their work.

The art work in the gallery is bought on a consignment agreement with artists. The gallery must earn enough from sales to pay for operating costs.

The directors earn no money from the operation. After expenses are met, the gallery's profits go to a scholarship fund for high school seniors who plan to major in art. After the first year, the gallery should be able to offer a scholarship, Rooks said.

"Without all of these wonderful people helping us staff the gallery, we would not be able to provide the scholarship," she said.

The gallery shows a variety of work, including oil paintings, water color, acrylic, mixed media, photography and other items.

The art is provided by people who ask how they can get their work shown in the gallery. It is now featuring work from local artists and artists from Colorado, Missouri and Nebraska.

"We have a selection of artists to choose from, and when a space opens up, we try to contact them to show their work," Mosier said.

The gallery has also been decorated with benches and shelves provided by The Big Lakes Adult Training Center, a center for disabled and mentally handicapped people. These pieces are also under consignment with the gallery.

Mosier said Manhattan is an excellent location for such a gallery because the city is culturally oriented in both the visual and performing arts.

Yogurt franchise offers college business contest

By Amy Lyons Collegian Reporter

Ambitious students have the opportunity to turn a dream into reality — thanks to the second annual I Can't Believe It's Yogurt college entrepreneur competition.

The contest, which began last year as a part of the ICBIY 10th anniversary celebration, is sponsored by the national frozen yogurt chain as a "community-service project," said Larry Boyd, manager of the Manhattan ICBIY store.

"I'm glad to see them doing it," Boyd said. "I think it's a positive thing for college students.'

The competition includes submitting a 300-word essay outlining the student's business ideas.

The idea must be one that can be franchised, and applications must be sent in by Oct. 15, said Scott White, national director of public relations for ICBIY.

The $10,000 grand prize will be awarded to the student with the top idea, along with an all-expense paid trip to the 1989 Association of College Entrepreneurs International Convention in San Francisco, Feb. 16-19, White said. The winner will also receive a consultation session with ICBIY founder, 29-year-old Julie Brice.

Last year's winner, Robert Mihaly, a 21-year-old artist and student at North Carolina State University, used his $10,000 seed money to begin an architectural-ornamentation store, White said.

Mihaly's contest idea outlined a plan to create, produce and sell architectural ornaments - such as sculptured wood and etched glass to the construction industry at less expensive prices.

"Robert is a very talented young man. He hopes to open stores across the country to market his product," White said, adding that Mihaly said he felt the consultation with Brice was a beneficial part of the grand prize.

"Julie Brice, the ICBIY founder, was once herself a college entrepreneur," White said.

In 1977, Brice and her brother Bill, both students at Southern Methodist University, pooled $10,000 and bought two frozen yogurt stores.

Things took off from there," White said. "(Julie) has a lot of good ideas to share."

Whether or not the grand prize winner actually ends up franchising his or her product, White isn't sure, although he did say the winner must use the money for the business.

"Franchising is a very tricky and timely thing," White said. "If the winner happens to franchise, it would be very lucky.

"We do know that the $10,000 will be set up in a fund, so the winner must show us receipts and draw against an account before spending any prize money." The Manhattan ICBIY store, which opened in 1985, was the 15th of the 250 franchises now open or under construction in the United States, Boyd said.

Ambassadors help freshmen

By The Collegian Staff

When faced with a new situation, freshmen may feel unsure of themselves. K-State developed a program last year to help freshmen deal with those feelings of insecurity.

K-State Cares is a program in which the ambassadors, and in some cases the faculty, of each college call the freshmen enrolled in their college. They call to ask how they are doing in classes, and to answer any questions the freshmen may have, ranging from financial aid to teachers to roommates.

"It gives the freshmen an opportunity to have someone help them out," said Jana Kester, ambassador of the College of Education. "Some freshmen, if they aren't involved in any campus organizations, such as sororities or fraternities, may not have anyone else to ask.'

The program consists of each college scheduling a night during a week in the fall to call their freshmen. Tentative dates for the first round of phone calls are either the week of Sept. 11 or the week of Sept. 18.

program is a good idea. "It made me feel like there was someone out there to help me out," Blasi said.

David Blasi, sophomore in arts and sciences, said he believed the is the retention of students, said Lauren O'Connor, ambassador for the College of Business Administration.

"We feel that the first year of college is the most important year," she said, adding that a letter is sent to the students if they can't be reached by

O'Connor said this program is especially helpful to the College of Business Administration because the

New puritanism prefers fantasy to reality

someone, somewhere, may be happy.

-H.L. Mencken

The puritans are back. Actually, they never really left. They just ran out of things to rail against, and people got tired of listening. They still complain of the immorality of this country, and Americans, from Nancy Reagan down, are all ears. Why?

The best explanation I can give is that "new puritanism," like disco, is just another passing fad. It's not quite as funny as white suits and gold chains, but it's infinitely more

This summer, movies like "Arthur II" and

"Cocktail" drew fire from the new puritans for depicting drinking as (gasp!) a socially acceptable behavior. Television shows like "Cheers" and comic strips like "Andy Capp" have taken similar criticism.

And last spring, Hallmark took off the shelves a series of graduation cards which contained humorous references to alcohol due to puritan pressure. Apparently these folks were afraid that otherwise sober graduates would submit to demon rum after opening their cards.

And this is a telling characteristic of the uritanism: The haunting fear that tion that everyone else has the same inability. New puritans prefer to fight sin on the fictitious battleground of movies, television and greeting cards.

> That's what really bothers me about new puritans. Old puritans such as Carrie Nation took the fight to the front lines. She smashed bars and broke beer bottles over the heads of unsuspecting drunks. But the new puritans prefer to remain on the outside and toss harmless little lobs over at us wicked folk.

They wouldn't dare venture near the depressed inner cities of America to stop the drugs, sex and booze. They would rather hold rallies at grade schools, attend celebrity fundraisers and print "Just Say No" T-shirts.

This makes it rather difficult to believe in their sincerity.

I would hold them in much higher regard if they would grab some two-by-fours and really hit the bars, or stake out parking lots and administer some impromptu breath tests. Sure, these things are illegal. Sure, they would go to jail. But if these people care as much about our country as they say they do, they wouldn't mind doing a little time in jail, like the civil rights protestors did in the

But the new puritanism is more a movepuritan mind — the inability to distinguish ment of words than actions. Its chief instrubetween fiction and reality, and the assumpments are slogans, posters and pie-in-the-sky

Commentary

MARK SCHMELLER Collegian

Columnist

policy objectives. New puritans envision a drug-free America, just as Kansas endeavors to have a smoke-free high school class of 2000. I have no argument with this. These are good sentiments. But when it comes to actual policies and laws, a proper grounding in reality would be nice. Nevertheless, the nation's lawmakers seem bent more on pleasing the puritans than on taking sensible measures against, say, he Drug Enforcement Agency's "zero tolerance" program called for the confiscation of all ships and vehicles found with so much as one marijuana seed. Legislators are now calling for the death penalty for all "drug lords."

In reality, the "zero tolerance" program was so ridiculously stringent and constitu- ning is now a vice and a deadly cause of skin tionally questionable that it had to be yanked after a few months. As for the death penalty measure, the "drug lords" of the world must have snickered. The life of a drug dealer involves constant death threats from rival dealers, many of which are carried out in a cruel and unusual fashion. Despite the threats, drug dealers keep dealing. Why should one more somewhat idle death threat from the U.S. government deter any of these guys?

More importantly, why is the government wasting time and resources on such unrealistic and ineffective measures? This is done to appease the puritans, no doubt. Deep down, puritans really don't care if the problems are solved. If the problems were solved, puritans would be without a cause. New puritanism has less to do with reform than with selfaggrandizement of the reformers, who measure their purity by how extreme a position they take on drugs, alcohol, sex, etc.

Puritanism is, above all, a competition in which the objective is to demonstrate how much more you care than the next person. Just as art movements deteriorate into mannerism, the legitimate movement for reform has deteriorated into puritanism.

But puritanism reaches beyond the wars on drinking, drugs, sex and smoking. Suntancancer. And while the sun is more dangerous than ever, puritans have, once again, taken caution to ridiculous extremes. The Skin Cancer Foundation calls a healthy tan "a contradiction in terms." Some now recommend a sunscreen so strong that it is equivalent to standing in a dark basement at midnight.

All this flies in the face of the fact that only the midday sun has been found to be cancercausing, and that if a person was not sunburned often as a child, he or she is pretty much safe from skin cancers.

ut facts, as Ronald Reagan has said, "are stupid things," and puritans hold them in similar regard. Fiction seems to be more important to them. It is a lot safer to deal with. They go to the movies and count the drinks and the smokes, then demand that all the characters practice safe sex.

Somebody should stop these people before they manage to make our lives as filled with petty fear and paranoia as their own.

Stop them before they "clean up" our movies, books and bars. Stop them before they have us sitting in theaters chanting "just say no" as Romeo climbs up to the balcony with a box of Trojans in his hand.

America wealthier; poverty increases

According to the latest Census Bureau information, more than 32 million Americans are living in poverty. That number is increasing. In the past year, median family income rose by 1 percent. Thus, that number is also increasing.

In reference to the figures, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the most effective means of improving the life of Americans is a strong, productive economy.

The fact that both incomes and poverty is increasing shows whose lives are supposed to be improving during economic good times.

As the gap between the richest and poorest Americans grows wider, the rhotoric becomes clearer. We are fine-tuning this nation into a land of the privileged and by the privileged. No others need apply.

Number changing

For 19 years, the FONE Crisis Center, at 532-6565, has been available to the lonely and depressed in the community who needed someone to talk to. This will soon change. Why? For 19 years, a phone line has been strung across Manhattan Ave., giving us an on-campus number at our off-campus location in the UFM House. With the advent of the new University Telecommunications System, we would be required to pay $38 per month for each of our three phones, a total of $1,368 a year. $1,368 is more than we can afford on a $13,000 annual budget. The new number is 537-0999. Write it down folks ... it's not in the book.

We are also in desperate need of volunteers. Anyone who could work one evening shift a week is invited to attend a training session from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturday, Sept. 17, at the UFM House, 1221 Thurston St.

Apology needed

I am in agreement with the letter from Kim Myers in the Wednesday, Aug. 31 Collegian dealing with the wrong titling of Russel Moldovan, a Manhattan Christian College

When I took journalism in high school, one fact that was emphasized was to always be certain that the facts reported were always the facts; and not what the reporter wanted the facts to be.

In this case, Moldovan was the third MCC student misnamed by the Collegian. One issue is that this particular MCC student, Russel Moldovan, is enrolled in a K-State class. He pays tuition at K-State, so I would assume that he is considered a K-State student as well as an MCC student.

Since this has happened more than once, it seems that the Collegian only wants to recognize "the traditional K-Stater." I hope this is not so. The purpose of a paper should be to inform, not to selectively inform or to purposely falsify information.

I think an apology is in order to the MCC students who have been misnamed as well as Unlike the many other students who enter contests every year hoping to get rich quick or win a trip to the tropical paradise of their choice, one K-State student actually won one of these contests.

Amy Morrison, senior in accounting and finance, recently won an all-expenses paid trip for two to Jamaica.

Morrison entered a contest at I Can't Believe It's Yogurt a number of times while she was living across the street from the Manhattan store.

Larry Boyd, manager of the received a phone call from her store, said 150 stores in 26 states mother. participated in the contest. Boyd said there were two ways in which a customer had a chance to win.

Upon making a purchase, the customer was given a game card that would allow an instant win. The other option was a weekly drawing. A customer would fill in his or her name for a second chance at the grand prize — the trip to

Morrison said she found out she had won the trip Saturday when she

"Mom read the letter (to me) over the phone," Morrison said. At first, Morrison said, she thought there was "some kind of catch to it. It still hasn't really hit me.'

The trip consists of free air fare for two from New York to Jamaica and seven-nights accomodations at one of five resorts.

Morrison said she found the incident ironic because her fiance, Mark Dobbins, senior in marketing, proposed to her in a yogurt

Egyptian sale helps mills

By The Collegian Staff

The recent sale of wheat flour to Egypt will end a lull in the U.S. flour export business and will enable mills across Kansas to operate at full strength.

Under the Export Enhancement Program, nearly 220,000 tons of wheat were sold to Egypt. The sale will have a ripple effect on the economy, said Melvin Sjerven, senior editor of marketing at Milling and Baking magazine.

"This sale will help farmers because it will use Kansas wheat, and it will help the communities that run the flour mills," Sjerven said.

The 18 flour mills located in Kansas have a milling capacity of 106 million bushels of wheat per year, Sjerven said, which constitutes about 60 percent of the nation's export Research done by William Tierney, associate professor in agricultural economics, shows that the reduction of U.S. flour exports in 1987-88 is estimated to have cost the Kansas economy $225 million in lost output.

Sales of flour diminished in recent years because of competition from Europe, and as a result, flour mills have not been able to work at full strength.

"Few flour mills closed completely down," Sjerven said, "but they were all forced to operate at a lower level. With this sale, they will be able to work at full capacity until the end of the year."

Other research by Tierney shows that in the last six months, some Kansas mills have closed temporarily. Others switched from three shifts, seven days a week to one shift, five days a week.

Sjerven described Egypt as a "bottomless pit when it comes to a need for flour." Egypt is the world's largest buyer of flour, and this recent sale involved the most U.S. export flour sold in more than a year.

James Taylor shares 'old magic' at Starlight show

Almost 20 years ago a young man named James Taylor began to share his music with the world.

Taylor's sleepy voice and crisp acoustic melodies made him one of the most celebrated male vocalists of the early '70s.

As time passes, it seems most musicians tend to lose some of their magic. Voices tire and once-limber

Saturday night concert, I was prepared to be a little disappointed.

I had seen Taylor earlier in the year on "Saturday Night Live" and was saddened to see a wrinkling man who didn't touch a guitar or sing without the help of a couple of back-

When the lights went down at Starlight, James Taylor appeared alone on stage, still wrinkled, but carrying his six-string and the same beautiful voice I remember hearing on my sister's stereo as a kid.

Taylor opened with "I Feel Fine," a song that lent itself well to this feet and again silenced the audience with "Wild Mountain Thyme."

After showing the crowd that he could still stand alone on stage, Taylor brought out his band and the same two back-ups I had seen on "Saturday Night Live."

This particular Saturday night, Taylor's ensemble was great. Their sound was full, complementing Taylor instead of upstaging him.

One of the highlights of the first set was "Millworker," a song Taylor wrote for Studs Terkel's dramatic musical "Working." This ballad of a single mother's relationship with her job is representative of the kind of humanistic art for which Taylor is famous.

After a pumped version of "Steam Roller," Taylor and company took a break. Taylor also used this time to let his talented back-up singers, whom the audience got to know as Rosemary and Arnold, rock the stage with a cover of the Beatles' "Come Together."

The second set was even more entertaining than the first.

Taylor sang more of the songs which nabbed him his loyal following. "Fire and Rain" and "Carolina in My Mind" (as hokey as it sounds) made some of the crowd laugh, some cry, and almost all sing along.

After two hours of quality music,

Taylor half-heartedly called it a night and headed off stage. He re-appeared after the first of three standing ovations, and gratified the audience with another 30 minutes of song.

The two encore sets contained the best performances of the evening. "Up On the Roof," performed in the cool fall air, bordered on an out-of-body experience. Taylor's finale was "Sweet Baby James."

Though some K-Staters choose to live in a residence hall with their best friend from first grade, others "go potluck." That is, they do not name a preferred roommate on their housing contract and thus meet their roommate the week before classes begin.

Either way, all students who turn in a housing contract are paired with a roommate by the Department of Residents are first paired if they have made a roommate preference, said Tom Frith, director of housing, although there are times when residents' requests cannot be met. Some of the reasons for students not being paired are: the contracts were sent in too far apart; the students indicated that hall choice was more important than roommate choice; or the choice to be roommates was not mutual on both parts.

For two people to be paired, the hall choice and sex of the students must match.

"These are absolutes and are solid," he said.

If a student sends the contract in with no roommate preference, then the computer pairs students according to birthdate, academic year and major, smoking/non-smoking, and early-to-bed/late-too-rise. But smoking/non-smoking is a No.1 priority, Frith said.

"These are suggested pairings done by the computer and sent on to the hall directors. The hall directors have the final say in all roommate pairings," he said.

Moore Hall Director Jim Sand said that assuming the students did not prefer anyone, he usually sticks to the pairings done by the computer.

"I'm careful about placing smokers with non-smokers. But if contracts are sent in late, I do the best I can," he said.

This year, contracts were arriving earlier than in past years, which Sand said allowed him more time to match roommates as closely as possible.

"I usually try not to match juniors and seniors with freshmen. I also look at each person's major, and sometimes I'll even have time to look at what size town or city they come from," he said.

Although no figures are kept on the number of roommate changes during the year, Frith said that the present selection system works because of the students.

"Our students are good and want to get along with their new roommate, and they do get along," he said.

West Hall Resident Assistant Nancy Hoffman said that for the limited amount of information on the housing applications, the matching of roommates is fairly successful.

"On my wing, there are five sets of roommates who went 'potluck,' and they are getting along fine. This year, however, more and more students come into the hall knowing each other already; they preferred one another," said Hoffman, a secondyear staff assistant.

Mark Spinar, third-year staff assistant at Goodnow Hall, agreed with Hoffman about the pairing

'There's always a few students who are hard to match, but overall (the system) works well," Spinar

Frith also said there are personality characteristics that appear later which do not show up on the application form. Usually, though, most of the roommate matches have more than half of the same characteristics in common, he said.

However, sometimes a student is not happy with the roommate or hall choice and may opt to sign a transfer hall list. This year after 11/2 weeks into the semester, moves to other halls were worked out, Frith said.

Reasons for the students wanting to move vary with each person, he

"Sometimes, the student has good friends in another hall, or the student requested a cluster floor and was placed in a hall without one, and the proximity to class buildings is not met," he said.

An average of 40 to 45 students request transfers each year, Frith

WHITEHALL, Mont. -Twisted Sister and Motley Crue may not know it, but their music is keeping ducks and geese alive in western Montana.

The migrating waterfowl hate the heavy-metal rock music by the groups so much that they avoid a pond contaminated by cyanide where the music is kept playing on loudspeakers 24 hours a day.

The contaminated pond is at the Golden Sunlight Mine near Whitehall, where cyanide is used to leach gold from ore. The cyanide flows into a 250-acre settling pond, where it is poisonous to waterfowl.

Don Jenkins, the mine's administrative superintendent, read how rock music was used to scare starlings from a New York airport. He decided to try Twisted Sister, Motley Crue, Scorpions and others.

He also uses propane-powered cannons that fire every couple of minutes, and security guards who occasionally fire shotgun blasts or flare guns.

Representation spending

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The 50 states and Washington, D.C. spend widely differing amounts to represent criminal defendants who can't afford a lawyer, the Justice Department reported Monday.

In a study that covered the years 1982-86, the department said Arkansas spent the least for indigent defendants - an average of 69 cents per state resident. The District of Columbia spent the most, $29 per capita.

The average per capita expenditure nationwide was $4.11 in 1986, up from $2.76 in 1982. The caseload involving indigent defendants about 40 percent in the four-year period.

When average costs per indigent case were computed, Arkansas again was last, spending $63 per case in 1986. New Jersey was first, spending an average of $540.

Nationwide, the average cost per case was $223 in 1986, up from $196 in 1982.

Missouri spent $6.7 million in 1986, or $1.33 per capita, ranking it 49th, ahead of only Mississippi and Arkansas. Kansas spent $4.2 million, or $1.73 per capita, ranking it

Oklahoma, $4.4 million, $1.36, 48. The 50 states and the nation's capital spent a combined $991 million for indigent defendants in 1986, compared to $625 million in 1982 - an increase of 60 percent. The programs are financed by state, county and local governments in each state.

The report was compiled by the Bureau of Justice Statistics as an update to a 1982 study on the same subject.

Since the initial study, the report said, there was a movement from county to state financing; an increase in rates of compensation paid to private lawyers, and expanded use of contracts for providing representation to the poor.

The rights of poor criminal defendants to legal representation were spelled out in a number of Supreme Court rulings beginning in 1932.

One case was the landmark Gideon vs. Wainright in 1963, when the court extended the right to counsel in state courts to all indigent defendants charged with a

For the fourth consecutive year, the K-State chapter of Golden Key National Honor Society has received the organization's highest honor - the Key Chapter Award.

This award, presented by the national headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., is given each year to less than 10 percent of the 124 member chapters in the country and is based on chapter activities. Also considered in the award competition is the fulfillment of duties by the chapter advisers and officers.

Each year the officers compile a notebook outlining the past year's events, said Scott Burgett, president of the K-State chapter.

The notebook is comprised of all the activities with which the chapter has been involved, including all written correspondence and published bulletins concerning the chapter, he said. The completed notebook is sent to the national headquarters in June, Burgett said.

"This year's Golden Key notebook was 11/2 inches thick," he said. The reason the K-State chapter consistently wins the award, Burgett said, is because of the time and organization the officers put into the notebook.

K-State has been among the top five chapters in the nation each of the past four years.

In addition to the national award, each chapter has the opportunity to honor an individual from its university. This year Golden Key has given its President's Award to Willard Nelson, dean of the College of Education and Golden Key adviser.

"I have been fortunate to work with wonderful people and great student leaders. Being an adviser (to Golden Key) has been an enriching experience," Nelson

Leader accused of urging attacks

By The Associated Press

JERUSALEM - Israel on Monday accused Mohammed Jamal, a top Moslem religious leader, of urging worshipers to attack Jews at an archaeological site in Jerusalem.

There were these other developments:

■ The Supreme Court ruled that Israel can continue blocking international telephone lines to the occupied territories. ■ Journalists at state-owned

Israel radio announced they would refuse assignments in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip after management rejected a request for reinforced cars and extra pay to work there. Since the start of the uprising last Dec. 8 by Palestinians in the occupied lands, cars carrying press signs frequently have been stoned. The attacks followed rumors that Israel's Shin Bet security agents used press credentials as a cover.

■ The army issued orders prohibiting troops from firing tear gas into enclosed spaces. The new policy resulted from a report last May by five Israeli physicians who determined that using tear gas in enclosed spaces was dangerous to human life.

Amnesty International, the London-based human rights group, has said at least seven Palestinians have perished because of the improper use of tear gas. The United Nations puts the number of deaths caused by tear gas at 13 since the uprising began.

At least 258 Palestinians and four Israelis have been killed in clashes and attacks since Dec. 8.

Police accused Mohammed Jamal, deputy head of Jerusalem's Supreme Moslem Council, with broadcasting a call to worshipers to fight Jews working on an archaeological dig near two of the city's mosques, police spokesman Rafi Levy said. He said police plan to indict Jamal on a charge of inciting violence.

Jamal would be the highestranking Moslem official to be tried by Israel since it captured Arab east Jerusalem in the 1967 Middle East

"What I did is not incitement. It is the right of Moslems to come to their holy place and defend it," Jamal said in an interview. "They crucified Jesus. Now they want to do the same

On July 3, riot police fired tear gas and rubber bullets at hundreds of stone-throwing Palestinians enraged by the dig near Temple Mount, which 'nouses two of Islam's holiest shrines, the Al Aqsa and Dome of the Rock

Kansans march

By The Associated Press

WICHITA - About 40 people walked from Plainview Park here to the little community of Schulte 12 miles southwest of Wichita Monday, launching the month-long Kansas March for Peace and Justice that ends Oct. 1 with a rally on the Statehouse steps in Topeka.

Randy Hershey of Wichita, one of the organizers of the march, led the group down McArthur Road from the park at 31st and South Oliver at 10 a.m. A spokeswoman said about 65 people turned out to send off the Wichita marchers.

They arrived in Schulte in late afternoon, ate their evening meal, and those who needed to return to work Tuesday were shuttled back to Others were to join Hershey at 7:30 a.m. Tuesday to continue the march. Tuesday's destination was St. Mary's Church in rural western Sedgwick County.

From there, the march will go to join the march at any point along the

Mt. Hope and Yoder, arriving in Hutchinson by late Friday.

A second leg of the march was to begin Tuesday morning at Clay Center, led by Bill Beachy of Topeka.

The two legs will merge in Salina Sept. 18, then begin the trek eastward to Topeka.

The southern leg led by Hershey will pass through Hutchison, McPherson, Lindsborg and Smolan en route to Salina. The northern leg will pass through Concordia, Beloit and Minneapolis en route to Salina.

From Salina, the route will take the marchers through Abilene, Junction City, Manhattan, Wamego and St. Mary's en route to Topeka and the Oct. 1 rally at the Capitol.

A third leg of the march will start in Lawrence on Sept. 30 and cover the 25 miles to Topeka to join the rally the next day.

Clovia living space available

By The Collegian Staff

With a potential capacity for 62 women and a current occupancy of 46, Clovia 4-H House is still offering living space for single women.

The reason for the shortfall, said Rachel Smith, Clovia membership chairman, is not the lack of new members, but the smaller number of women recruited in the past two

To fill vacancies, Clovia has recently placed advertisments in the Collegian and set up an interview process for women interested in moving in immediately. Although rent is paid on a semester basis, the cooperative house can accept members all year.

Although the house's capacity is higher, living arrangements are more comfortable with 56 women in the house. Smith said.

Generally, year-long recruitment consists of cooperation with county extension agents, tours to prospective students who have expressed an interest in Clovia and word of mouth between currents members and women from their hometowns.

Smith attributes the lack of interest in cooperative living to the descriptive phrase for its occupants who have "4-H or similar background."

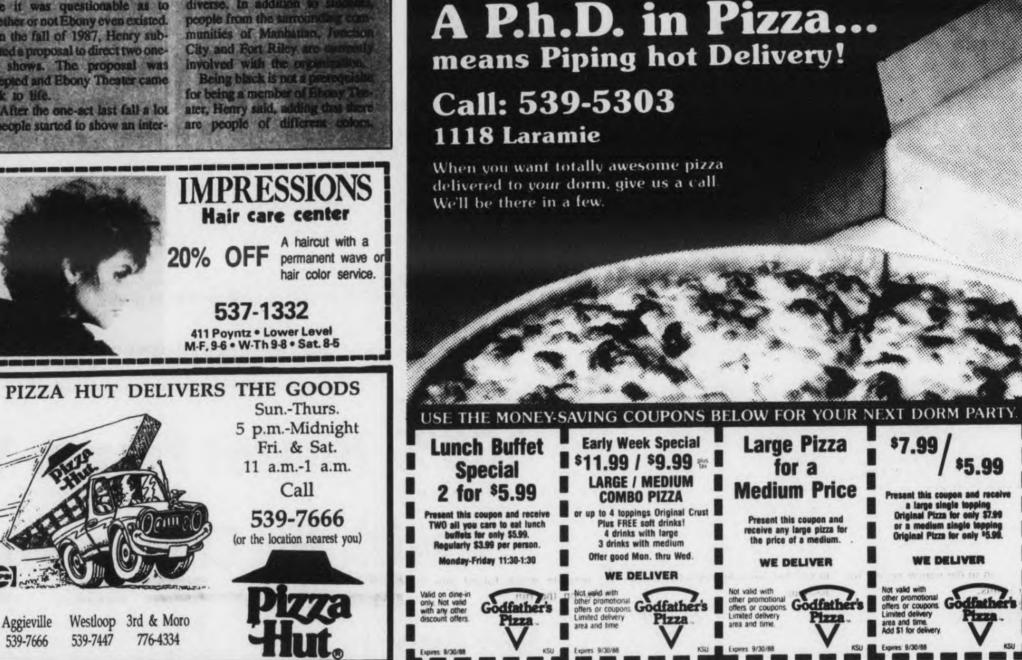

She said she believes potential members are needlessly scared off by this requirement. Many people meet this qualification by being involved in church groups, Future Homemakers of America and service organizations.

"We're just looking for friendly people," she said. Because costs and duties for the house are shared, Smith said gaining new members will lead to a decrease in rent and the required time spent on house duties for the women currently in the house.

Plans for next year will emphasize early recruitment, she said. Potential members will receive applications in the mail, and Clovia will continue to place notices on the off-campus housing board.

Rubley riddles 'Cat defense in 35-9 win

Tulsa tight end David Owens (87) escapes the tackle of K-State defensive end Robert Easterwood. Owens, a backup tight end, had two receptions for 40 yards in Tulsa's 35-9 win Saturday against the 'Cats.

TULSA, Okla. - Four turnovers, a 15 mph wind, and T.J. Rubley's right arm were just too much for K-State to handle Saturday night in Skelly Stadium.

Tulsa, with Rubley leading the way with 284 yards passing, rolled to a 35-9 win in the season opener for both teams.

K-State battled the elements: The temperature was 87 degrees at kickoff and the north wind whipped through the stadium, making several passes look like boomerangs rather than footballs.

The Wildcats battled their own ineptitude: Three fumbles and an interception thrown by quarterback Carl Straw were big factors that led to just 231 yards of total offense for K-State.

But possibly most importantly, the Wildcats battled, and lost, to Rubley: The talented Tulsa sophomore was 21-of-43 with two touchdowns as he picked apart a blitzing K-State defense while leading his team to just Golden Hurricane quarterback.

After Rubley was knocked from the game on a vicious hit early in the series, backup quarterback Frank Cassano hit split end Dan Bitson with a pair of big throws to put Tulsa in the

The blitz and subsequent big hit led to Rubley's exit, and yet it also led to Cassano and Bitson's successes, the most important of which was the 10-yard scoring strike that put Tulsa in the lead - a lead the Golden Hurricane never lost.

K-State answered the early Tulsa score with one of its own, a one-yard run by fullback Lee Pickett that capped a six-play, 29-yard drive, but, on a two-point conversion attempt, the Wildcats failed where Tulsa had earlier succeeded, and could pull no closer than 8-6.

Tulsa scored 10 unanswered points in both the second and third quarters, and the Wildcats, on the short end of a 28-6 score, were all but buried entering the fourth quarter. Included in the 20 unanswered

Tulsa points were the two TD tosses by Rubley, one capping a 12-play, 90-yard drive that was the most impressive of the night.

K-State coach Stan Parrish said the blitzing was something designed to throw Rubley from his rhythm, and is something the 'Cats will continue.

"We're going to blitz all year," Parrish said. "I still think we've got a better chance that way than by sitting back and waiting to get burned."

Wildcat inside linebacker Erick Harper gave credit to Rubley for stepping up and throwing in the face of the blitz, and said a mechanical adjustment by Rubley gave him the extra time to get his throws off.

"He throws catchable balls and is a true team leader in every sense of the word," Harper said. "It's hard to stop a three-step passer. He saw what we were doing, and he'd take those steps instead of a longer drop and bang, the ball was off."

The teams traded scores in the fourth quarter, with K-State's Mark Porter hitting a 49-yard field goal and Tulsa scoring a touchdown on a 19-yard run by flanker Erick Harrison.

When the final gun had sounded and K-State was leaving the field, the emotions of the two teams weren't as different as one might have expected.

Tulsa was businesslike and fairly unemotional for a team that had won its opener, and K-State wasn't nearly as emotionally spent as it had been a year earlier in a loss to Austin Peay State.

"We've just got one under our belts now," Tulsa coach Dave Rader said. "We've got a long way to go, and one win does not a year make. That's what our young men have to remember."

"Our kids will bounce back," K-State's Parrish said. "We're not devastated like we were a year ago.' Straw, who led the Wildcats offensively from a variety of formations that included the wishbone, agreed with his coach.

"It hurts to lose, but we've got to bounce back. This team has the charisma to do it, and now we have to."

Miss Saturday's game and be an accessory to murder

Go ahead, be an accessory to murder.

Do you want to torture your victim? Do you relish the idea of helping inflict a slow and painful death on several of your fellow K-Staters?

If you're sadistic, cruel or ruled by your pocketbook, you'll skip Saturday's home football game against the University of Iowa. You may even go so far as to boycott all home games this year. While you're at it, don't even buy a season ticket.

Before you begin to take this personally, this isn't intended as an indictment of the K-State student body. And I've got no bone to pick with a student who really doesn't give a darn about the football team

This is, however, intended to be a gripe session designed to get those people who do nothing but complain about our poor fortunes in football to do something to help those fortunes become something but poor.

Waiting for the final seconds of K-State's loss to Tulsa to pass, senior linebacker Vantz Singletary sits dejectedly on the Wildcats' bench.

DAVE SVOBODA Sports Columnist

So, K-State fanatic, get off your behind, quit your complaining, and prove that you're a real K-State fan, not just one who gives his all when winning is the rule rather than the exception.

Let's face it, if the students aren't in the stands, and if they aren't joined there by several thousand alumni, this University's football program is destined to go nowhere but straight into the toilet now occupied by Wichita State University and several others. OK, smart guy, I can here you saying, "We're there already." Why don't you stop for a moment and

Let's do a little objective thinking now, shall we? Student and alumni season ticket holders, and those that hold tickets for individual games, provide one of the major revenue sources for the football program at K-State. If you spend a Saturday at KSU Stadium, you're helping your program get better.

The money derived from ticket sales, student and alumni donations and the like is what allows K-State to fund its scholarships and make continued improvements on its facilities for football.

If students and alumni fail to put the money into the piggy bank, so to speak, K-State will not be able to award the maximum allowable number of scholarships to prospective football players, and needed improvements will not take place at KSU Stadium.

Simple logic will tell you that if football powers such as the universities of Oklahoma and Nebraska are awarding the maximum allowable number of scholarships, and those programs that are struggling, like the one at K-State, are awarding less than the allowable number, the rich will get rich and the poor will simply get

If K-State isn't awarding the maximum number of scholarships, and improvements aren't being made on the stadium to bring a better caliber of athlete to K-State, the program is destined to continue its downward spiral forever.

K-Staters have been spoiled for a number of years by a great basketball program. The Wildcat basketball program, however, continued to receive fan support even when it fell on hard times in the early- to about 25 knots, with water spraying in their faces, several students tried out for a spot on the K-State's water ski club last week at Tuttle Creek

Some fared well; others simply had a tough time getting through the course.

There were several people on the shore waiting for a shot at the course. Others were just on the shore watching and making a last-Racing through the water at ditch effort at a summer tan. But if it's true that numbers help a team, K-State is due for a big boost.

"This is our first year of organized tryouts," said team captain

James Hailey. "The thing is, though, we've never had this many women try out for the team. Just having this many will help in the standings at the meets."

The tryouts were Wednesday and Friday at the Stockdale Park Area of Tuttle Creek.

The tryouts were conducted according to National Collegiate Athletic Association water skiing guidelines, and Hailey appeared pleased with the results.

"Our returning skiers (got) a lot better than last year. Even the new people that tried out were good. Normally at every meet we finish in the top 10. Some of that is due to the lack of numbers. This year we could finish in the top five.

K-State opens its season Sept. 17-18 at the University of Kansas Invitational at Lawrence. The team's only other scheduled meet is Oct. 1-2 at the Midwest Regionals at Decatur, Ill.

in the Kaw Valley Cup tournament. Miami garners top billing in AP poll

By The Associated Press

The Miami Hurricanes, college football's defending national champions, have regained the No. 1 ranking just one game into the new season.

Saturday night's 31-0 trouncing of Florida State, the preseason No. 1 team, vaulted Miami from sixth place to the top in this week's Associated Press poll. Nebraska remained No. 2 while Florida State dropped to 10th. Texas and Washington replaced No. 11 Texas A&M and No. 18 Tennessee in the Top Twenty.

Miami received 38 of 60 firstplace votes and 1,149 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. Nebraska, which has been No. 2 in each of this season's three polls, received 14 first-place votes and 1,113 points following a 63-13 rout of Utah State.

Miami coach Jimmy Johnson isn't getting caught up in the No. 1 hype at this point.

"It's really too early in the season for a coach to be concerned about the rankings," Johnson said Monday. "I wouldn't even address it one way or another.

"We have a very young team and a lot of difficult games to play. Our only concern right now is going up and playing Michigan (on Sept. 17) in a place that's very difficult to play in. All we've done is win one game."

Clemson, a 40-7 winner over Virginia Tech, climbed from fourth to third with three first-place votes and 1,003 points. Oklahoma, which opens its season this week at North Carolina, slipped from third to fourth with two first-place votes and 969 points.

UCLA held onto fifth place by crushing San Diego State 59-6. The Bruins received two first-place votes and 941 points. The other first-place vote went to Southern Cal, which defeated Boston College 34-7 and rose from eighth to sixth with 878

Auburn, which gets under way this week against Kentucky, remained seventh with 768 points while Georgia jumped from 12th to eighth with 703 points after beating Tennessee

Michigan moved up from 10th place to ninth with 639 points. The Wolverines open this week at Notre Dame. Florida State rounds out the Top Ten with 600 points.

The Second Ten consists of LSU, West Virginia, Notre Dame, Alabama, Michigan State, South Carolina, Iowa, Penn State, Texas and Washington. Texas and Washington made the Top Twenty for the first time this season.

Former Royal earns 20th win

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO - Don't ask Pete Rose if pitcher Danny Jackson should be the National League's most valuable player.

"All I know, is that I don't get to vote," responds the Cincinnati Reds' manager.

"But, he's been the best pitcher in the league all year," says Rose. "I've seen him win 20 games. I've seen him get 13 complete games and I've seen him get six shutouts."

Rose also points out, "a lot of guys go 20-13 and 20-15, but they don't impress you. They don't keep you in hallgames."

Jackson became the first National League pitcher to win 20 Sunday when he defeated the Chicago Cubs 17-0. The only other 20-game winner in baseball is Minnesota's Frank Viola.

Jackson had a career day, getting four hits for the first time in five trips. Jackson had a double and a single during a nine-run fifth, and scored four runs as Cincinnati enjoyed its biggest run and hit (18) production of the season.

Jackson had been hitting .122 (9-for-74).

"He (Jackson) really should have had five hits," said Rose, "The left fielder (Rolando Roomes) was way out of position for Jackson's flyball in the ninth, and he could not catch up with it, but it popped out of his glove, and it was ruled an error," Rose said.

"But, it was still a career day and a day to remember for Jackson," Rose pointed out.

with a 1.79 ERA since June 28. But what a difference a change of scenery has made for Jackson.

"I'm not pitching any differently now than I did a year ago. I always knew I could win 20 because I know I'm a good pitcher," explains Jackson.

But when things weren't going particulary good in 1987 as a member of the Kansas City pitching corps (9-18), Jackson decided he'd change the number on his uniform.

"Not only did I change uniform numbers from 25 to 15, but I cleaned out my entire locker to see if I might start winning," recalled Jackson.

"I decided that something had to be done since I wasn't getting much ers to lead public school students in daily recitation of the pledge as an example of the "mindset that could well sterilize public education of its proper role as a transmitter of the values and standards on which we must rely - and which have been central throughout our history."

Democratic vice presidential nominee Bentsen was in Waco, Texas, before flying to join Dukakis at a ralfits from the business, he started Textbook Savers to help students.

"I'm a student, like everyone else," he said. "I think that I can help people save money, and if the bookstores can lower their prices to compete with me, I think that's great. I would rather have cheaper books."

On the average, students receive half or less of the original cost of books when they re-sell them to bookstores, Metcalf said. But, he said his system won't always provide the most payback.

"Let's say you bought a book that won't be used again, and the store offers to buy it for $5," he said. "I can't get you a better deal than that. No one wants to buy a book that's not going to be used anymore."

ly in St. Louis.

At the St. Louis rally, Dukakis pledged the Democrats would "clean up the environment, and we're not going to listen to any election-year conversions on the subject. ... No born-again environmentalists - we don't need that."

At the same rally, Bentsen ridiculed the vice president's pledge last month that a Bush administration would create 30 million new jobs. "He's visiting with his economist," Bentsen said of Bush. "He's out in Disneyland right now.'

During his earlier Texas appearance, Bentsen referred to Bush as a former Texas oilman and then added, "But frankly, I can't remember anything he's done for the energy industry in the past eight years." The Republicans like to talk about left and right," Bentsen said. "But this election is not about moving left or right. It is about standing still with George Bush or moving forward with Mike Dukakis."

Dukakis lashed out at Bush's proposal to cut the capital gains tax, which he said could give a $30,000 tax break to those making more than $200,000 a year.

"That's more than the average teacher makes," Dukakis said.

dent and alumni fan support through the rough times are what allowed the K-State basketball program to rebound so quickly.

Ask Lon Kruger where he'd be right now if it wasn't for those who opened their pocketbooks when times were tough. Kruger would be lying if he said anything but in a heap of trouble.

So, friends and fellow fanatics, if you want the vicious circle to end, go to the game this Saturday, buy a season ticket, and support your team. You may not see the reward of your efforts for several years, but if you don't go at all, you'll likely be an alum of a school with the worst team in football - if the school has a team

I know times are tough, and you don't want to throw money to the wind if the investment doesn't seem good. But you have no right to complain about the quality of the product if you're not willing to invest in its improvement.

Stan Parrish is not to blame for what's happening now. God could coach this team and Jesus Christ could be the defensive coordinator, and if the cash wasn't there to fund scholarships and continued improvement, even those that I love and worship the most wouldn't be able to make a difference.

You can make a difference. Go to the game this Saturday. Be positive. You did it for the basketball team. Give the football team the same break, or be an accessory to murder.

And for those of you who don't give a darn about football, channel your efforts into something like the library. But most of all, care enough to make a difference instead of just complaining all of the time. You owe that to yourself.

Bangladesh floods leave 21 million homeless

By The Associated Press

RAJBARI, Bangladesh - The nation's three mightiest rivers began receding Tuesday but the most urgent problem grew: how to provide food, shelter and clean water to at least 21 million homeless people and prevent an epidemic.

"This is the worst flood in the history of Bangladesh," President Hussain Mohammed Ershad said to about 300 men, women and children huddled in front of him on a narrow embankment surrounded by brown

A soldier doled out scoops of uncooked rice and Ershad told the people more food would be found.

Floods have submerged threefourths of the country in the past 10 days and 12 smaller rivers were reported still rising Tuesday, although the Ganges, Brahmaputra and Meghna receded. The flooding began in June with the monsoon season, then abated and resumed last

At least 412 people have been killed since June, according to government figures, but that number is considered too low. Daily death reports in Dhaka newspapers, including 32 people who drowned when a ferry sank in the Pabna district 75 miles west of the capital, put the total at 1,154.

Illness from flood-polluted water is increasing. The government health control center reported 10,000 new cases of diarrhea Tuesday, bringing the total to 102,000, and said 79 people had died of it. Those totals include only cases in areas that still can communicate with Dhaka.

The United States has committed nearly $3.6 million to Bangladesh flood relief, the U.S. Agency for International Development said Tuesday. Disaster management experts will be sent to Dhaka to help assess the situation and advise on further assistance, the agency said.

Ataul Karim, ambassador to the United States, said Tuesday in an interview with CBS: "It's totally unprecedented. ... It's an aberration of nature. In 24 hours the whole country went under water. There is hardly any high ground anywhere." He said 28 million people were homeless.

Bangladesh is a region of deltas for rivers that rush down from the Himalayas during the annual monsoon rains. Erling Dessau, head of the U.N. Development Program, said: "There should not be 110 million people living here. I think nature should have been left to itself."

The government says it is too early to assess total damage or how much money will be needed for food supplies and reconstruction. Ershad said during a tour of flooded areas by helicopter and motor launch, however, that the cost of restoring roads and rail lines alone will be 5 billion takas ($156 million).

He and other government officials have said Bangladesh needs 3 million tons of grain from abroad. "We will have to feed the people for two months at least," Ershad said.

Commission passes rezoning ordinance

By Angela J. Smith Collegian Reporter

City commissioners on Tuesday unanimously approved, on its first reading, an ordinance rezoning the property located to the east of Westport Drive, north of Claflin Road and south of Dickens.

The property, formerly zoned for industrial use, was recommended for planned unit development for residential use.

This PUD will create a total of 240 dwelling units for apartment use. The Urban Area Planning Board, recommend the rezoning of the

Larry Hulse, director of community development, said the requirements the developers would have to meet would be: sidewalks, sanitary sewer improvements in the area, maximum number of apartment units locations done according to the planning and development guidelines set by the City Commission and parking.

Furthermore, developers must work with the city staff to make sure the visual triangles in the intersection are kept clear for traffic safety reasons, he said.

Commissioner Nancy Denning was concerned about the traffic at the intersection of Westport and Claflin.

"At Westport and Claflin, there is a blindspot that you can't see. Now, with more commercial (development) going in on the other side of Classin and Westport, I'm really conin its August meeting, voted to cerned about that intersection," Denning said. Commissioner Kent Glasscock was also concerned about keeping the visual triangle clear for drivers pulling out on Claflin.

Hulse said if this area would go to residential or smaller lot development instead of the PUD, there would limited to 240, landscaping and sign probably be more traffic.

Meinhardt calls for budget freeze

By Chris Doll Features Editor

The federal deficit must be controlled or the U.S. economy will falter, and the best way to control the deficit is to freeze the budget for at least one year, said Phil Meinhardt,

Republican House candidate. Meinhardt is challenging threeterm Democrat Jim Slattery for Kansas' 2nd District, which includes Topeka, Manhattan and Lawrence. He was in Manhattan Tuesday for the opening of the Riley County Republican Party headquarters. "If (the deficit) does not stop increasing, we'll be paying foreign countries so much in interest, it will exacerbate the trade deficit," he told the Collegian in an interview.

Meinhardt said the budget for fiscal year 1989 should match this year's $1.1 trillion budget. He would not be in favor of increasing the budget to allow for inflation, new programs or expansion in existing programs.

"It would call for a little sacrifice across the board," he said.

If the budget is frozen, inflation would not substantially rise because money would be more scarce, which would reduce the inflationary pressure put on the dollar, he said.

The strategy would not immediately eliminate the $150 billion deficit, but it would stop its growth. And in time, the government will have saved enough revenue to pay off the

The Democrats, including Slattery, plan to reduce the deficit by increasing taxes, he said. This strategy is not only unnecessary, but it will not work because government would spend the extra money. "To the Democrats, raising taxes is like leaving Tammy Faye Bakker with a credit card. She's just hopping to go shopping," he said. Freezing the budget would not mean government agencies would suffer. Instead, he said, they would find ways to become more efficient and offer services the public needs.

Also, Meinhardt said, money could be juggled from one program to another. The defense department's budget could be reduced by tightening procurement procedures and buying less expensive equipment.

'If we can spend $300 billion on all the means to kill people, then I think we can spend a few billion on education," he said.

Along with freezing the federal budget, Meinhardt wants unrestricted trade between the United States and other countries. Wheat subsidies in the United States have declined since Japan has opened up its markets to U.S. commodities, he

"Free trade means a better life for everyone. We must compete, and as a result of competition, the consumer gets a better product," he said.

Cosmonauts land after difficult orbit

By The Associated Press

MOSCOW - Two cosmonauts returned safely to Earth early Wednesday after their descent had been aborted twice and their food and oxygen began to run out, the official Soviet news agency reported.

Tass reported that Abdul Ahad Mohmand, the first Afghan in space, and his Soviet crewmate, Vladimir Lyakhov, touched down at 4:50 a.m. Moscow time (8:50 p.m. EDT Tuesday) in Soviet Central Asia.

"Both cosmonauts feel fine after the landing," Tass said.

The agency said their Soyuz TM-5 space capsule landed about 99 miles southeast of the city of Dzhezkazgan. It said both Mohamand, 29, and Lyakhov, 47, "are feeling well."

Soviet news reports earlier had said neither cosmonaut was in immediate danger but that the situation soon could become critical soon.

"Accident! The engine worked 60 seconds and shut off. A violation of the stabilization regime," Lyakhov told mission control in an exchange reported by the government newspaper Izvestia.

Lyakhov, a military pilot who has flown in space twice before, and Mohmand, an Afghan air force pilot, were to try again early Wednesday to bring the Soyuz TM-5 space capsule to a soft landing on the steppes of Uzbekistan in Soviet Central Asia, a Soviet space official told The Associated Press.

James Oberg, a U.S. expert on the Soviet space program who is familiar with the Soyuz TM-5 design, said time was running out.

"If they cannot make the burn tonight to push them back into the atmosphere, they will probably only live another 24 to 48 hours before the carbon dioxide building in the capsule will kill them," Oberg said in an interview with AP in Houston.

The North American Aerospace Defense Command in Colorado said the Soyuz had split into at least two parts, a normal procedure for re-

Staff/Greg Vogel

The Soyuz capsule is designed for trips to and from space, not for long flights.

Izvestia and the official news agency Tass said life support systems on the globe-shaped capsule are designed to last two days, which could put the cosmonauts in jeopardy Thursday morning.

According to the Soviet space official, however, the cosmonauts could stretch supplies of oxygen.

With 62 days until the 1988 general election, Riley County Republicans officially opened their campaign headquarters at 210 N. 4th siastically to about 70 people. "Fifty-two percent of the registered voters in the Riley County primary were Republican. We're going to work every precinct and we're going to do what it takes," said Spire, a K-State veterinary medicine professor. "We have a tremendous number of candidates, and all the positions are filled," he said.

Present were Phil Meinhardt, the 2nd District candidate for the U.S. House of Representatives; Joe Knopp, incumbent candidate for state representative of the 67th District, and Lana Oleen, candidate for state senator of the 22nd District. Oleen, a National Republican Convention delegate, was State Director of Communications for the Department of Human Resources

Navy spy satellites launched

LOS ANGELES - Four Navy spy satellites headed toward proper orbits despite the reported explosion of a rocket's first stage as it fell away from the rest of the booster during Monday's launch, sources said Tuesday.

The Lompoc Record newspaper, citing observers on the ground, reported Tuesday that the Titan 2's expended first stage apparently blew up after it separated from the second stage of the 103-foot, liquid-fueled rocket, which was seen continuing skyward.

"The satellites are moving exactly as they should be," an Air Force source told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity. "Everything is just peachy."

A second source, also demanding anonymity, confirmed the satellites were not endangered following the launch from Vandenberg Air Force Base, 140 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

The sources could not confirm that a secondary explosion occurred, but said they wouldn't necessarily be told of such an event if it didn't affect deployment of the satellites.

Spokesmen at Vandenberg and the Pentagon would not discuss if an explosion occurred.

"I checked into it and everything I know is positive," said Capt. Marty Hauser, an Air Force public affairs officer in Washington. "It went well."

Teachers strike for more pay

Teachers carried picket signs in more than 20 public school districts in five states Tuesday. Many held out for raises, and the biggest pay demand, 42 percent over four years, drew the ire of a mayor as "irresponsible."

"The teachers decided it's time to take a stand and that stand actually is a walk and that's what we'll be doing tomorrow morning: walking a picket line," said Thomas Grady, head of the United Teachers of Lowell, Mass., after a unanimous strike vote there Tuesday. The first day of school was canceled today for the city's 13,100 pupils.

Nationally, walkouts affected more than 100,000 pupils in Michigan, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Illinois. Classes went on despite a strike in Louisiana.

In Massachusetts, teachers in nearly 40 school districts are going to work this week without a contract. The only strike votes taken, however, were in Lowell and Peabody. Teacher strikes are illegal in Massachusetts.

Bakker tries to buy ministry FORT MILL, S.C. - Former PTL leader Jim Bakker was given a two-day extension Tuesday to come up with a $3 million down payment as the first step of his $172 million proposal to buy the television ministry's assets.

Bakker and PTL bankruptcy trustee M.C. "Red" Benton said they were still working out details of a contract for Bakker to buy assets of the ministry he gave up after a sex and money scandal last year.

The two men spoke with reporters after a one-hour meeting at the executive offices of Heritage USA, the entertainment, retail and hotel complex the ministry must sell as part of a Chapter 11 reorganization.

"The attorneys are still working on it and we hope to have something that's agreeable to everyone by tomorrow," said Benton, who had said on Friday that if the $3 million wasn't available by Tuesday he would be forced to consider other bids.

Bakker said he was about "$100,000 short" of the $3 million in cash and letters of credit. Benton said he was convinced Bakker would have the entire amount and gave him until Thursday to deliver it.

Benton had asked Bakker for the $3 million as a show of good faith in his plan to buy the Heritage USA Christian theme park, a satellite network and undeveloped property near the Fort Mill-based ministry.

Bakker, who left PTL in March 1987 after admitting to a sexual encounter with onetime church secretary Jessica Hahn, leads in the bidding to buy the assets of PTL.

Police investigate death

TOPEKA - Police detectives said Tuesday they have no new leads in the beating death of a Topeka man whose body was found on grounds of the Episcopal Diocese of Kansas

However, they confirmed they are looking into a possible link between the victim and another man who was run over on Interstate 70 in east Topeka the same day.

Detective Lt. Ed White said there were no developments in the investigation into the death of Steven D. Strimple, 31, and the injuries to Carey D. Rowlett, 25, also of Topeka.

The bludgeoned body of Strimple was found in bushes on the diocese grounds at 3:18 p.m. Sunday by a caretaker. Dr. William N. Leifer, deputy Shawnee County coroner, said Strimple died of a crushed larynx. He placed the time of death at between midnight and 3 a.m. Sunday.

About 5:10 a.m. Sunday, Rowlett was run over by one and possibly more vehicles as he lay on I-70 near the East 8th Street overpass. Rowlett underwent surgery Sunday on his two crushed legs and remains hospitalized at St. Francis Hospital and Medical Center in critical condition.

Police said they are looking into a possible connection between Strimple's death and the incident involving Rowlett.

Officers would not say what relationship they believe existed between Strimple and Rowlett, and would not disclose why they searched Rowlett's apartment on Sunday or what was found.

Strimple and Rowlett lived in separate apartment buildings about two blocks apart in the immediate vicinity of the diocese headquarters.

Vote set for pork check-off

By Paula Selby Agri/Business Editor

Pork owners prepare to vote. Pork producers will have a chance to vote today and Thursday on whether the national pork check-off program will be continued, said Mike Jensen, executive vice president of the Kansas Pork Producers Council.

The check-off program requires pork producers to pay one- fourth of a percent of the market value of their hogs to the National Pork Board for promotion and research, Jensen said.

Anyone who has owned two hogs since Nov. 1 of 1986 is eligible to vote at the Extension office located in their county of residence.

"It doesn't matter where the hogs are, it's where you live," Jensen said.

The program provides about $25 million nationwide to be spent on pork promotion, administrative research, product development and other industry issues, he said.

In 1987, the one-fourth percent averaged to about 31 cents per hog, which made a return of $6 per hog in funding, Jensen said.

Since the program was implemented with the refund available, about 91 percent of the producers participated. So, without the refund option there should be a ten percent increase in the funding, Jensen said.

If the referendum passes, the program will continue and the refund

"Up until the late '60s, the check- availability will be disallowed, Jensen said.

As required by the 1985 farm bill, the program was implemented in November 1986 on a trial basis — its continuance as a permanent program to be decided in a referendum a few years later, Jensen said.

About 30 percent of the funding goes to the National Pork Producers Council, 20 percent of which goes to the National Livestock and Meat Board.

The remaining 70 percent goes to the Pork Board discretionary fund. The fund is allocated on a project-byproject basis depending on the merit of research to be done.

"The grants for the NLMB are for meat-oriented projects, and the NPPC is more production-oriented," he said.

The NPPC uses the funding for fresh pork promotion and industry information aimed at pork producers. Whereas, the NLMB works more with research and professional leaders in various fields, such as medicine, he said.

"That way, they don't duplicate uses of funds," Jensen said.

K-State has submitted five proposals requesting funding for pork research.

"Four have survived the first cut," said Don Kropf, professor of animal sciences. "But I have heard the total amount of funding is very limited, so no more than five or six proposals will be accepted nationwide. ... Thirty survived the first cut."

The proposals the University submitted deal with ways to improve reproduction efficiency and to lower the cost of nutritional feeding of animals through higher technology genetics, said Jim Nelssen, assistant professor of animal sciences and Although professors are not getting their hopes up while they wait to hear results from the Pork Board, Jensen said there is a good chance K-State will receive partial funding.

"Not many universities across the nation are doing the quality pork research as they are at K-State," he

A "fair amount" of the national funding comes back to K-State in grants, he said, which amount to about $40,000 to $50,000 so far.

Centers combine to maximize service

By The Collegian Staff

University Counseling Services, housed in the second floor of Lafene Student Health Center, is open for business with the combined resources of the Mental Health Center and the Counseling

During the summer, the two centers moved into the Lafene offices which became available when the in-patient center closed. The Counseling Center was previously located in Holton Hall.

"(The merger) allows us to do more by not allowing us to duplicate," said Fred Newton, University Counseling Services director.

Newton said the counseling services offered have drawn closer to the average number of counselors for similar services at other Big Eight Conference schools.

"We were well below average overall, but the merger now puts us closer to the average," Newton

He said one of the recommendations from the task force which studied merging the two offices and moving them into Lafene was to evaluate the need for staff positions.

Newton said a position may open later this year, so counseling services will have to study the need for retaining the position before hiring a person to fill it.

During the summer, the area occupied by the counseling services was renovated. The renovation creates a "warm, light environment that's going to be more satisfying for a person to visit," Newton said.

Yet the environment also allows for privacy, he said.

Among the programs to be offered by counseling services are the Women in Transition support group. A program for students on how to deal with test anxiety and stress will also be offered.

Quayle plans Kansas stops in Johnson County, Wichita

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - Dan Quayle, the Republican vice presidential candidate, will visit Wichita and Johnson County next week, the state cochairman of the George Bush campaign in Kansas said Tuesday.

Details have not been worked out whether Quayle will come to Wichita or Johnson County first, said Pete McGill, but the Bush-Quayle campaign confirmed to McGill Tuesday that Quayle will visit Kansas Sept. 15-16.

McGill said an announcement would be made today with details of the Quayle appearances.

He said the GOP vice presidential candidate will make one of his Kansas stops Thursday afternoon and evening, then go to the other city on Friday. However, it was not known whether Wichita or Johnson County would be first on Quayle's agenda, McGill said. Meanwhile, the director of Michael Dukakis' campaign in Kansas issued a challenge Tuesday to the Bush-Quayle campaign to stage three debates in Kansas this fall with surrogates for the two presidential contenders facing off.

Maria Bennett, the Dukakis director, suggested the debates by stand-ins for the two presidential contenders should be held in Wichita, Topeka and Kansas City, with each side choosing its own surrogate.

"The people of Kansas deserve to know about the issues of the candidates and shouldn't be kept waiting any longer," Bennett said in a statement issued through Dukakis' state campaign headquarters in Wichita.

Neither Bush nor Dukakis is scheduled to come to Kansas during the two months of the presidential campaign.

Quayle is coming on behalf of the Bush campaign, and Demo-

Democratic presidential nominee crats have said they hope their party's vice presidential nominee, Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, also will come to Kansas during the campaign

> In response to Bennett's challenge, McGill said it was premature to reply. He said the Bush campaign is busy opening a state campaign headquarters in Topeka this week and arranging for Quayle's visits to Wichita and Johnson County next week.

> The Bush-Quayle campaign is opening its state headquarters Thursday at 235 S. Topeka Blvd., about eight blocks northwest of the Capitol. A ribbon cutting is scheduled for 10 a.m.

"We may have a response later," McGill said. "Right now, we've got higher priorities getting our work done.

"We agree the people of Kansas deserve to know what the issues are and what the candidates' positions

Nutritionist offers advice

By Susan Reimer Collegian Reporter

An increasing awareness of the need for nutrition and excercise has prompted the addition of a permanent position by Recreational Services specifically for aiding students in improving cardiovascular health and participating in the Lifeline program.

Karen Loeffler, graduate student in foods and nutrition, will help faculty and students improve their exercise programs at the Chester E. Peters Recreation Complex this fall. Loeffler graduated from K-State in May with a dual degree in nutrition and exercise science.

"I work 10 to 12 hours a week counseling people on nutrition and exercise. I also work with the Lifeline program," Loeffler said.

The Lifeline program is 13 weeks long and is based on a point system. Participants accumulate points for the aerobic activities they do each

Included in the program are lifeline challenges. These are for people interested in swimming, bicycling, running, aerobics, walking, jumping rope and rowing.

"Each month there is a different challenge. For example, September is bicycling. Participants must ride 250 miles to get a prize," Loeffler

Kansas State Collegian Opinions ■ Wednesday, September 7, 1988

University will suffer from new hiring plan

Amid rumors of low faculty-student ratios and the need for faculty cutbacks, the administration is conceiving plans which, in its opinion, will improve the situation without damaging the quality of education at K-State.

Faculty salaries at K-State are low — that is no secret. On a salary scale with 167 other universities, K-State ranks 160, making it hard for the University to compete with other institutions for qualified teachers.

This is contrasted with K-State's low faculty-student ratio. With about 15 faculty members to every student — a number below that of our peer institutions - some may have the impression that the University is over-staffed.

So putting the two figures together, the administration thinks the best way to improve the quality of academic instruction without more money — is to decrease the number of professors and pay higher salaries to those who remain.

President Jon Wefald said, "We might be better off with one faculty member who is superb teaching a big section of 300 students, than to have five professors who are average."

As a part of this new policy, the administration will encourage the individual colleges to refrain from hiring additional professors as others quit or retire. It obviously hopes that the new super salary positions will begin before any departments become understaffed.

It may be slightly workable in theory, but it is not at all workable in practice.

It will only compound the problem of poor instruction in the case of less-than-competent professors, because under the new system all professors will be teaching larger classes.

It will lessen the effectiveness of highly competent faculty members because each will be forced to handle more students with less personal contact.

When the intentions of the president's plan travels the academic grapevine it is likely to scare away more quality people than it will attract.

Bakkers refuse to quit; faithful keep supporting

Miracles will never cease.

MANAGING EDITOR

After all the media discovered about the way that Jim and Tammy Bakker ran — and lost — their multi-million dollar ministry the first time, the Bakkers may now have a chance to do it all over again.

The Bakkers may be back in the ball game.

Although they could not handle - either morally or financially - the PTL ministry and the Heritage USA Themepark which it owned, they may be given another chance to run, and lose, the Themepark. They are in the process of buying it back.

Supposedly one of the reasons that cults such as the Moonies and Hare Krishnas try to recruit people with religious backgrounds is that they are more susceptible to brainwashing. They are more attuned to the idea of blind faith and obedience without immediate rewards or benefits.

When the Bakkers attempted to indoctrinate America with their special brand of gift-wrapped religion, many of these people bought literally — the Bakker's ministry.

Many of them wised up, but some of them are still contributing to the "Make ministers the highest paid profession foundation." They still clammer for the Bible-by-Bakker just like an alcoholic clammers for cheap wine.

Faculty-student ratio low

Financial constraints threaten quality

s faculty senate president, I would like to further elaborate the faculty's concern about the debate on the faculty-student ratio. We are very lucky at K-State to have a talented and dedicated faculty. However, as has been pointed out by the Office of Planning and Evaluation, there are some major institutional constraints to achieving excellence in teaching, research and service at K-State under which this faculty must operate.

First, relative to the University's official peers and to other universities in the Big Eight, K-State has a low level of graduate instruction and a relatively low level of extramural research funding.

Second, faculty salaries at K-State are generally among the least competitive and the lowest in the entire country.

Third, largely because of this inadequate salary structure, K-State has been unable to retain some of its most capable faculty members and has had difficulty replacing those who leave with faculty of comparable qualifications.

Americans adore football because they love to win.

Maybe this is the reason why football is so popular in America. No matter which team

Hair 'cut-a-thon' to benefit center

By Susan Reimer Collegian Reporter

K-State basketball players and faculty will be dunk-tank targets at the Hair Experts' fourth annual cut-a-thon Sept. 30.

The Hair Experts Design Team is sponsoring the cut-a-thon to benefit the Big Lakes Developmental Center Inc.

Big Lakes is a learning center for children and adults with developmental disabilities. Life skills are taught at the center with individualized training programs geared to meet each person's specific needs, said Jean Deiss, director of administrative services.

Jim and Lin Ward, owners of Hair Experts, said they have been sponsoring the cut-a-thon in Manhattan since they moved to town four years ago.

The added attraction this year will be a dunk tank with basketball faculty and players as the targets.

The tank was added to try to raise a little more money, he said. Contestants will get three throws for $1.

The cut-a-thons have raised over $6,000 for Big Lakes over the past four years with $2,500 coming from last year's event.

"One hundred percent of the money goes to Big Lakes," Ward

After the money is given to Big Lakes, "(it) is put into the operating fund. From there we use it for supplies, things needed in group homes and anything else that comes up," Deiss said.

Ward pays for all the publicity and products used during the

"All haircuts are discounted to $10. Last year, I cut 41 heads in 12 hours," he said, compared to an average 10-hour day of 15 haircuts at $15 to $18 each.

Radio station KQLA-FM will be broadcasting live from 4 to 7 p.m. The station is donating one hour of air time and Ward is paying for the other two at a personal cost of $350 each.

"Local merchants donate various items. Some donate door prizes, while others bring in breakfast or lunch for us," he said.

Sigma Phi Epsilon and Triangle fraternities along with Kappa Delta and Sigma Sigma Sigma sororities will be donating their time to the project.

The helpers perform various duties. They will shampoo, sweep, wash towels and register people for door prizes.

Halls combine Homecoming

By Jody Hundley Collegian Reporter

The Association of Residence Halls will participate as one group in the 1988 Homecoming competition instead of the halls competing individually or in groups of two or three.

"The reason for all the residence halls uniting this year pertains to one of our ARH goals: cooperation not competition," said Stephanie Haub, association president.

Housing Programmer Kelli Nichols said this is the first time the halls have competed together.

"Pant the Chant was done together three or four years ago, but all the halls have never participated together on all events," she said. "In the past few years because of the hall-of-the-year award, the halls competed against one another.

"We wanted to change that, with all halls combining their efforts together."

The idea for uniting the halls was first discussed by ARH executives at the beginning of the fall semester. However, Lori Novak, publicity coordinator, said the executives did not want Homcoming to be just an ARH activity.

"We didn't want the halls to feel obligated to participate. ARH Haub said this would not be a major wanted to back up the halls in any decision they made, not force them together. It's not just an ARH activity, but rather all halls (should be) enthusiastic about participating," she

At the hall governing board training meeting for hall executives and floor presidents on Aug. 16, hall presidents discussed the possibility of the halls working together for the events. Haymaker Hall president Jeff Martin supported the idea at the meeting.

"I really like the idea. It gives us the chance to do well in Homecoming because we (residence halls) never really placed in any of the (homecoming) events," Martin said.

Haub said the hall presidents were really the ones supporting the combining of the the residence halls as one team. The presidents then went back to their hall governing boards and asked for opinions.

"I think it's neat that the halls decided on their own about this (doing Homecoming together)," Novak said.

Some members of the individual halls were concerned that individual hall spirit would not be promoted due to all the halls participating together. problem since each HGB encourages its hall members to get involved within their respective halls.

"We encourage residents to be a part of the residence hall system and not just with their own hall. It gives them the opportunity to work and to interact with other residents that they wouldn't normally (work with) on a daily basis," Haub said.

Each hall is to treat Homecoming as if the hall was competing individually, because the coordinators are not able to perform all the work themselves, Haub said. Coordinating 10 residence halls is not an easy task, but with residents pulling together it can be done, she said.

"The big part of this is getting information out to all the halls,' Novak said.

In the past, residence halls have competed individually or in groups of two or three. Haub said sometimes the turnout was small, therefore time consuming for the residents who participated. With the residence halls together, residents can help without doing a majority of the work, she

Smurthwaite President Amy Taylor said she was happy about the new

"It gives the women in our hall a chance to be involved. Because we're a small hall (of 40 women), we can't pull off Homecoming by ourselves," she said. "Fifteen or 20 people from one hall is not enough to make Homecoming worthwhile," Haub said. Haub said she hopes to compete competively with the fraternities and sororities this year. "I'd like to gain some respect from the greek system. Both sides, greek and residence halls, need to realize that halls aren't just a place to eat and sleep. They offer student government and lots of other activities to pick and choose from," said Haub.

Each HGB decided to appropriate a certain amount of money normally used for the hall's Homecoming and combine it with the other halls. Large halls contributed more than small halls, Haub said.

The Homecoming idea, Haub said, is "ideally to renew enthusiasm within each hall."

If the Homecoming activities go well this year, it's possible the combining of the residence halls might be continued next year, but "it's very hard to say right now," she said.

Close eye kept on fake IDs

By Melissa Paul Collegian Reporter

Fake identification is the way to get into bars, and the way to get into trouble, said County Attorney Bill Kennedy

"I have noticed a great increase in the use of fake IDs to get in (to bars) and drink," he said.

Ward Morgan, part owner of Brother's Tavern, said it is usually easy to catch fake IDs. They are usually poorly made, with blurry or dark print, or have been laminated more than once.

Once confiscated, they are sent to either the Riley County Police Department or the Alcohol Beverage Control.

Kennedy said the police and ABC will follow up on the violation by prosecuting offenders. Many times the person will be held at the door until the police arrive.

The fines for fake IDs and drinking under age range from $50 to mark on the individual's record.

"We always have someone come back ten years later and try to get their record clear because they're being held up in employment," Kennedy said.

Morgan said the employees of Brother's watch closely for fake IDs and underage drinkers.

"It hasn't really been a problem since the students came back," he said. "Not that there is less drinking, it's just that we're catching them before the police."

Brother's employees are rewarded $5 every time they catch an underage patron drinking. Morgan has seven "floor walkers" who patrol the bar for that reason. When a people are caught, they are asked to leave and their names are put on a list that bans them from the bar.

Kennedy said he is happy that bars have begun policing themselves.

"I encourage them to do this

Morgan said this policy saves the underage drinkers and the bar from a fine. A bar can be fined up to $1,000 for every person under age caught drinking.

Ken Snook, bartender at Bushwacker's, said the bar doesn't have much of a problem with underage drinking or fake IDs because little advertising is done on their policy of allowing patrons under 21 to

"Since the laws cracked down around here, the ABC comes so often it's hard," Snook said. "We can't afford to get caught."

Underage patrons have to pay more than those of legal age to enter either of the two establishments.

"They're an added risk," Morgan said.

Kennedy said it's a matter of taking care of the problem from the Benjamin the tarantula is held in the hands of William Fortney, assistant professor of veterinary medicine. Benjamin is kept at the Fortney household to be studied.

Ben Ross, senior in exercise science and nutrition, holds his 7-foot pet boa constrictor, Fluffy. Ross got the snake when he was in the sixth grade, when it was only about 18 inches long.

No matter if it has fur, feathers or a forked tongue there is probably someone at K-State to feed it, hold it, love it and call it a pet.

It's amazing what lengths people will go to in order to own a pet. Maybe it has something to do with the human desire to be loved unconditionally.

Some people can get their unconditional love from a cute cuddly puppy or a fuzzy little kitten. Some people are satisfied with a tiny gerbil, a parrot, or even a turtle.

But some people have to go just a little bit further for their uncondi-

The twilight zone.

People who live on campus are limited in how bizarre a pet they can own because the K-State Department of Housing prefers to keep exotic animals out of the residence halls.

"In order to protect resident rights, to insure humane treatment of animals and to obey sanitation codes, residents are allowed only small animals that normally live in a contained environment," said Rosanne Proite, assistant director of housing. "Pets like hamsters, mice, rats, gerbils, turtles, fish, birds and harmless snakes are all allowed."

Before moving a pet in, residents must get the permission of the roommate and the hall director, Proite said.

"More people used to have big fancy aquariums," said David Yoder, director of Marlatt Hall. "We used to have ferrets before people knew what they were about, but we had to get rid of them because they stank.

They used to have to run rattlesnakes out of the residence halls, he said. Once the housing department had to evict a quail.

"When I was a resident of Haymaker, the guys that lived next door had a quail that every morning, like clockwork, would do that 'bobwhite' whistle they all do," Yoder

For people who live off campus, owning a bizarre and exotic pet gets a little easier.

Ben Ross, a senior in exercise science and nutrition, couldn't stand to leave Fluffy back in Olathe.

Fluffy is a seven-foot boa constrictor. 'It's a good question as to why I got involved with snakes," Ross said. "I was interested, and an older friend of mine got me involved." Fluffy is easy to take care of and is extremely docile, he said. She eats rabbits, rats and guinea pigs on the order of about one every two or three weeks. "She was only about a foot and a half when I first got her, back in sixth grade," Ross said. "She'll probably get up to 10 or 11 feet. "She bit my roommate once, but he was pulling on her so he deserved it," Ross said, "It's pretty scary to wake up and find a seven-foot snake on top of you in the morning — I mean you really freak out."

Christopher Nazario, a senior in pre-veterinary medicine and life sciences, wanted a dog that he could play with and call his very own. So he bought Arcadia.

Arcadia is a 3-year-old pit bull terrier. "I wanted a dog that would be loyal," Nazario said. "I wanted a dog I could play rough with without hurting it, and I think Arcadia wanted a master she could play rough with without hurting. So we're a good pair.

"They're different from other dogs," Nazario said. "They're a a dog that you have to get a close relationship with.'

Nazario said he believes the bad reputation that pit bulls have is a stereotype. The problem is that when a pit bull decides to bite someone, the damage is a little more severe than when a poodle bites someone.

"The funny thing about the whole situation is Arcadia lives with a poodle, and they're the best of friends," he said. "But I think the poodle understands which of them gets to lie on the couch."

William Fortney, professor of surgery and medicine at the College of Veterinary Medicine, has a pet his daughters call Benjamin.

Benjamin is a Mexican red-leg

"We had received calls over at the vet clinic about tarantulas," Fortney said. "No one knew what they were about so I got one out of scientific curiosity."

Mexican red-leg tarantulas eat about one cricket a day, taking about an hour to eat it, he said.

"I don't handle her," Fortney said. "I didn't get her to play with. There are two reasons people get exotic pets. Scientific curiosity and for the uniqueness of the pet - to impress your friends. They should read about the pet, study them and make sure they know what they are getting into."

Christopher Nazario, senior in pre-veterinary medicine and life science, swings his pet pit bull terrier, Arcadia, as she bites down on her leash. Nazario uses the exercise to strengthen the dog and to help teach discipline.

Pageant contestants afraid of self-failure

By The Associated Press

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. - Ask a Miss America contestant what she is afraid of, and the answers seem to indicate a self-centered segment of society.

Instead of the "conventional" fears - such as nuclear war or even spiders - most of the 51 contestants tend to be afraid of failure or not reaching their own high goals.

Most contestants, for instance, admit they are afraid of making mistakes in public. Miss Florida, Melissa Aggeles, pointed to her own perfectionism.

"I expect a lot of myself and it sometimes can get in the way," she Likewise, Miss Alaska, Launa Kay Middaugh, said she sets "very high goals and I don't want to see failure." Miss South Dakota, Kathryn Barnes, said she is afraid of "running out of goals. Life would be over if I had nothing to hope for."

Miss Oklahoma, Lori Lee Kelley, said she fears "not being successful."

Some contestants said they are afraid of having the wrong image. Miss Nevada, Deborah Schuler, said she is concerned that "people perceive me differently than what I really am. Too often they see us (pageant contestants) as unapproachable."

Miss Iowa, Tiffany Ann DiBernardo, also fears "being misconstrued. I like people to think I'm per-

A noted psychologist expressed surprise at the number of contestants who feared some type of self-failure.

"It certainly sounds unusual to me, because most people are concerned about things like environmental pollution or nuclear war," said Lee Salk, professor of psychology and psychiatry at Cornell University Medical College in New York. "Fears of this sort seem self-centered - the kind of things you'd find in someone who pits themselves against difficult

The contestants' fears "certainly tells you that these people are somewhat focused on themselves and are not concerned about external affairs," he said. "If you interviewed children on the same question, nuclear war would be one of the things of great concern to many of

Mixed reactions go with Miami's climb to No. 1

By The Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. - The Miami Hurricanes' ascension to the No. 1 ranking doesn't automatically mean all's well with the defending national champions, Coach Jimmy Johnson said Tuesday.

Johnson himself was sick, in fact, but not about becoming the team to beat in college football.

"I don't really care one way or another," Johnson said. "I'm more concerned about having a cold and a sore throat."

The Hurricanes replaced Florida State as the No. 1 team in this week's Associated Press poll by thrashing the Seminoles 31-0 in Saturday's opener. Despite the impressive victory, Johnson said, his players remain young, inexperienced and unswayed by their ranking.

"We will work them hard enough to where they're more concerned about the work than they are the polls," he said.

Miami took 10 first-time starters and a No. 6 ranking into the Florida State game. Reaction about the leap to the top was mixed among the

"I don't really want to be ranked No. 1 at this point," linebacker Randy Shannon said.

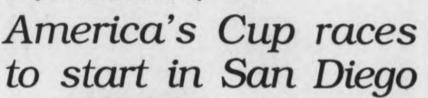

"The next 10 games are going to be the toughest games we ever played. Everybody shoots for No. 1, just like we shot for Florida State. Everybody will have a knife in our back, trying to get us down some way, Fullback Cleveland Gary said it felt good to be atop the poll. However, Gary struggled for an answer when asked if Miami is the nation's best team.

"I'd say that we're the best ... I don't know. I think we're better than a lot of people anticipated."

Miami, which has won 33 straight regular-season games, is off this week and next plays Sept. 17 at ninth-ranked Michigan.

Miami was last ranked No. 1 during the regular season in late 1986. The last time the Hurricanes were top-rated so early in the season was

SAN DIEGO - Dennis Conner, almost as sure to win the America's Cup as death and taxes, issued a warning on Tuesday that is bound to be heard in any sport: "Until the race is over, it's never over."

He told a news conference on the day before the Cup races began that he was in a no-win situation against New Zealand's far-out yacht.

"If we win, it's because my boat was faster because you all (the media) have told me that," Conner said. "If we lose, ol' Dennis lost the America's Cup again."

Conner, in his fifth Cup series, is the only defending skipper to lose the 137-year-old trophy and the only challenger to win it back.

He is a prohibitive favorite to keep the Cup for the San Diego Yacht Club in the best-of-three series. His opponent, Kiwi skipper David Barnes, told the conference "something very unusual would have to happen" with the weather to give New Zealand's 133-foot monohull yacht a chance against Conner's catamaran, Stars & Stripes.

Although both yachts are at the cutting edge of technology, a monohull has as much chance against a catamaran as a grandstand against a race horse. Somewhat testily Conner told the media "there's never a sure thing in a sailboat race." Sails have ripped, equipment can break down. "You can go in the wrong direction. The other guy can outsmart you," he said.

"My attitude is I have to do everything in my power to sail the boat and take nothing for granted. The idea is to win. I never said I wanted to keep it close. There's no extra credit for that.

'There's a fine balance between winning a race and pressing your boat to ultimate speed at the risk of your equipment. David is a very good match racer, and I'm sure he has some tricks up his sleeve. I'll try to stay clear of him at the start."

Barnes didn't roll up his sleeve, saying only, "We have a pretty good idea of the strengths of our boat."

Among others those would possibly be a better ability to handle very light airs and a lumpy sea which could slow Conner's Stars & Stripes. The forecast was for onshore winds of 12-18 knots and northwesterlies at 10-15 knots farther out to sea on the 40-mile windwardleeward course.

Even Bruce Farr, whose Annapolis, Md., firm designed New Zealand, predicts his boat will lose by as much as an hour in any normal conditions.

Barnes said he was not sure of a final ruling on the sailing directions. New Zealand, which brought the series about by twice suing in court, is challenging a protest section which would allow a boat that commits a foul to absolve itself by making two circles. Thus a fouling boat could not lose a race in the protest room.

Playing second fiddle isn't something most people desire, but K-State 400-meter specialist Jeff Reynolds is finding it easy to cope with the role.

Reynolds, a senior who won two consecutive Big Eight Conference outdoor track titles and placed seventh at the NCAA meet last year, is definitely not second fiddle in the Big Eight.

But, because of the success his brother has had this year, Reynolds could say he is playing second fiddle in the family.

Reynold's older brother Butch, an Ohio State product, established himself as the best 400-meter runner in the world Aug. 17 when he broke Lee Evans' 20-year-old world record with a time of 43.29. Now Bob Beamon's world long jump mark of 29-foot-1/2 -inches is the only record that remains unbroken from the 1968, altitude-aided, Mexico City Olympics.

"My career is just getting off the ground, and Butch is just going to help me get better. Training with him this summer has helped me a lot and it develops into kind of a team concept. Each of us pushing the other to do better."

after running the fastest ever nonqualifying Olympic trials quartermile time at 44.98, which also broke his own K-State 400-meter record.

"I was somewhat disappointed that I didn't make the team, but I was trained with Butch for two weeks before the trials and that helped my confidence level."

Jeff also seemed to help Butch's confidence level as he was the one who coaxed the elder Reynolds into going for the world record last month at the Zurich (Switzerland) Weltklas-

"We were warming up before the race and I told him, 'Why don't you go ahead and try to break the world record, go wire to wire, from the starting gun to the finish line.' He said he didn't know if he could," Reynolds said. "But I told him to go ahead, that he could do it. Then, in the race, Innocent Egbunike, from Nigeria (started) so well and made my brother push harder and he was able to hold on."

Reynolds is not surprised by his brother's feats and thinks that, since he is nearly two years younger, eventually he will get his chance.

"I'll be there to help (Butch) every step of the way," Reynolds said. "I have no regrets about anything that Anyway, my time will come."

Reynolds' time could come during the 1992 Olympic Games, for which he is shooting.

"My career is just getting off the ground, and Butch is just going to help me get better," Reynolds said. "Training with him this summer has helped me a lot and it develops into kind of a team concept. Each of us pushing the other to do better."

The All-American from Arch Bishop High School in Akron, Ohio, could have a legitimate shot at making the next Olympic Games, K-State track and field coach John Capriotti said.

"I think his chances are good, provided he can find a situation where he is able to train and also live comfortably at the same time," Capriotti

"He has a lot of development to do physically, but the potential is definitely there. Last year was Jeff's first real season as far as competition is concerned and I know he can get a lot

Nebraska coach hates hearing Taylor's Heisman Trophy hype

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. knows it's inevitable. But Tom Osborne hates to hear the Steve Taylor vs. Troy Aikman Heisman Trophy hype boiling around Nebraska's nationally televised game at UCLA on Saturday.

'The Heisman Trophy is like the national championship," the Nebraska coach said Tuesday in the Big Eight's inaugural weekly teleconference of 1988. "It's something that just happens. You can't make it your objective or it gets in your way."

Taylor Nebraska's versatile senior quarterback, is frequently mentioned as a top Heisman prospect along with Aikman of UCLA, best known for his powerful passing arm. Some Husker fans may even worry that Heisman pressure could weigh Taylor down. "I hope not," Osborne said. "Hopefully, Steve will be out there to have Nebraska win, not to win the Heisman Trophy. We just want Steve to play well every week and see what happens." "The Heisman is certainly a great honor, but it's also a media event," he said. "There are 40 or 50 guys early in the season who are Heisman candidates, if you read all the ink. And the television announcers start talking about Heisman candidates in their games. It's almost gotten out of focus, particularly early in the season.

One game devoid of Heisman hype may be Kansas' season opener this week at home against Baylor. The Jayhawks are expected to finish at or near the bottom of the Big Eight in Glen Mason's first year as head coach and most Southwest Conference authorities figure Baylor for no better than sixth or so.

"We'll probably use more freshman against Baylor than any major college team in the country," Mason said. "Right now, we'll have seven freshmen starters. We've got 23 freshmen in our two-deep.'

Mason's Kent State team was one of those Kansas lost to last year in a miserable 1-9-1 campaign.

"Most coaches at this point start to push the panic button and want to practice 16 hours a day to shore things up," Mason said. "Our time to percent improved on that basis."

Oklahoma takes a battered-up and youthful team to North Carolina Saturday for Barry Switzer's 15th opener as head coach.

'We're not in the best shape we could be in," Switzer said. "I've got some starters out with injury so we're not at full strength. Among the casualties are the starting noseguard and the only experienced linebacker."

"My concern lies with the defensive team now because of injury and a lack of depth and experience," Switzer said.

Beginning his second year at Iowa State, coach Jim Walden says he feels better than he did 365 days ago.

"I feel this football team this minute is better prepared than we were after about six games a year ago," said Walden, who hosts Tulane Saturday. "Our knowledge of what we're doing, all the things you don't know or are scared about, are gone. We have what I would call a team at mid-season form. We're at least 50

Swim battles for starting job After watching Tuesday's practice, K-State football coach

Stan Parrish said the battle for the starting quarterback job has heated up again in the Wildcats' camp.

Parrish said backup Gary Swim was making at run at starter Carl Straw. In K-State's 35-9 loss to Tulsa, Straw completed 10-of-23 passes for 121 yards.

"I probably won"t make a decision until Thursday," Parrish said. "Gary practiced well tonight and is making a push."

Tyson to miss title defense

NEW YORK - Mike Tyson suffered a concussion and amnesia when his car struck a tree on Sunday, doctors said Tuesday, and Tyson's manager said that will keep the champion from fighting Frank Bruno in London on Oct. 22

Britton said it would be 30 to 60 days before the champion could resume training.

A broken bone in Tyson's right hand, suffered in a street fight two weeks ago, already had delayed the bout from Oct. 8 to Oct. 22. Cold weather, since the fight was scheduled outdoors at Wembley Stadium, precluded any further delay.

slaughter process

By Guy Peverley Collegian Reporter

Kansas already slaughters the most beef in the nation. Now, thanks to the research being conducted by some K-State professors and graduate students, Kansas may soon be processing the best beef, using a technique called "value-added."

The process of making valueadded beef involves taking lowvalue cuts of meat and further processing and fabricating them into better, more sellable products, said Jack Riley, head of the Department of Animal Sciences and Industry. Technically it's not an addition, but a better use of the product, he said.

An example of upgrading lowvalue cuts is when parts of a carcass that are normally used only for ground beef are restructured and reshaped to make a steak or roast, said Don Kropf, professor of animal sciences and industry.

Research projects on value-added meats have been conducted during the past five years by a number of professors in the animal sciences department, Kropf said.

One phase of the value-added program being conducted is research to produce a lower-salt processed meat with increased fiber.

The consumer wants a product that is low in sodium, fat and cholesterol, high in fiber, convenient and still wholesome with good taste, said Curtis Kastner, professor of animal science and industry. Researchers are able to provide this product by subdividing the meat and removing some of the connective tissue and

At one time, salt was the main binder to hold the meat together. Through research, the amount of salt used to bind has been reduced by the use of surimi. Surimi is a natural binder found within the animal, Kastner

The value-added process will help improve the nutritional image of meat by introducing a dietary fiber into the process, while keeping a relatively low-fat product, said Jim Claus, graduate student in food science and industry, and Brett Kenney, graduate student in animal science and industry. They are both doing research for the value-added program.

Both Unruh and Riley said the value-added process will soon have major emphasis in K-State's meat department. Now that the meats lab in Weber Hall is completed, more indepth research is possible.

The department's major goal is to help contribute information and research to the value-added program.

It will take a strong relationship between the University and industry to make value-added meat successful, said John Unruh, professor in animal sciences and industry. As money is given to the University, funds will become available for research to help create better products for the industry.

People want convenience, Riley said. With the value-added process, the product will be handled the best way possible to make the preparation stages for the consumer less time consuming.

If the consumer is willing to pay for the added convenience, then the producer will receive more for a better product, he said.

Furthermore, the value-added process will be a good merchandising tool, said Dave Schafer, professor of animal sciences and industry. It will help reduce the number of pounds of meat that have to be shipped, while improving the handling process.

Ultimately, the value-added meat will create more jobs within the state because most of the meat processing will be accomplished in Kansas, Riley said.

Currently, Kansas sells boxes of low-value cuts of meat to other states, where it is further processed and sold, instead of processing them into conveniently cut meats within the state, Kropf said.

Value-added techniques will allow the processing and sale of more consumer-ready products locally,

Indian tribe battles Kansas for 11 acres

By The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY - Attorneys for the Shawnee Indian Tribe argued Tuesday that 11 acres of land in eastern Kansas containing the Shawnee Mission Historical Museum should be declared tribal

The land, located in a suburb of Kansas City, Mo., was merely held in trust by the federal government for the tribe's benefit and should not have ended up as property of the state of Kansas, the attorneys argued before the U.S. 10th Circuit Court of Appeals.

An 1854 treaty ceded 1.6 million acres of tribal lands in Kansas to the federal government for $829,000, but permitted the tribe to retain ownership of 200,000 acres, of which the disputed parcel is a part.

The tribe's lawsuit said that President Andrew Johnson granted an allegedly conflicting ownership patent on the 11 acres to the Rev. Thomas Johnson, an Episcopal-Methodist minister who ran the Shawnee Mission Manual School for Indian Children.

However, when President Johnson granted the patent to Johnson in April 1865, the minister had been dead for three months. He was shot to death at the front door of his home in January of that year.

"A patent to a dead man is void," Shawnee attorney Keith Wilson Jr. told Judge Monroe

Tribal attorney Alvin Shapiro argued that the federal government was merely acting as a trustee of the land on behalf of the tribe and never reclaimed title.

However, Kansas Attorney General Robert Stephan maintained the federal government had reclaimed ownership of the land at the request of the tribe and that Shawnee tribal leaders had specifically wanted the land to go to the churchman.

"The entire history of the case suggests it was the (government's) intent to transfer the property" to Thomas Johnson, Stephan said.

A judge ruled against the Shawnee claim in 1986 and the tribe appealed.

accreditation

By Amy Rosebrough Collegian Reporter

Despite the lack of accreditation for the School of Journalism, some faculty members expect graduates to be equal when competing for jobs with students from accredited schools.

Carol Oukrop, head of the School of Journalism and Mass Communications, said the loss of accreditation should not affect graduating students. For the students seeking jobs, it has been what she calls "a typical year."

Paul Parsons, professor in journalism and mass communications, said he wants to emphasize that the denial of the school's accreditation will not affect the students when they hit the job market.

"This is something we want to regain to show our students that we want to meet all national standards," Parsons said.

The School of Journalism and Mass Communications is preparing a facu will be a cording and docuard regaining its accreditation lost in May of 1987. This report - a 13-section, 450-page document — is a selfstudy of the school.

Harry Marsh, professor in journalism and mass communications, has helped with four accreditation reports during his teaching career. He said the school currently has an advantage because it has recently been through the process.

"Our materials are up-to-date, and we have been conscious of the revisit (of the accreditation council)."

Oukrop and Robert Bontrager, associate professor of journalism and mass communications, will be supervising the pre-accreditation report. Oukrop said all of the school's faculty members will be working in a team effort to produce information for the pre-accreditation report.

This is a self-study year, Oukrop aid, and the first step is for the faculty and several student representatives to do a self-study. The students and pre-examination report as a step tow- menting their information which will be compiled next summer, she said.

> The report will be read by members of the accreditation council, whose national headquarters is located at the University of Kansas, Oukrop said.

A team from the council is expected to make a site visit to the school between August of 1989 and March of 1990. A final decision on the reinstating of the school's credentials will be made in April or May of 1990, Oukrop said.

About 300 schools and universities offer a journalism option, but only 90 are accredited, said Suzanne Shaw, executive director of the accrediting council.

Two major reasons prompted the loss of the school's accreditation, Oukrop said. The first was curriculum compliance by students.

Previously, students were allowed 84 to 90 hours outside their major and 30 to 36 hours within. The council members considered this to be below standard.

Students are now required to complete a minimum of 90 hours outside their major and 30 hours in their major, Parsons said. These requirements are also enforced more stringently.

The second problem was inadequ-

Despite an overall funding increase of more than 80 percent since the loss, Oukrop said this problem still exists.

Fifty percent of the increase has been received through the College of Arts and Sciences. This money now serves as a funding base for the School of Journalism and Mass Communications.

Oukrop said the loss of the school's credentials means the school is not eligible for certain scholarship programs.

Technician files civil rights suit

By Erwin Seba Senior Staff Writer

Lois Morales, medical technician, filed a civil rights suit Friday in the U.S. District Court in Topeka seeking her reinstatement to the position of microbiologist at K-State.

Morales alleges her termination from employment as a microbiologist was in retaliation for sexual harrassment complaints she made about a fellow employee and thus was a violation of her civil rights.

Also named as defendants in the suit are the Kansas Board of Regents and President Jon Wefald.

Stanley Z. Koplik, executive director for the Board of Regents, referred all questions to Regents General Counsel Ted Ayres. Ayres was unavailable for comment.

Richard Metcalf, Morales' attorney, was out of the state and could not be reached, according to his office.

Morales was dismissed from employment as a microbiologist July 17, 1987, and asks U.S. District Judge Richard D. Rogers to order her reinstatement and payment of salary and benefits commensurate with that position from the time of her dismissal.

The Kansas Civil Service Board ordered on Nov. 17, 1987, that Morales' dismissal be modified to a "did not find the ... unsatisfactory demotion so Morales could accept an evaluations were the result of retaliaopen position as a medical Morales should be offered the opportunity to become a medical technician, the board order said, because of her long-term, satisfactory service prior to becoming a microbiologist.

According to a complaint filed March 3, 1986, with the Kansas Commission on Civil Rights, the fellow employee subjected Morales "to extreme verbal and physical sexual harrassment, including solicitations, from 1979" until K-State adopted a policy against sexual harrassment in 1981.

In the complaint, Morales states verbal harrassment by the co-worker continued from 1981 until Dec. 19,

Roger Lovett, chief legal counsel for the civil rights commission, said the complaint "... was investigated according to statute."

Lovett said release of the results of commission investigations was barred by Kansas Supreme Court decision

The Civil Service Board found the dismissal was due to two consecutive unsatisfactory evaluations which Morales received in a 180-day period prior to her termination of employment.

In its order modifying Morales' dismissal, the Civil Service Board ■ See SUIT. Page 12

80th Landon Lecture today

Tuchman 'storyteller'

By Kendra Gensemer Collegian Reporter

Historian Barbara Tuchman, whose controversial writing career has drawn cheers and jeers from colleagues and critics, will deliver the 80th Landon Lecture at 10:30 a.m. today in McCain Auditorium. The topic of her public address will be "Where Are the Progressive Republicans?"

Tuchman won Pulitzer prizes for "The Guns of August" in 1963 and for "Stilwell and the American Experience in China" in 1971.

"She is the foremost historian in the country," said Charles Reagan, chairman of the Landon Lecture Series on Public Issues.

Historians are divided in their opinions of Tuchman's work.

Tuchman's supporters think her grand and narrative books have done an outstanding job of attracting large audiences to the study and enjoyment of history, said John Daly, professor

"She gets people reading history who would usually go running the other direction," Daly said.

Sue Zschoche, professor of history, said Tuchman's critics charge her with explaining history "in a popular rather than professional manner. She's not a professional historian in the Ph.D. sense, but all her work is thoroughly researched and based on archival material."

Daly explained that the current trend with American historians is specialization. Tuchman writes in a more European mode by writing on diverse fields and taking a broad view of history as well as a narrow view," Daly said.

He said the controversy over Tuchman's writing is just profes-

"I'm a natural story teller. That's the way I want to write."
And that's what fall-time author and 80th Landon Lectures Barbara Tuchman does. Her books about history are more like stories that grandpa told.

"I was very conscious of the reader, wanting to keep a reader interested in what was going on. It seemed to me that was the way to do it — to keep action going on every page and having it develop toward a climax." Tuchman said.

more absorbing to try a new thing each time rather than just going back over the same old stuff."

Tuchman gained much of her writing experience when she worked for the Office of War tins to Europe during World War L. Her best training didn't come from writing those bulletins, but rather from magazine writing, she

"I worked for awhile for to write short paragraphs about the news of the week. We had to condense the subject into 300 words and get it done on time. So I

She has been president of both the Society of American Historians and of the American Academy/Institute of Arts and Letters, which presented her with its gold medal for history in An authority on World War I, much of Tuchman's writing comes from personal experience. Her first experience with World War I was in early August 1914. She and her family witnessed an exchange between the British warship Glouchester and two German naval vessels while sailing to visit her grandfather, then the American Ambassador to Turkey. She later devoted a chapter in "The Guns of August" to this first experience. Other books she has written include "Notes form China," "A Distant Mirror," "Practicing History," and "The March of Folley."

The Landon Lectures bring to K-State the nation's leaders in public affairs to discuss issues they feel are vital to the welfare of the country. The series honors the late Alfred M. Landon, former governor of Kansas and the Republican Party's 1936 nominee for President of the United States.

According to University policy, K-State faculty have the option to cancel classes during a Landon Lecture to allow students to participate.

Non-discrimination policy considered

By Susan L'Ecuyer Senior Staff Writer

As early as the end of this year, K-State may become one of the first universities in the nation to have an official policy condemning discrimination on college campuses.

Working drafts of the policy are being considered by members of Faculty Senate, the Classified Affairs Committee and Student Senate. It is an anti-racial harrassment policy, Provost James Coffman said.

"The intent (of formulating the policy) is to raise everybody's level of consciousness," he said. "We just felt like it was a step that had to be taken at this time."

The policy has two purposes, Coffman said. One is to increase the number of ethnic minorities and to contribute to a community atmosphere more attractive to minorities. The second is to decrease attitudes of discrimination against minorities.

"I don't know if it will help with recruitment, but it will certainly help with retention," Coffman said.

Charles Rankin, professor of administration and foundations of education, is chairman of the committee that formulated the working draft of the policy. Traditionally, he said, the hardest thing in such a task is obtaining a commitment in writing as an official policy from the administration of an institution.

Rankin said that in researching and preparing the policy, the committee surveyed all the major universities in the United States to see what they offered in way of such a policy. "There were no policies none - at K-State or anywhere,"

K-State volunteered for the task.

"It is very important to realize that under the leadership of Provost Coffman and President (Jon) Wefald, K-State is coming to grips with things that have been ignored and overlooked in the past," Rankin said. "The most crucial thing about this is keeping it out in front."

The most important thing about the policy is that it "has teeth" and provides a course of action, Rankin said.

"Sanctions could range from admonishment to dismissal," said Jane Rowlett, director of Affirmative Action.

President Wefald has final approval of the policy. If the final draft is approved, the policy will be included in the faculty handbook and in the student handbook and will apply to everyone involved with K-State.

Charlene Shropshire, a secretary in the Office of Student Financial Assistance and a member of the committee, said the proposed policy is long overdue and "very, very necessary." She said she is encouraged that the committee has considered the concerns of classified employees. "They leave us out quite a bit (when considering policy)," she

She said she believes the policy will give classified employees courage and direction in addressing incidents of racial harrassment.

"They (minority classified employees) are saying that there isn't really anywhere on campus where (they) can go, and that there are no minorities in Affirmative Action," Shropshire said. "They're saying 'I don't think they'll understand where I'm

Drug abuse fight continues

WASHINGTON - The House began Congress' latest assault on illegal narcotics Wednesday, taking up a 375-page bill that would spend some $2 billion for every conceivable method of fighting drug abuse.

The House will likely labor through next week on the work product of 11 committees, which might undergo major surgery from more than three dozen amendments. Some proposed changes will provide the most controversial moments of debate.

After a day devoted to debate and explanations of the bill's provisions, the House postponed votes on amendments until today.

Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, has labeled the bill "bipartisan," a strategy that will allow incumbents of both parties to claim credit for the politically popular legislation during their re-election campaigns. But the tactic also guarantees votes on Republican-inspired amendments that would allow the federal death penalty for drug-related killings, deny federal benefits to convicted drug users and admit some illegally seized evidence in court.

The House took up the bill on Congress' first day back from a month-long recess.

Other issues that lawmakers must settle before they quit next month to campaign for re-election are spending levels for the Star Wars anti-missile program, arms control issues, a major overhaul of the welfare system, competing proposals on child care and aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Star Wars may be simplified

NEW YORK - The cost of the "Star Wars" program can be reduced without abandoning the Reagan administration's goal of deploying the anti-missile system in the late 1990s, the head of the project said in a published interview.

Lt. Gen. James A. Abrahamson has prepared a proposal to simplify the design of the weapons that would be deployed in space under the program, known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, The New York Times reported in today's editions.

Abrahamson told the newspaper this would cut tens of billions of dollars from the program's cost without altering the goal of deploying weapons in space.

"We're not trying to restructure the program," he said. Abrahamson is to present the proposal, developed over the last several months on orders of Defense Secretary Frank C. Carlucci, to top Pentagon officials in about two weeks.

Competitiveness questioned

WASHINGTON — The belief that America's economic standing in the world will be rescued by emerging hightechnology industries was questioned Wednesday by a prestigious study group which said the country is fast losing its dominance in many of these fields.

The Council on Competitiveness, contending that the country has been far too complacent in the face of growing foreign competition, recommended a major effort on the part of government, industry and schools to reverse the trend.

"We cannot afford any further erosion in our oncecommanding technological lead," said the report of the council, comprised of 151 top officers of industry, labor and higher education. "Because technology is a driving force behind productivity improvements, export strength and a high standard of living, the stakes are enormous," it said.

In releasing the report, John Young, chairman of the council and president of Hewlett-Packard Co., said he wanted to challenge the comforting illusion that high-technology industries would provide the "economic panacea we all need" to offset job losses in traditional smokestack industries.

Fire causes evacuation

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. - Windblown embers from a 165,000-acre forest fire ignited rooftops Wednesday inside the Old Faithful Geyser complex of Yellowstone National Park, after hundreds of tourists evacuated the area.

At least four buildings were destroyed as the big North Fork moved into the outskirts of the complex Wednesday afternoon when winds shifted, creating a wall of flame that forced 40 firefighters to retreat from the lines.

"When that firestorm went through there, we had to move our people out of there," said Denny Bungarz, fire incident commander. "When you can feel the heat inside your car, it's time to move."

Two old cabins, a shack, and a utility shed in the center of the complex were destroyed by the ember-sparked fires as crews on 25 fire engines worke to save other buildings, offi-

Quayle visit to Kansas set

TOPEKA - Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle will spend next Thursday night in Kansas during a trip to the state for campaign appearances in Wichita and Overland Park.

Pete McGill of Topeka, a co-chairman of Republican George Bush's presidential campaign in Kansas, said Quayle is scheduled to arrive in Wichita in late afternoon next Thursday, Sept. 15, and will hold a rally at Mid-Continent Airport about 4 p.m.

After the rally, Quayle will attend a Victory '88 fundraiser reception for GOP contributors at a location yet to be determined in the Wichita airport area. Victory '88 is the fundraising arm of the Bush-Quayle campaign.

Following the reception, Quayle and his wife Marilyn, who will accompany him to Kansas, will fly to Kansas City and spend the night in the Marriott Hotel in Overland Park.

John Petersen of Overland Park, another co-chairman of the Bush-Quayle campaign in Kansas, said Quayle would appear at an early-morning Victory '88 fundraising reception at the Marriott, then speak at a joint meeting of the chambers of commerce of several Johnson County municipalities.

K-State students and faculty who are unhappy after receiving a campus parking violation have a second chance.

To contest parking citations, drivers must fill out an appeal form obtained from the KSU Police Department. They must state why their ticket should be voided and must include any special circumstances of their cases.

The ticket may be voided if their argument is legitimate and is approved by the Parking Citation Appeals board.

When filing an appeal, applicants should be brief and give reasons relevant to their particular violation, said Lloyd Johnson, chairman of the Parking Citation Appeals Board. "They should write clearly, and stick to the facts. Threats get old," he said. Drivers also should know the even consider it," he said.

Many violators appeal to try to avoid paying the fines, but fighting a citation is a long battle, Johnson said. "People bring (violations) on themselves," said Lt. Robert Mellgren, operations officer with the campus police. Most people just don't read the

"I've seen some pretty weak excuses, like oversleeping, or being late to class, on tickets where cars were left in the middle of the street," Mellgren said.

During the 1987-88 school year, 604 appeals were granted to students and 1,079 appeals were denied. Faculty members were granted 30 appeals and had 167 denied, said Annette Boddy, secretary in charge of parking for the campus police.

Board determines appeals | Police expect fewer citations; rules favor commuting students

By Audra Dietz Staff Writer

Campus police predict fewer parking citations will be issued this semester because of changes in the campus parking regulations, said Lt. Robert Mellgren, operations officer for K-State Police.

The 1988 parking regulations don't require students or faculty to have a permit to park on campus after 5 p.m. The 1987 rules stated only students and faculty with permits were allowed to park on campus after 4

This will help reduce illegal parking among students who commute to campus and take night classes, Mellgren said.

"It's definitely to their advantage," he said.

This open parking policy is only for zones designated as "general" parking areas. Restrictions will still be enforced for reserved stalls and tow-zone areas, Mellgren said.

Records show that the open parking policy has not stopped drivers and 7,758 citations were issued to from parking illegally, said Annette Boddy, secretary in charge of parking for the campus police.

On Wednesday, the campus police issued 349 tickets. There were 209 cars parked without valid permits, 104 cars parked in the wrong area, 18 cars in no parking zones, and 17 cars were issued tickets for overtime parking, blocking driveways, and parking in fire lanes.

"This was the highest ticket-giving day we've had."

"This was the highest ticketgiving day we've had," Boddy said. Between July 1, 1987, and June 30, 1988, campus police issued 28,500 parking citations. Of these, 5,360 were given to students and faculty who didn't have valid permits people who had permits but were parked in the wrong areas.

The remainder of the tickets were issued for miscellaneous violations such as parking in reserved stalls and blocking traffic, Mellgren said.

Illegal parking can result in a fine of $8 to $25, but getting violators to pay these fines is another problem. Boddy said. There's still $22,349 in unpaid mis-use fees for 1987-88 violations, she said. Faculty members still owe $3,177 and students have $19,172 worth of unpaid fines, she Mellgren said he likes the new parking policy and sympathizes with people about the shortage of parking space. However, people who break the law will be ticketed, new regulations or not, he said.

"It's a necessary evil," he said. Excessive violators, those with more than one ticket, can also be wheel-locked and towed, Mellgren said. Last year, campus police towed 135 vehicles.

KU to build new campus

By The Associated Press

OVERLAND PARK - The University of Kansas will build a $5 million extension campus in south Overland Park if the city meets certain conditions, Chancellor Gene Budig

In a letter to Overland Park Mayor Ed Eilert, Budig said KU will build the new Regents Center if the city will widen two streets to four lanes around the center, provide water and sewer service, and build streets along the site's north and west sides.

Budig also asked the city to waive all property taxes and special levies against the property, which was donated by a group of KU alumni represented by Larry Winn III, a Johnson County lawyer.

Eilert said Tuesday the Overland

Park City Council probably would meet in a special session Thursday to review Budig's proposal. He said he expected no opposition to the conditions.

A university search committee selected the 40-acre parcel after reviewing more than 20 sites in Johnson County, said Bob Senecal, the dean of continuing education at KU and a member of the site selection committee.

The center, which should be completed within three years, will replace another Regents Center in Overland Park, which has operated since 1975 in a former elementary school building. It serves about 3,900 students a year, during the spring, summer and fall semesters.

KU officials decided last year that the center was too small and that the school needed to increase its presence in the Kansas City area.

The new center will offer graduate education courses, research opportunities and collaborative courses with other schools, officials say. They say enrollment could double in three to five years in the new center.

Lectures could be more than mere media ritual

K-State can be proud of the Landon Lecture Series on Public Issues. It is one of the nation's most prestigous lecture series. Unless care is taken, however, the lecture series could turn into mere display and ceremony instead of the lofty intellectual exercise it was intended to be.

The lecture series is too often a ritualized public relations event. Campus notables jockey to rub elbows with The Big Name, something purple is given and everyone is grateful to everyone else. Those with money to donate get the good seats, the rest get the balcony.

Somewhere in the glamour and hype, the democratic ideal of a robust exchange of ideas through free speech lost out. While it is nice to be honored by Big Names, K-State and the memory of Alf Landon deserve better.

There is a pervasive attitude that the audience is there to see Big Names rather than to evaluate critically what they have to say. Too often K-State unreflectively pays homage to establishment figures and their policies. Too often we fall for safe slogans and cheap applause lines. Too often speakers are measured by their power rather than by the quality of their message.

Despite some provocative exceptions, the vast majority of Landon Lecturers are conservative white males. Speakers who might challenge the established order are relegated to the Lou Douglas and Convocation series.

Ouestion and answer periods are token. Critical questioners are considered an embarrassment. Protesters (heaven forbid!) are considered rude anomalies.

Interaction between speaker and audience should be encouraged. Additional sessions should be scheduled for follow-up questions and feedback. Critical responses to lecturers should be encouraged through post-lecture forums.

A greater diversity of speakers is needed. Oscar Arias Sanchez was great, but what happened to Daniel Ortega?

The burden is on the listeners to demand more from the speakers. Landon lecturers are not doing K-State a favor. We are doing them a favor by granting them a noteworthy platform. They owe us coherent, well-reasoned arguments about matters of public interest, not glib praise of K-State and Alf Landon.

Finally, the lecture series should not only tolerate dissenting viewpoints, but encourage them. As citizens in a democratic society, we owe it to ourselves to let speakers know when we approve or disapprove of what they have to say. Freedom of speech requires the robust exchange of ideas, not the robust exchange of ritual.

The University of Nebraska at Lincoln is an institution with more than 23,000 students. But only rarely do heavy hitters from the national or international arena come to Lincoln to speak on its campus.

K-State is a campus with some 17,000 students. The list of speakers at Manhattan for its university-sponsored Landon Lecture series last year included Oscar Arias Sanchez, president of Costa Rica; Justice Sandra Day O'Connor; and Speaker of the House Jim Wright.

In the last few years, K-Staters have heard lectures from Tom Brokow, George Bush, George Schultz, Tom Bradley and Jose Napolean

Three of the last four U.S. presidents journeyed to Manhattan to on a modest budget subsidized by student fees, but the speaker series at K-State is generously funded. The program was inaugurated 20 years ago in honor of Alfred M.

Landon. With outside support from contributing patrons, it has grown into one of the most prestigious lecture series at American colleges and universities.

When Nobel Peace Prize winner Arias came to this country he spoke at two colleges: K-State and Harvard.

The Landon Lecture series is funded by patrons who contribute $100 a year. In return they receive a special reserved seat, a ticket to a luncheon on the campus where the lecturer makes additional remarks, and a printed copy of the lecture.

There are currently about 500 patrons.

The result of all this for K-State students is a broadened awareness of public issues; an opportunity to see, hear and measure the shakers and movers in public events; and a rich encounter with social, political and cultural diversity.

Isn't that what a university is all about?

Elvis is everywhere Someone's making lots of money

s anyone else sick of Elvis yet? I don't mean to be un-American, but I'm just kind of tired of

This man (demi-god?) follows me everywhere. I go to the supermarket, and there's Elvis smiling at me from the magazine rack. And it's not just one picture of Elvis on just one magazine - he's everywhere.

He appears on the cover of a slick glossy magazine, just as he looked 25 years ago slim, trim, and fully encased in tight black leather, or on another cover as he looked later with sideburns down to his chin and an aging body covered by an elaborate cape. Then Priscilla, Lisa Marie or his illegitimate daughter, son or dog tells how you can lose weight and feel great the Elvis way.

If I turn around to get away from him, there he is on the other magazine rack. This time his distorted image peers out from the cover of a dog-eared copy of a smut tabloid. There, he gives an exclusive story about the secrets of the aliens that abducted him, faked his death and taught him how to fight his drug problems and find the meaning of life. Only another tabloid away he appears yet again, this time as an artist's reconstruction of an aged Elvis as he was supposedly seen in a Burger King in North Dakota, Michigan or Montana, where he often resides to avoid publicity.

I can leave the store. But I can't leave

As I walk to my car in the parking lot I see three different "Elvis Lives!" bumper stickers. Then, once I get to my car, I turn on the radio station to hear a talk show about a man who claims to be a psychic who can work with the spirit of Elvis to cure all bodily harms. I guess the psychic would assume he

Collegian

Columnist

is dead, then. OK. So I can turn off the radio. I can go home where I am safe from this Elvis propaganda. I enter the house and my roommate introduces me to her new pet fish. His name is

"Why Elvis?" I ask.

"Elvis is everywhere, so I thought he might as well be here, too," she says.

Great. So I retreat to my room, taking along some intellectual reading material the funnies. But who should appear in Bloom County this week? Elvis. And who is on the cruise ship in Doonesbury? Elvis. When he starts infesting the funnies, you know this joke has gone too far.

ust who is this dead man who has inspired such a wave of publicity? I would imagine that many living rock singers would kill for the publicity his corpse is getting — and he hasn't even sung in more than 11 years!

Why does a rotting skeleton in a $7,000 copper coffin deserve all of this press? Elvis fans tell me, "He's the King."

Supposedly, he's had a bigger influence on music than any other artist in this century.

AND TO THE REPUBLIC

That's debatable. Who am I to say? But regardless, many people still think of the dead singer as a deceased member of royalty.

Thus they continue to worship his grave like a religious shrine. Thousands of people make the pilgrimage across the United States to see the floors he walked on, the clothes he wore, and buy lots of promotional Elvis goodies to take home from Graceland so they can remember him.

he day after he died, 20 million of his records were sold, and that was only the beginning. Books were written, movies were filmed, and talk shows analyzed his life and death.

This whole thing has the smell of a publicity hoax thought up by some shrewd publicity person who wanted the Elvis thing to last and last, so that more and more people would buy more and more souvenirs, records and memorabilia. Someone is getting rich off of this man's death by keeping him alive.

What could be more clever than trying to convince the public that Elvis is alive and well? That way his old image would stay in front of the public, not his actual, less than attractive, possibly overweight and aging image. Even better, if Elvis was still alive, he could die again, triggering another rush of demand for records and memorabilia, as well as numerous talk shows, magazines and book

Is Elvis really alive? Sorry, Elvis fans, but I doubt it. But if you feel differently, feel free to write in and let me know if he's alive, where he's at, and what he's doing there. Maybe we'll even print the results. After all, the "King" can never have too much publicity.

Support a luxury

Editor,

This might come as a shock to Dave Svoboda, but not everyone at K-State is here because of the sports programs.

Now don't get me wrong - I enjoy a good football game. I support the K-State football program. I wish them the best of luck for the season.

But when the subject of money comes to the line, that's a different tale. True, people should attend games. True, K-State would be happy to see the support. True, K-State would be happy to see the money.

But no one - fan or not - should be cursed for not attending a game. And no one should be cursed for not making a donation to athletics at K-State. When someone donates money to K-State, it is a gift. A gift of love and/or friendship. They ask for nothing in return. We should spend our time thanking those people who gave what they could rather than cursing those who don't give.

And we should also spend our time working harder to improve ourselves with what we have. Then we just might find ourselves in a better situation.

And if you ask Lon Kruger if this might be similar to his philosophy, he'd probably say

This philosophy works. Treat donations as a luxury and hard work as a necessity. This philosophy will work for any program at K-State — athletics, activities or academics.

And as for the so-called boycott of home games, I really don't think K-State wants support from those selfish individuals, anyway.

And I think this was what Dave Svoboda was trying to say.

Thanks, Schmeller

We, a representative sample of the Collegian-reading populace, would like to submit a positive report in the face of its overwhelming and superfluous propaganda. Examples of such deteriorating "journalism" include Tuesday's article "Music Saves Ducks" and are reaffirmed by that bastion of hilarity, "Salad," which takes up right where last year's "Rubes" left off.

However, with the onset of an editorial renaissance piloted by such columnists as Mark Schmeller we can see the outlook on today's real issues goes a long way toward offsetting the normal fare of hackneyed hijinks.

In an age of muckraking and half-baked columnists, Schmeller's sobering and caustic wit is hopefully indicative of future editorials.

Protests called for in Burma: mobs loot offices, warehouses

By The Associated Press

RANGOON, Burma - Mobs plundered government offices and warehouses Wednesday, and state radio said security forces shot five looters. Diplomats said chaos was near and prepared to evacuate their families.

Opposition leaders called for a nationwide general strike against 26 years of repressive one-party rule on Thursday. Leaders hoped for the largest of the many mass protests that have driven two governments from office in less than two months.

Looters ranged through the capital, and one Western diplomat said: "The streets are deserted. People are pretty much in fear of their property. Things have pretty much closed down. There is a widespread perception that things have deteriorated."

The diplomat said the looting is "an act of desperation" by poor people who need food and other supplies in a city paralyzed by strikes and

State-run Rangoon Radio reported looting in 38 areas of the capital Tuesday and Wednesday. It said security forces shot and killed five people, wounded six and arrested 88 looters.

The radio urged people to report looters to police and said more than $43 million in state property had been plundered since the beginning of August.

An earlier broadcast said security forces would "open fire to impose control" if looting continued, but the order would not apply to peaceful anti-government demonstrations.

Republican George Bush criticized Democrat Michael Dukakis before a Jewish group Wednesday as having "trouble making up his mind" on whether to support or oppose creation of a Palestinian state. Dukakis told a college audience the vice president was "right there - all the time" when the administration cut grants and loans for students.

Bush and Dukakis were speaking to a B'nai B'rith convention in Baltimore.

The vice president was the first to address the Jewish group and he underscored the closeness of U.S.-Israel relations.

"No threat, no stone thrown, is strong enough to divide us. No wedge will be driven between us," he pledged.

Bush declared his opposition to creation of an independent Palestinian state in the Middle East and criticized Dukakis, although he didn't mention him by name.

"My administration would not support the creation of any Palestinian entity that would jeopardize the security of our strategic ally, Israel," he said.

"Anyone who has trouble making up his mind on this issue, or who proposes to leave it open, just doesn't understand the dangers to Israel and to the United States; just doesn't understand the very real threats that continue to exist," added Bush.

AIDS panel targets new faculty, staff

By Scott Berg Collegian Reporter

Continuing to educate the faculty, staff and students of the dangers of unsafe sex is one goal of the Committee on Communicable Diseases for the 1988-89

Advising those same groups on how to avoid catching the acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) virus is another main goal of the committee, which was formed two years ago, said Don Seedle, chairman of the committee and assistant professor of laboratory medicine.

The committee plans to target its information to new faculty and staff along with the 16 percent of the staff who, because of time constraints, did not go through the University's AIDS awareness program last year. The program includes a booklet on AIDS that every staff member recieves upon being hired.

Student education will include lectures on the AIDS virus in small classes such as Concepts of Physical Education.

"Everybody takes Concepts (of PE), and it would be a good class to have it discussed, if it's feasible," Seedle said.

Self-help material and brochures will be available in the Union, Lafene Student Health Center and other places on campus. The committee also plans to train students to conduct small group information sessions with other students on the AIDS problem, he said.

Additional topics the committee plans to address this semester include how to deal with personal AIDS concerns and safe sex practices in relationships, Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV) testing and counseling in the Manhattan community, and support groups for HIV positive individuals, their families and friends,

The committee also hopes to provide a more locally relevant picture on AIDS by using graphs, statistics and data that is reflective of the Manhattan area, Seedle

To ensure privacy, the names of victims will not be used in the material from the local area, he Seedle said the group wants to maintain and further the public's information awareness on AIDS through media spots, feature news releases, pamphlets and other resources on the subject.

It will also maintain an evaluation process of materials so materials that may misrepresent the facts or provide unfounded conclusions concerning AIDS can be screened out.

Roberts blasts consumer groups

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., came to the defense of farm export subsidies on Wednesday, criticizing several consumer groups that have called for the government to stop subsidizing sales of

Roberts, in remarks prepared for a speech on the House floor, complained that the groups were "disseminating misinformation in an effort to lower farm commodity prices."

"These groups are continuing efforts to place this nation's food and fiber producers in the role of a public utility to be manipulated to suit their own political agendas," Roberts said.

His criticism was directed at the Consumers Union, Community Nutrition Institute and the Consumer Federation of America, which last week asked the Agriculture Department to stop subsidized sales of wheat under the Export Enhancement Program. The groups contend that continued export sales could jeopardize domestic reserves of wheat and push food prices higher in 1989 than now projected because of the current drought gripping the Farm Belt.

USDA has maintained that there is adequate grain supplies to meet domestic and foreign demands until next year's harvest. Roberts agreed and pointed out that reduced grain stockpiles were a primary goal of the 1985 farm law.

He said the consumer groups are "using the farm drought disaster to frighten consumers into believing that farmers receiving higher market prices at the country elevator will be responsible for skyrocketing prices or food shortages before year's end." A member of the House Agriculture Committee, Roberts represents a western Kansas district with prime wheat-growing areas.

In an interview, Roberts expressed concern that the consumer complaints were the "first signs" of a possible renewed debate over the direction of agricultural policy - just at the time that farmers are beginning to recover from an economic depression with grain surpluses and low

Roberts said he worried that farmers could end up as losers in such a debate, particularly if food prices increase much because of the drought.

Rising food prices, Roberts warned, could spark a "prairie fire of policy interference" in farm

He applauded the government's aggressive farm export efforts, and urged his colleagues not to allow "shortsightedness to falsely generate consumer fear that could torpedo a recovering agriculture economy."

Department head's 'mission' is quality

By The Collegian Staff

Promoting quality in the Department of Forestry will be a top priority for the new department head, who assumed the position Sept. 1.

"My main mission is to promote quality," and to maintain importance in course and curricular development, said Thomas Warner, head of the Department of Forestry.

Warner spoke about his future plans and goals for the department Wednesday night to about 30 students and faculty.

"I'm excited to be back, and I've got an excellent team to work with,' Warner said.

He was an assistant and associate professor of forestry at K-State from 1977 to 1983. Since then he has headed the Department of Horticulture, Forestry, Landscape and Parks at South Dakota State University. Warner said he is a firm believer in faculty review of all materials presented to classes, making sure it is up to date. Faculty should communicate with outside employers in the field to better prepare the students in this line of work, he said.

"I don't want a department that is going to generate a whole lot of numbers by just taking the student's money and sending them on their way," he said. An open-door policy

K-Staters use their college experience to begin businesses

Owning a business at a young age can be a risky move. But that risk was worth taking for former K-State students James Schlickau, 24; Charlie Bell, 23; and Ward Morgan, 24.

All three students have either graduated from K-State and will continue with another degree, or will graduate upon completion of a few credit hours.

Schlickau graduated with a degree in animal sciences and industry in December 1986. Bell left school in the spring. He needs about 20 hours to graduate in computer engineering technology. Morgan attended K-State 2½ years ago, before deciding to pursue his business ambitions.

Morgan bought Brother's Tavern in January with partners Steve Covert and Wayne Bogart.

Morgan owns 90 percent of the tavern.

"I knew it was risky with the new drinking laws and everything when I bought into Brother's, but I've always worked for someone else, so I just wanted to be my own boss," Morgan said.

"It's a good way to learn about the business aspects, have fun, and make money," he said. Morgan said his youth has been an asset in building Brother's into a night spot college students want to frequent. Remodeling the bar and adding an extension are changes Morgan said he wanted to tackle to create an enjoyable atmosphere.

"The guy who owned Brother's before us was out of touch with what the people wanted," Morgan said. "We decided to make it look more fun for people. It helped me being a customer before, so that when I took over, I could really relate to the people."

Schlickau, owner of Charlie's Neighborhood Bar, agreed with Morgan that his age keeps him in touch with his customers.

"They see me having a good time, and they don't see me as an owner. Instead, I'm like one of the guys," Schlickau said.

Being a young, ambitious owner for a business can, on the other hand, be risky, said Bell, co-owner of The Sound Shop.

Bell and his partner, Gregg Harris, wanted a younger, more modern look to their shop. To save time and money, they chose to do all the remodeling themselves. They brought in new carpeting, painted the walls and installed lights to add color and make the store look more appealing.

"We wanted to bring the place out of the Dark Ages," Bell said.

The store was not very energy efficient before Harris and Bell took over. They fixed the electrical wiring and tore down walls to add insulation.

"The back (repair and installation) room had a heater that used to run all day in the winter," Bell said. "Now it will only need to run a couple of hours"

With all the changes to the shop, Harris and Bell said they hope to increase profits and gain a strong reputation with the public.

"I think it is tougher when you're younger to build a reputation and get respect from the older crowd," Bell said. "You must know what you're talking about and have an atmosphere in the store to sell quality equipment."

Financing the businesses was not easy. Loans are not given to just everyone, especially when the applicant is younger than 25, the owners discovered. But their good credit history allowed them to buy their stores.

Small home-town banks and personal funding were the major contributors to the investments Harris and Bell made. Schlickau put up the cattle he owned as collateral.

Morgan bought 30 percent of Brother's from Bogart. Covert, senior in agriculture mechanization, owns the remaining 10 percent.

Schlickau is the only one of the three entrepreneurs considering going back to school next semester. He said finding time to study is his major concern, so he plans to take nine hours or less next semester.

"I found out there's a lot of little things that keep coming up, like the legal aspects," he said. "There's always people coming in wanting to talk about being hired, or a band who wants to play. That is why I want to wait until things settle down before I go back to school."

Morgan and Bell also said they plan to return to school in the future.

All three owners agreed the training they received in running their own businesses will provide them with a solid background in

They said they wanted to eventually pursue other business options, and would like to develop their current businesses enough to leave them in the hands of managers.

"I plan to use this as a building block," Bell said. "I don't want to be a stereo salesman all my life. I want to manage several businesses."

Students seek nanny jobs

By Stacy Sweazy Collegian Reporter

Mary Poppins' image is in demand on the American job market in the form of a full-time child care provider - a nanny.

Some students are seeking employment as mother's helpers through agencies or private connections during the 'summer months, while others are taking an entire year off from school to become temporary nannies.

Agencies across the country advertise in the Collegian and other university newspapers. Typically they look for mature, competent, loving, enthusiastic, energetic and experienced applicants between the ages of 18 and 55. Most of the advertising for the agencies describe families in or near major Julie Dahl, senior in elementary education, was a mother's helper in Darien, Conn., for the past two summers. She applied with a few agencies, but decided to go through a friend on the East Coast. After one telephone interview, she had a summer job.

Dahl said the job provided her with an opportunity to see another part of the country and to make some money.

She said her duties included mild housekeeping, childcare, some meal preparation and child transportation.

"If you want to know what it feels like to be a mother - be a nanny," Dahl said.

Helping mothers is a new, competitive business in suburban areas, according to an introductory letter for Mother's Helper Agency, a national nanny placement service. A mother's helper lives with a family as part of the family.

Republicans endorse strategy to bring back Kansas primary

By The Associated Press

TOPEKA - The leader of the state's Republican Party today endorsed the re-establishment of a presidential preference primary in Kansas, a move that pleased Democrats who have long supported the State GOP Chairman Fred Logan Jr. emphasized the differences between his proposal for a primary and one proposed earlier this year by Senate Minority Leader Michael Johnston, D-Parsons. In fact, Logan called Johnston's proposal "simplistic" and said he has studied the issue for years.

Logan's endorsement of a primary came despite the past opposition of Republican Gov. Mike Hayden. However, Hayden's press secretary, Kathy Peterson, indicated that the governor's opposition is softening.

Logan's plan calls for moving all primary elections from the first Tuesday in August to the first Tuesday after the second Monday in May. The Kansas primaries would then coincide with primaries in Nebraska. Logan said he would like to see Kansas become part of a regional, farmstate presidential primary system.

"I believe a presidential preference primary can be used as a tool to strengthen the political parties," Logan said during a news conference. "I believe it will lead to increased voter registration in the will enhance voter affiliation with political parties."

Johnston brushed aside Logan's criticism of his proposal, which called for a separate presidential primary on the first Tuesday in April. The state's only presidential primary, in 1980, was held on that date. In other presidential election years, each party has selected delegates to its national convention through a complex caucus system.

"I will entertain and take a look at his proposal along with all others," Johnston said. "I welcome his support. The real obstacle to reestablishing a primary has been the Republicans.'

Most of legislators and officials who have opposed re-establishing a primary have cited its estimated $1.26 million cost. Hayden has opposed a primary in the past because he feared it could weaken political parties.

"He hasn't studied this proposal," Mrs. Peterson said of the governor. "The only objection he would have relates to weakening of the two-party system. If it doesn't weaken either political party, he'd be inclined to support it. He'll want to work with party and legislative leaders to explore it."

Republican Party. I also believe it voters registered as affiliated with a party could vote in its primary.

In addition, Logan said having the Kansas primary fall on the same day as the Nebraska primary or primaries in other states would ensure that agricultural issues would be debated on the national level.

As an alternative, Logan suggested the state could hold a separate presidential primary on the fourth Tuesday in February, the date of South Dakota's primary.

"Establishing the primary in this manner will give candidates a reason to come to Kansas beyond capturing delegate votes," Logan said.

Logan also said he thinks August is a "terrible time" to have a primary, because the election season is too long and because summer months traditionally are a time of low voter participation. An earlier election would also give voters a break from the general election campaign, he

"You'll have a dead time, a welcome dead time, in the summer months," Logan said.

Logan also said any primary law should allow the political parties to decide how delegates to their national conventions should be allotted.

State Democratic Chairman Jim Under Logan's proposal, the cost Parrish had only one objection to Logan's plan. He said he would allow independent voters to participate in some way.

Straw, Dulan to start

By The Collegian Staff

K-State football coach Stan Parrish announced two offensive starting positions after Wednesday's practice.

Sophomore Carl Straw has drawn the starting quarterback job over senior reserve Gary Swim for Saturday's matchup with the University of Iowa. Kickoff is 1 p.m. at KSU Stadium.

Also chosen for a starting position was sophomore Antoine Dulan at tailback. Dulan, a Proposition 48 casualty last season, led Topeka-Washburn Rural to two consecutive Class 5A championships and rushed for more than 1,500 yards his senior season.

The Wildcats remain relatively injury free heading into this weekend's game. Junior defensive back Tyreese Herds returned to practice today after a shoulder injury suffered Saturday. Also returning was senior tailback Tom Dillon, who had a slight hip injury. They will be able to play this weekend, but Parrish is also planning to continue playing several of his younger players.

"People will see some more of our young guys. They will see more of running backs Antoine Dulan, Sonny Ray Jones and wide receiver David Brooks along with defensive back William Price and defensive end Elijah Alexander," Parrish said. "Hopefully we got the nervousness part out of our system. It's all relative to playing but we want to see a lot of improvement this week and next week."

Parrish said the team has bounced back from Saturday's loss well.

"It was a real disappointment last weekend because we worked so hard for (the win). I think (the team) knows we just made a lot of mistakes."

That was something the Wildcats didn't do against the Hawkeyes last year as they only trailed by eight, 21-13, heading into the fourth quarter. K-State caused four Iowa fumbles and picked off six passes in the 38-13 loss.

By Melissa Payne Sports Writer

It sure isn't getting any easier for K-State's volleyball team as the season progresses. Coach Scott Nelson would be the first to agree with that.

After sweeping their first two opponents, it took the Wildcats four games before they dispatched Montana State University, 12-15, 15-10, 15-5, 15-7 Wednesday night in Ahearn Field House.

With the win, K-State improved to 3-0.

Even though Montana State dropped to 1-5, Nelson said the record wasn't indictive of the Bob-

"Early on Montana State dictated the tempo, but we took over that role," Nelson said.

A large portion of K-State's success Wednesday goes to the four seniors - Val Kastens, Mary Mignano, Mary Kinsey and Shawnee

Kinsey led the 'Cats with 17 kills, Call had 14 kills and a team-high of 17 defensive saves, Kastens recorded seven kills in 18 attempts and Nelson said Mignano "sealed the fourth game" with her play on the back row.

Injuries to Nelson's two middle blockers left Nelson with inexperience in that area, but freshman Betsy Berkley came on to go seven-for-10 on killed attacks.

Kastens and Lynda Harshbarger had four service aces to lead the Wildcats.

Leading the Bobcats was Sheri Kreple, a senior from Kentwood, Mich. She was 13-of-31 on attack

The Wildcats will be on the road this weekend as they are scheduled to play in the Northern Illinois University Invitational. At that tournament besided K-State is the host team, the University of Mississippi and Weber State University

The next home action for K-State is slated for Wednesday when the 'Cats host The Wichita State University. Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Ahearn Field House.

Mike Tyson's soap opera continues

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Mike Tyson, who is reported to have threatened suicide before smashing his car into a tree, may have been trying to attract more attention from a wife who is ignoring him, a source close to the heavyweight champion said Wednesday.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, meanwhile, confirmed on Wednesday that the fighter's actress wife, Robin Givens, and her mother have urged Tyson to see a Manhattan psychiatrist described as an expert on athletic stress.

Cayton, however, said he hasn't talked to Tyson for nearly two weeks. He said he was prevented from visiting Tyson in the hospital by Givens, her mother Ruth Roper and Tyson's new publicity agent, Howard

Rubenstein. It was apparent that while Tyson was recovering from a concussion remained on Wednesday. sustained last Sunday when his car ran into a tree, a rift between the Givens group and the boxing group that includes Cayton and trainer Kevin Rooney was widening.

"Without me, there'd be no Mike Tyson," Cayton said. "And suddenly, these people are interested in his welfare, and I'm not. I am outraged."

The New York Daily News on Wednesday quoted unnamed sources close to Tyson as saying the heavyweight champ told his wife he was going to kill himself, then got into his car and ran it purposely into a tree in Catskill, N.Y., where he trains. Doctors said Tyson sustained a concussion and amnesia and was unconscious for about a half hour.

Tyson originally was taken to a local hospital, then transferred to Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York City, where he

The Daily News story also accused Cayton and Rooney of being more concerned that an Oct. 22 title defense against Frank Bruno was postponed indefinitely than they were about Tyson's health. Givens, Roper, Rubenstein and Tyson's two lawyers, Peter Parcher and Steven Hayes, were described as those truly concerned with the fighter's welfare.

"This is disgusting, false," Cayton said. "It's a pack of falsehoods and untruths - dispicable lies."

Cayton joined Roper and Tyson's surrogate mother, Camille Ewald, as saying they did not believe Tyson had tried to take his own life. The 82-year-old Ewald, an in-law of Tyson's first trainer, the late Cus D'Amato, witnessed the incident that triggered the suicide reports.

"brooding all week" because Givens chose to remain in New York rather than be with him in Catskill. The source said she wanted to "hang out with her fancy friends at the U.S.

The source, however, said any threats of suicide were "idle threats" and said those close to Tyson believe he was "just looking for a little attention" from his wife.

Givens was to leave on Thursday for the Soviet Union to film two episodes of her television show, "Head of the Class."

The schism between Cayton and Givens began shortly after she married Tyson last February. Roper and Givens have openly accused Cayton of trying to take Tyson's money; Tyson sued Cayton to break their One source close to the Tyson contract last July. The suit was

U.S. entry breezes to first-round win

By The Associated Press

SAN DIEGO - Dennis Conner took Stars & Stripes on a Sunday sail Wednesday, thrashing New Zealand, as expected, in the opening race of a best-of-three America's Cup series.

New Zealand's 34 crewmen, including owner Michael Fay, could only perch on their giant yacht's overhanging deck and watch like seagulls as Conner's 60-foot catamaran disappeared towards the horizon to win the 40-mile race by a country mile. Stars & Stripes reached the finish line 17 minutes, 55 seconds ahead of the sloop.

The 133-foot Kiwi challenger was out of the race soon after taking the start by 10 seconds. Conner, reining in his swift flier with its upright airplane wing to avoid gear breakdown, just sailed away in 6-15 knot winds over a calm Pacific Ocean.

"When he wants to go faster, he can," said Marc Pajot, a spectator and skipper of French Kiss, a failed challenger in the '86-87 Cup series in Australia.

The only competition for Stars & Stripes, which covered the course in 4 hours, 54 minutes, 6 seconds, was from porpoises playing alongside the twin-hulled yacht that at times sailed as fast as the wind.

This is the same song, second verse: fan support vital at 'Cat home opener

From The Sidelines

CHRIS WILHELM Sports Columnist

Here we go again. Same song, second verse. Only this time this is basically a column echoing the sentiments of head football coach Stan Parrish. He's slightly upset, and only rightfully so.

Enrollment is up 8 percent, and total enrollment might go over the 19,000 student mark this fall. Books are scarce at the bookstore. Classes are more crowded this semester. And it looks as if there's going to be an overabundance of empty seats at KSU Stadium Saturday when the Wildcats host the University of Iowa.

Many of you have multiple answers for why you won't attend Saturda's home opener, but think about it.

Last year, 10,200 Wildcat football season tickets were sold. This year only 6,500 have been sold. Last year 5,800 student tickets had been sold to Wildcat football games. This year only 3,000 have been sold.

What is it that we students have to do on Saturday afternoons that keep us from supporting the 'Cats?

Do we go home? You remember home - that place we couldn't wait to grow up and move away from. Do we have pressing appointments? Maybe getting our hair cut, mowing the yard, watching cartoons, doing the dishes that have set all week, waxing the car?

Do we just forget that it's Saturday?

So what keeps us from enjoying an afternoon of football at the stadium with our friends? If the answer was that we just don't have any interest in football, then we are kidding ourselves.

How many students don't start off their Monday morning, before-class conversation with a quick rehash of the Wildcat football game?

How many of you don't discuss the game with your folks when they

How many of you don't moan and complain that our program is so bad? If only the 3,000 students that bought season tickets and only the wouldn't have any problem. It's those other 16,000 students that complain, and the alumni and Manhattan residents who feel that they have earned the right to complain just because they live here through the

Until they can get behind the program and do what they can to improve the program, they have absolutely no right to verbally abuse it.

At Saturday's game, five or six of the best high school players in the state of Kansas will be attending K-State's home opener, Parrish said. Do you think those players want to come here and play in a stadium full of empty, seats? Come out to the home games. Help fill the stadium. Have a good time. Who knows, maybe that recruit you're sitting next to will turn out to 6,500 total season ticket holders complained about the program, I be K-State's next Steve Grogan.

K-State graduate Laura Donnelly watches her dance class as they practice their routine in the Ahearn Field House dance room. Donnelly is a guest choreographer from New York where she works with the New York Greek Drama Company. Today is her last day at K-State.

Guest choreographer ends K-State stay

By The Collegian Staff

Flexibility is important to a dancer in more ways than one. This seems to be the message of Laura Donnelly, a K-State graduate of dance.

Donnelly ends her 6-day stint as a guest choreographer in residence at the University today.

In recent years the dance world has changed, Donnelly said.

"They are teaching people what they need to know to land a job," she said. "Very few companies will hire a dancer for 32 weeks out of the year and pay unemployment, so (dancers) need to be versatile."

During her visit to K-State, Donnelly has been choreographing a piece titled "Sweet Pretty Women of the Machine Age."

Christine Rome, sophomore in dance; and Tammy Francka, Patricia Durbin and Nancy Keyser-Shade, all seniors in dance, were chosen by Donnelly to perform the piece at the Flinthills Festival in City Park, Sept. 23-25, and at Winter Dance in McCain Auditorium, Dec. 1-2.

Donnelly is a Phi Beta Kappa alumna and currently resides in New York City, where she is the choreographer for the New York Greek Drama Company.

Her mother, also a dance teacher, started teaching Donnelly the basics of dance at 5 years of age.

She completed her first year of Donnelly said.

dance at Oklahoma City University, before transferring to K-State to study dance.

Donnelly spent her summers in New York City and studied with the American Ballet Theatre and the New York Conservatory. After graduating in 1981, she taught dance at K-State and also at the Federation of the Handicap in Manhattan.

Donnelly then moved from the 'Little Apple' to the 'Big Apple' and started auditioning for dance companies.

The first audition consisted of 60 female dancers competing for one position. After an afternoon of anticipation and cuts, Donnelly was one of the six remaining dancers. She got the position and danced with the Court Dance Company of New York until 1987.

Though dancing is her life, she had to make ends meet. So between auditions Donnelly took secretarial jobs for private and non-profit performing artists.

"When I was 14 my mother said, 'Learn to type. You'll never be sorry.' She was right," Donnelly said.

Donnelly is a founding member of the Clive Thompson Dance Company. She was one of the first eight dancers Thompson hired.

"I have seen him on film since I was 14 or 15 so it was really exciting to finally get to work with him,'

Play deals with rape, retaliation

By The Collegian Staff

"Extremities" has been performed millions of times in the psyches of raped women.

But only William Matrosimone, author of "Extremities," wrote about

The K-State Players will be performing "Extremities" at 8 p.m. today through Saturday and Sept. 14-17 in Nichols Theatre. Matrosimone wrote the play after listening to a rape victim tell of her experience.

The play has been held over from the summer session because it was the production which had a complete cast for the fall semester, and it tends to appeal to the younger audiences, said Charlotte MacFarland, director of the play.

"Extremities' is very realistic, very rough," said Mark Hetrick, freshman in theater, who plays Raul in the performance.

The content and language of the play are R-rated. The audience needs to be aware of the intensity of the piece, MacFarland said. "Extemities" not only deals with rape, but also with the primal instinct of revenge.

Due to the content of the play, open discussion will be provided after each performance by Judy Davis, director of the Women's Resource Center.

"Frankly, it is offered as a comingdown time after the play, which may be unsettling for some," Davis said.

Speech criticizes conservative

By Kendra Gensemer Collegian Reporter

Criticizing the Republican Party, defending progressivism and Liberalism, historian Barbara Tuchman reminded Kansans of their own progressive history, despite a continuing move toward conservatism.

A two-time Pulitzer-prize winning author, Tuchman gave the 80th Landon Lecture on Public Issues to a full house Thursday in McCain Auditorium despite a lighting problem making it difficult for her to see her

"Why has 'Liberal,' which has much the same meaning as 'progressive' and suggests the same point of view, become a dirty word in America?" she asked the audience.

"I am surprised that she brought that question to one of the most conservative states in the country," said John Daly, assistant professor of history.

"... is impossible in the midst of a presidential campaign to make a non-political, non-partisan speech," Tuchman said at the beginning of her address.

"Liberals are associated with this process (of redistribution of wealth), which I suppose is one reason why they are regarded as monsters," she said.

"In addition, of course, they are associated with the whole '60s culture, with long hair and Woodstock and all that. In the same way I could associate the Conservative right with opponents of gun control and censors of books in school libraries," she continued.

Of Kansas' history, Tuchman said, "The turning of the century was a time of tremendous change in the nation. The frontier had closed; free land was no longer available.

"So strong was their legacy that Alfred Landon as governor called himself a progressive, what he called a 'practical progressive.'

The instinct showed in his proposal of the Farm Mortgage Moratorium Act which Republicans might well espouse today, if they shared Landon's feeling for his fellow citizens of the Midwest, which they have hardly shown," Tuchman said.

"I think today, in the late 20th century, we are caught in the cycle of greed which breeds folly, as seen in a government that spends billions on space flight when people on earth have no homes, and more billions vanish in wasteful procurement at the Pentagon while the education of Americans is left to lag behind other nations leaving too many lives spent in apathy and ignorance and putting us at a permanent disadvantage," she said.

Tuchman said no amount of tanks and Star Wars Defense Initiative can provide a strong national defense when "minds are mediocre and will is feeble."

'She seemed to be asking where that sense of social responsibility has gone," Daly said. Rene De La Pedraja, assistant professor of history, said Tuchman asked a valid question.

"She raised a very important question on what has happened to these progressive Republicans. She questioned what happened to the diversity of the Republican Party and why did it disappear," he said.

Tuchman said she believes overpopulation to be the "darkest cloud on the horizon today."

"The simple Malthusian fact of overpopulation producing too much sewage and garbage and too much packaging and too much pollution and around us too many lives lived in poverty and squalor should suggest that Republican devotion to free enterprise cannot stand pat," she said.

"If Republicans are to retain the presidency, they must come out of the petrified forest of negatives and find a pathway beyond their fear of reform and a desperate affection for home as they once knew it," Tuchman said.

Daly said Tuchman compared classic Republicans with the Old Tory Party in Britain. It is similiar to the "noblesse oblige" of that party, which was a sense of respect for those less fortunate by the rich and powerful, he said.

"It is an interesting parallel," he said. "They must somehow present a convincing image of concern for the public welfare in terms of people as distinct from larger matters such as national defense or the balance of trade." Tuchman added. Despite minor problems, she managed to execute a charm that was responded to by most of the audience, said William Richter, head of the Department of Political Science.

"The same writing style that makes her books a pleasure to read was there in her presentation," he said.

During a question and answer period after the address, Tuchman commented on the possible outcome of the 1988 election. Tuchman said she felt there is no great reason to

"My perception of him is more of the same that we've had for years - no change or reform. We need badly a program of reform. I don't feel he offers anything," she said.

As for Bush's running mate, Dan Quayle, Tuchman said, "He (Quayle) looked to me as if he (Bush) had chosen someone even more shadowy than himself, with nothing to offer. This is not what the American people need at

Although Tuchman said she likes nothing specific about Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis, she said he does offers a change of

"As an outsider, I should not be telling you what you should do; what I have said is simply a practical thought which, if I were called a 'consultant' would cost you thousands, but I am happy to offer free of charge," Tuchman

Pulitzer prize winning historian Barbara Tuchman tells President Jon Wefald to wait a moment as he points to a questioner during a question-and-answer session after her speech titled

"Where Are the Progressive Republicans?" Thursday morning in McCain Auditorium. Tuchman's address marked the 80th lecture in the Landon Lecture Series on Public Issues.

Unlike enrollment this year, which is way up, football ticket sales are way down. And that decline could prove costly to K-State.

KSU Athletic Department stands to lose between $100,000 to $400,000 if football season ticket sales don't pick up, said Athletic Director Steve Miller.

As of Thursday evening, approximately 6,800 season tickets had been sold, which is more than 4,000 tickets behind the 1987 total of 11,212. Only about 2,400 student tickets have been sold, down from 5,100 last

Miller said the situation could hurt the entire sports program. The athletic program is run on money received from the revenue sports, he said.

The two major reasons why ticket sales are down this year are because of the 0-10-1 record the team experienced last season and the fact that the home opener is the second game of the season, he said.

Senate informed of seat re-zoning

By The Collegian Staff

Student Senate was told Thursday night that the Bramlage Coliseum seating arrangement may be changed to move faculty seating to center court.

"Bob Krause changed the seating plan for the Coliseum," Dave Whetstone, Athletic Ticket Sales Task Force chairman told Senate.

Whetstone said Krause moved faculty seating half a section to center court where part of student seating had previously been designated.

A draft of a coliseum in New Mexico was used to plan seating in Bramlage. However, the New Mexico coliseum was slightly different than Bramlage resulting in the need for seating changes, said Doug Folk, Student Senate chairman.

"We are not actually losing numbers of seats, just position,' Folk said. Whetstone said he was disappointed with the handling of the seating change. The problem originally was to be worked out between Student Senate and Faculty Senate. "We thought Bob was staying out of it," Whetstone said. "But now he's taking credit for all the changes.

"The students have put too much money into this to let us be treated this way," he said.

Folk said the seating plan Student Senate passed last year divided the student section into reserved, non-reserved, and ICAT seating.

Of the 13,500 seats in Bramlage Coliseum, 6,000 were to be sold to students.

U.S. weapons destroyed

KARNACK, Texas - With a deafening roar and towering clouds of white smoke, two nuclear-missile rocket motors were destroyed Thursday, the first U.S. weapons eliminated under the arms reduction treaty with the Soviet Union.

Vice President George Bush and a 12-member Soviet inspection team were among hundreds of observers who watched the burnings at the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant in northeast Texas, about 145 miles east of Dallas.

Afterward, the Soviet team said it was satisified with the burnings.

Last week, American observers went to the Soviet Union to witness the destruction of missiles there under terms of the U.S.-Soviet Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty.

"This is the day we begin to reverse the arms race. This was the day we began to destroy the weapons of destruction," Bush said after the missles were destroyed. "This was the day that two great nuclear powers began to move together toward a safer, more peaceful world."

Under the treaty, signed in Washington last December by President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the United States and Soviet Union are required to destroy all nuclear missiles with a range of 300 to 3,400 miles within three years.

Man loses weight, goes outside

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. - Walter Hudson, who has slimmed down an estimated 680 pounds, lumbered out of his house Thursday and greeted the sunshine for the first time in 18

"It feels good. I shouldn't have waited this long," said Hudson, showing off his new 520-pound physique. A year ago, his roughly 6-foot frame weighed about 1,200 pounds.

Wearing sunglasses to protect his eyes, Hudson walked through a widened doorway and onto a specially constructed, elevated concrete patio. He sat on a concrete block with a vinyl cushion.

Hudson's fear that his legs would not support his weight kept him trapped in his house and confined mostly to his bed since he was 15 years old. He came to the world's attention last fall when he became wedged in a doorway and had to be rescued by firefighters with saws.

Most of Yellowstone closed

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. - Firefighters on Thursday for the first time closed all but a small piece of the oldest national park, devastated by fires that surrounded Old Faithful and charred more than 1 million acres.

"I've done this for 20 years and I've never seen anything as awesome as this," said Fred Roach, operations chief on the 221,800-acre North Fork fire, which destroyed 17 buildings in the park Wednesday.

Winds died down and temperatures cooled Thursday, and a weekend weather forecast called for rain or snow - but also for winds up to 60 mph.

"It looks as if the burn that went through yesterday pretty much fire-proofed the Old Faithful area," North Fork commander Denny Bungarz, said. "The priorities have switched now that the fire has gone around here.'

OMAHA, Neb. - A Kansas City, Mo., man was shot to death when gunfire erupted during an argument between two groups of people, and another Kansas City man was arrested as a suspect in the case, police said Thursday.

Frank Jasper, 19, was shot once in the head near a northside residence at about 12:30 a.m. Thursday, police said. He died at St. Joseph Hospital about five hours later.

The 21-year-old suspect was booked on suspiciion of firstdegree murder, use of a weapon to commit a felony and possession of a firearm by a convicted felon, Lt. Larry Roberts

Arson case ends in mistrial

MANHATTAN - The arson trial for the 20-year-old wife of a K-State basketball player ended in a mistrial Thursday, after jurors could not agree on a verdict.

Riley County District Judge Jerry Mershon declared the mistrial in the case of Stacy Simmons. She was charged with setting fire to a plastic bag containing items belonging to basketball player Lance Simmons, during a fight with him. Simmons was her boyfriend at the time, and the two are now married.

The Jan. 23 fire, which investigators say began in the bag, caused extensive damage to an apartment complex in Manhattan.

Jurors deliberated less than three hours before telling the judge they were unable to reach a verdict, said Assistant County Attorney Gabrielle Thompson.

Thompson said she did not know whether the state would retry the case. She said a juror told her that the jury felt it needed more evidence to prove Stacy Simmons set the bag on

Republicans open headquaters

TOPEKA — Kansas Republicans opened a state headquarters for George Bush's presidential campaign today and released details of a visit to the state next week by vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle.

Margie Canfield of Topeka, a tri-chairman of the Bush-Quayle campaign in Kansas, cut a ribbon to open the headquarters at 235 S. Topeka Blvd., about six blocks northwest of the Capitol.

The other tri-chairmen, John Petersen of Overland Park and Pete McGill of Topeka, spoke to about three dozen Republicans who turned out for the opening.

Quayle will come to Wichita next Thursday for an airport rally and fundraising reception, then go to Overland Park to spend the night and attend another fundraising rally

Between 900 and 1,000 high school debaters from across the state will be attending a workshop Saturday on campus sponsored by the K-State debate team. This is the third year for the event.

The high school debate topic throughout the United States concerns programs for the elderly, said Todd Graham, K-State assistant debate coach. The young debaters will learn about issues concerning the elderly in preparation for the upcoming high school debate season, he said.

Graham said students will attend an introductory lecture at 9 a.m., see a model debate and attend three elective sessions for the remainder of the day. Elective sessions include topics on debate strategies for both novice and advanced debaters, as well as lectures for novice high school coaches, he said.

Graham said the workshop gives novices a chance to learn a little bit about debate. It also gives advanced debaters a chance to learn about strategy techniques and the specific topic for the debate season, he said.

"We try to draw interest for debate and this also gives us the opportunity to keep an eye out for future college prospects," said David Filippi, sophomore in economics and a K-State varsity

K-State varsity debater Marsha McGranahan-Gribble, senior in speech, says she feels the workshop is good public relations.

The novices are people just getting into debate," she said. 'It's always exciting to be around them when they are just finding out debate is really fun."

Ed Schiappa, instructor of speech and director of debate, said the first workshop was a cooperative effort between the College of Agriculture and the debate team.

"The topic that year was agriculture," he said.

900 prep debaters Class focuses on positive image

By Jody Hundley Collegian Reporter

Students can learn how to get motivated and build a positive selfimage by taking a business course on promotional strategies.

Richard Burke, owner of Burke Enterprises, instructs the course, which is offered through the College of Business Administration.

"I feel confident that our students have the technical knowledge to be a success on the job. But there's a need for a block of philosophy and psychology on leadership in the workplace," Burke said.

During the first three class meetings, Burke discusses "The Psychology of Winning," a book by Dennis Waitley. He first asks students, "Do you want to be winners or losers?" None of the students has preferred losing, he said.

"We talk about a positive selfimage, and the importance of a constructive imagination. I ask students to visualize where they want to be in life," Burke said. Students are asked to look inward at their own value system before they apply a value system to the job.

The course includes elements of advertising, sales, promotions and publicity, along with some psychology. A blending of both concepts is important for future leaders in the business world, Burke said.

"Students who are in touch with their own values are able to be effective leaders. They need to feel good about themselves before they can transmit that feeling to the business," Burke said.

Bryan Rebel, senior in marketing, said he believes the class is an important part of marketing.

"I think it's a very positive class. You must have a good attitude (in sales), if you want good results," he Rebel was enrolled in the course last year. He attended the meetings on the "Psychology of Winning," but then had to drop the class due to schedule conflicts. He said he re-enrolled in the course this semester because he believed it was worthwhile.

Building the self-image is important, Burke said, because if the person does not feel positive or attractive on the inside, the outside reflects the same. He suggests feeding the subconscious successful and positive actions - not negative ones. Positive self-control must also be in place for the person to succeed, he

"Don't blame others for your actions. Accept the responsibilities for your choices," Burke said. "Some people blame others throughout their lives for their own mistakes."

Furthermore, fear is a good motivator, Burke said, if it is put to work. "If (fear) is controlled, it can be helpful to motivate us into doing what we must," he said.

"The class is offered once, sometimes twice, a semester. Since the class is large, I'm not able to get to know as many of the students as I'd like," Burke said, adding that 70 students are currently enrolled in the learn from them," he said.

Planning a promotion as a group project is also included in the course. Burke said he grades the promotion like an employer would, not an instructor.

"If I say to the students, 'Go ahead and run it,' they know that they've succeeded," he said.

Burke asks students to be guest lecturers for 15 to 20 minutes in each class meeting. That way, Burke said, students are more prepared for that class period and know the material.

"(Students) get better grades as a result of (the lectures) - plus they become more self-confident in front of groups.

"I like getting students excited about the material in the course. In order for them to be enthusiastic about the class, I also must be. Teaching is exciting, since I also

Throwaway society may become garbage dump We can destroy our own future

Tuchman gives series new, better standards

The Landon Lecture Series on Public Issues received a breath of fresh air Thursday, when historian Barbara Tuchman delivered the 80th lecture.

It did not follow the usual style of being either an impersonal regurgitation of the news or a lesson in civics. It was not full of policy-protecting rhetoric. Instead, it was full of thought-provoking points.

Let us hope this marks the beginning of a new era of Landon lecturers.

Let us hope this means Justice Sandra Day O'Connor will be the last lecturer who will receive a standing ovation for who she was, instead of what she had to say.

Let us hope those who select and advise the lecturers will say that students, faculty and patrons want more than to just be able to say, "I saw so-and-so speak at K-State." They want to say, "I saw soand-so and she made me think about our political system."

Let us hope lecturers like Tuchman will soon be considered the norm, and not a breath of fresh air.

Lack of prior planning lessens speech's impact

If you went to the Landon Lecture, you know that Barbara Tuchman was having problems with seeing her notes and could not effectively address her audience. It was not her fault, and the situation could have Charles Reagan, chairman of the lecture series, requested special lighting to make up for Tuchman's poor eyesight. Unfortunately, Reagan didn't have the foresight to take Tuchman to McCain Auditorium before the lecture and make sure the lighting was adequate - apparently it didn't fit into her itinerary.

Reagan explains, "I wasn't explicit enough," in his lighting request. At the same time, Tuchman, a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner, apologizes to a full house at the 80th Landon Lecture because she can't see her notes. This is an embarrassment to the entire University.

Richard Martin, McCain director, said it is not always possible to get what is necessary. Does he not realize this is one of the most prestigious lecture series in the nation; and he can't find a desk lamp.

Allan Bailey, stage manager at McCain, said simply, "Get the speaker over here before the lecture." What more can be said?

Other Perspectives

In a speech to about 2,000 students during the Traditions Night ceremony, (University of Kansas) Student Body President Brook Menees fell flat.

So did his jokes.

Menees' attempts at humor were marred by offensive remarks about Johnson County, Chicago accents and an unclassy slam at K-State.

He labeled Johnson County the "Golden Ghetto," told a joke mimicking the accent of a girl from Chicago, and said the only good thing that came from K-State was manure. The university is a place to broaden one's mind, not a place to construct it with meaningless stereotypes. Pointlessly bashing K-State wasn't necessary in what was supposed to be an orientation speech. It wasn't even that funny. Ever wonder why KU sometimes is dubbed "Snob Hill?" Menees promoted that image with his ill-chosen words. It's true that speaking to 2,000 people isn't easy, but the student body voted for Menees to speak for 23,000. Insensitivity out of nervousness is no excuse. The most mature thing Menees has done since his speech is to apologize, which shows he is willing to take responsibility for his words. Still, students do not need a nervous comedian. Instead, they need a leader who won't constrain them by narrow thoughts.

It's true, we live in a throwaway society. In fact the average American produces 25 pounds of garbage a week. At the end of that week, we take our garbage to the end of our driveway, some nice people take it away, and that's the end of it. Ask anyone under the age of 10 where the trash goes - most likely the person will say the trash man takes it far away and makes a big hill out of it. Unfortunately, most Americans over the age of 10 also have this simplistic attitude about their garbage.

Over the summer, thousands of American coastal beach-goers were told they couldn't go in the water because incoming tides had washed up a sickening array of waste. The most disturbing waste was the medical debris old syringes and needles, stained bandages, vials of blood and drug paraphernalia could be found alongside seashells. Apparently people still believe they can dump their waste into our oceans and it will be gone

Drought conditions throughout the summer were also a rude awakening for many Americans. It forced people to realize that our water supply is not eternal. Emergency rationing went into effect in many cities along with a substantial jump in water prices.

But even after seeing the end product, which has been created by years of abuse, Americans still haven't changed their habits. That is the most frustrating aspect about pollution.

We know what causes it, scientists have developed ways to combat it (and are developing more), yet people are still nurturing their wasteful customs. More alarming, they are getting worse every year.

Between 1960 and 1986 the amount of American garbage increased by 80 percent. By the year 2000 it is projected to increase 22 percent, coming to a total of 192.7 million tons of trash annually.

Americans have to dispose of their shortterm thinking. Yes, it will cost money, and yes, it will be a hassle to restructure communities and years of wasteful habits, but natural resources are priceless.

ime is "a wasting." The United States already gets rid of 80 percent of its trash by throwing a few layers of dirt over it - out of sight, out of mind, Wrong. Very wrong. America is running out of space for landfills. We must learn to reuse our waste (otherwise known as Judging from all the pop machines on this campus, I'd estimate that hundreds of aluminum cans must be thrown away each day. Even more students will read the personals in their Collegians and then proceed to throw out their paper. Why don't we start recycling our aluminum and paper?

We don't because it's a big drag. Someone, on someone else's payroll, would have to sort through our trash, and then would have to haul it to a recycling center.

I understand this is a short-term answer to a long-term problem, but if all homeowners or apartment renters in the country took an hour a week to sort out their trash and recycle it, we'd be on the right track.

Imagine the water that would be saved, if we turned off the faucet while brushing our teeth. Or if every toilet only used two gallons (gasp!) instead of eight for flushing purposes.

One environmentalist even suggested using grey water, the soapy water that goes down the drain, in toilets instead of crystal clear ard waste is America's second highest waste product (paper is the highest). In other words, people gather up their grass clippings and leaves in a plastic bag for the garbage collector to take away to that infamous garbage hill. At least the grass is biodegradable; unfortunately, the plastic bag is not. If people would leave the grass clippings on their lawn, it would actually help their lawns and wouldn't take up valuable landfill space. Others have suggested doing away with the traditional green lawn

Many homes are also a home to toxins. Items such as nail polish, old cans of paint, paint thinner, bleach, fertilizers, pesticides and cleaning agents can be a threat to a community when deposited in landfills. Progressive cities offer their citizens a place to take these items so they may be disposed of safely.

Americans need an attitude adjustment. We must re-evaluate our wasteful customs and culture. Like any problem, education followed by action is the solution. If we don't start now, that "far away" mountain of trash may be in our back yards.

Priorities wrong

Editor,

In response to the Sept. 2 editorial on the basketball ticket sales plan and the plan in general, I would like to make a few

To begin with, the ticket sales committee is not able to set the number of student season tickets, the Department of Athletics does. The committee only determines where the seating in Bramlage will be.

I would, though, like to criticize the committee for allocating the prime seating to ICAT. Given the traditional competitiveness of camping out for basketball tickets, I strongly believe ICAT should get in line with the rest of the student body. give the athletic department kudos, though, because it is an excellent plan to get more money for the Mike Ahearn scholarship fund. Please do not take me wrong. I am all for the support ICAT gives K-State athletics, but I do believe ICAT's original purpose was to help support the non-revenue sports NOT to get an excellent basketball ticket. To move on, I salute the committee for maintaining the camp out because of the tradition and the positive publicity it brings to K-State. I also would like to thank the committee for letting the student body know in advance the policies for camping out this

Last year, the lack of timing and information by the committee caused several controversies. By informing us now, a majority of those problems should be avoided.

However, the committee has failed to address an issue that came up last year. Members of the committee came around the tents about four hours before the Oklahoma football game and told the campers it was OK to go see the game, because there would not be any tent checks. Why were the campers not allowed to see the K-State volleyball games? I am sure the netters would have appreciated the extra support.

The main question is, why make an exception for one sport and not all sports? Is it going to happen again?

Stop bad press

Apparently Chris Wilhelm didn't read the last letter I wrote (and I'm sure I speak for quite a few people) concerning Dave Svoboda's article about how people are evil if they don't go to football games. This is apparent because he wrote almost the same article

The feeling that I get from both articles is that if I don't attend K-State football games, then I must be a mutated Jayhawk from hell who enrolled at K-State to be a double-agent.

Try portraying a positive outlook toward the situation. On campus, there is an organization called ICAT that seems to do very well when it comes to spirit. (I am not a member of ships. There may just be an eccentric K-State ICAT, thus making me a third - party critic.

Keep up the good work, ICAT.) Apparently the volleyball team is doing well without all this negative press.

And what about the debate team, who was ranked 6th in the nation in the CEDA division last year. They do this without negative press.

What about that K-State Crew team? In case you haven't figured it out, there are many more activities to support at K-State.

But I'll be there Saturday. I would like to see a lot of people there. Be positive. Paul McDonald

junior in electrical engineering Use Ahearn relic

Editor,

A few weeks ago, I was lucky enough to see the old scoreboard from Ahearn being unloaded from a trailer and placed in a storage shed by the Throckmorton greenhouses. As of today, I noticed the old scoreboard was still in the shed. I would like to ask the K-State administration what is to be done with this relic. Do they have any other plans for the scoreboard than for it to be placed in an old storage shed and forgotten?

The old scoreboard is a symbol of K-State basketball accomplishments and tradition. Surely keeping the board in an open-air shed, covered with plastic, is a waste. I would like to challenge the administration to do something with the Ahearn scoreboard if no plans have been made yet.

Could the old scoreboard be displayed somewhere on campus for future Wildcatters to view and be reminded of K-State's rich basketball history? If the old scoreboard is still in good working condition, why should it sit unused and be ruined by neglect? Wouldn't it make more sense to find a use for the scoreboard? Perhaps it could be auctioned off and the money donated to charity or used for scholar-alumnus or entrepreneur out there who would want to buy such a thing.

Maybe the scoreboard could be donated to a museum where it would be preserved and displayed for others to enjoy. Maybe some other school could use it and would be happy to have it. My ideas may or may not be feasible, or even realistic. However, I do wish that the Ahearn scoreboard's current whereabouts be known and to pose the question of its fate.

Programmer too full

Editor,

I would like to express a few thoughts in regard to the 1988-89 K-State Programmer. The new and "improved" programmer is full of material. It gives the times and dates of feature shows, Eclectic Entertainment, comedy shows, Issues and Ideas, and even sporting events. The K-State Programmer is too full. There is no writing space for important times or dates; such as exam or homework due dates. I was very disappointed to find out the programmer was no longer a programmer for students' plans, but for the University's plans. I hope in the future the programmer will add more space, or regress to its old, more practical program.

Drug bill amended, adds death penalty

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON - The House voted 299-111 Thursday to amend an anti-drug bill to permit federal death sentences for those convicted of murder committed during narcotics-related felonies.

The vote was a major defeat for death penalty foes, who sought a mandatory life sentence for drug killers as an alternative.

The life sentence provision also passed, 410-1, but the pro-death penalty forces wouldn't stop there. They rammed through the capital punishment amendment to give federal judges an additional

The capital punishment issue was the first major controversy addressed as the House considered legislation that would add some $2 billion to the $3.9 billion the nation is now spending to combat illegal drugs.

Rep. George Gekas, R-Pa., author of the capital punishment amendment, said it would provide a "swift and certain" deterrent against drug killings.

A Democratic supporter, Rep. James A. Traficant Jr. of Ohio, said, "Drug dealers don't have to read anyone their rights. The drug dealers who kill have no conscience."

Regents' chairman to visit University

By The Collegian Staff

The chairman and the executive director of the Kansas Board of Regents will be on campus today to meet with University officials and discuss the concerns of faculty, students and classified staff.

John Fairman, assistant vice president for University relations, said the K-State stop was the fifth for Regents Chairman Richard Dodderidge and Executive Director Stanley Koplik.

In the past weeks, they have traveled to Fort Hays State University, Emporia State University, Pittsburgh State University and the University of Kansas to "get a sense of the needs on campus."

Fairman said the visitors have a full schedule planned, including briefings with President Jon Wefald, Student Body President Troy Lubbers, Student Senate Chairman Doug Folk, Faculty Senate Chairwoman Cornelia Flora and leaders of classified staff.

English proficiency testing required of foreign students

By Stephanie Morrill Collegian Reporter

TRUE or FALSE: All international students enrolled at K-State must take a test to evaluate their understanding of the English language before they can attend classes.

The more than 950 international students who are enrolled at K-State this fall would definitely answer TRUE to that question. The Written Proficiency Test and the Spoken Proficiency Test are conducted during the registration period and are required of all incoming international students, including undergraduates, said Enid Cocke, director of the English Language Program.

These tests are used to determine any deficiency the student has with the English language, she said, adding that they also help to place non-admitted students at a level that will aid their academic pursuits.

Students are allowed to take the test once, and those who do not pass the proficiency tests are advised to enroll in and satisfactorily complete English and speech courses, Cocke said.

The University conducts two support classes for international students, English 065 and English 075. These speaking and writing classes are designed to help the international student improve his ability to use the English language, Cocke said.

More than 700 of the international students at K-State are pursuing graduate degrees. Many of them are frequently hired to complete a semester as teaching assistants, said Harry Marsh, professor of journalism and mass communications.

A passing grade in English 065 is required of all international graduate students before they are eligible to be hired as teaching assistants. It is a speech class in which students practice everyday conversations by practicing asking questions and responding correctly, Cocke said.

The final speech exam, or Speak Test, is a 20-minute, tape-recorded test. The student listens to a master tape, and is then instructed to complete four tasks: read paragraphs, describe various pictures, compose sentences and answer general questions. The responses are recorded and samples of the tape are evaluated by two faculty members.

The maximum score a student can receive on the final speech exam is 300 points, although scores of 220 and above are acceptable.

"Many of the students who took the test felt big pressure, like we weren't prepared for the ques-tions," said Estanislau Gacitura, teaching assistant in sociology.

"After I took the test, I felt like I did bad," said Gacitura, "but the feeling was a misimpression - I got a really good score."

If the student passes the test, he or she is eligible to become a teaching assistant. If a student fails, he or she is allowed to re-take the test after waiting one semester, Cocke said. Students failing a second time are required to successfully complete an English course in pronunciation before attempting the test again, she said.

"The Speak Test is certainly not the best way to prove how much you know about the language," said Rosario Bello, teaching assistant in sociology, "but it's a useful instrument overall, so that's good."

English 075 is a writing class recommended to all international students, both undergraduate and graduate, Cocke said. In this class, students write short essays to improve their writing techniques.

Cheerleaders to begin tryouts

By Heather Huntington Collegian Reporter

Go, State, go! Go, State, go! Similar chants may be heard echoing across campus next week as K-State men and women prepare for cheerleader and yell leader tryouts.

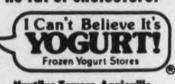

"We will choose up to five couples for the junior varsity squad," said Scott Johnson, assistant instructor of animal sciences and industry and cheerleading adviser. There are no vacant spots on the varsity squad, he

The junior varsity squad's main responsibilities are to cheer at all of the women's basketball games and at the home football games. They also practice with the varsity squad and are often called upon to take over for a varsity member if an emergency arises, Johnson said.

members will be given Monday through Thursday to help prepare prospective cheerleaders for tryouts. The clinics will start at 5 p.m. in the Brandeberry Indoor Complex. Tryouts are scheduled for Sept. 16. Both men and women who try out for the squad will be expected to perform a dance routine to the K-State fight song. In addition, women will be expected to perform a dance to "Wabash Cannonball," a series of stunts, and a succession of jumps and kicks. Men will also be asked to demonstrate their tumbling abilities.

The tryouts may sound difficult, but squad members agree that no one should feel intimidated, because everyone has a chance to make the squad.

"The main thing we look for during tryouts is the commitment to being a cheerleader and the person's potential," said Mike Whitney, junior in physical education and cocaptain of the varsity squad.

remittes play elicits primal behavior

Terry, played by Kelly Wondra, confesses that she too was raped.

As the play opens, we see Marjorie - a typical, young middle class professional, spending a quiet morning cleaning her house.

As the play closes, we see Marjorie transformed into a woman possessed by revenge and hate.

Marjorie has gone to the extreme. Rape is the crime; the story is much more. Marjorie, portrayed by Jennifer Hays, senior in theater, is the victim, who has never had to come face to face with the poverty or violence that Raul, the rapist, represents.

Raul, portrayed by Mark Hetrick, freshman in theater, is everything vile, said Charlotte MacFarland, director of the play.

"From the very first, we see a contagion of violence pass from Raul, to Marjorie, to Terry and Patricia (her friends and roommates). It grows in the language and in the action like a germ culture. The monster in all of us is just under the skin. Scratch the skin deep enough and it comes leaping out Nichols Theatre. full-blown," William Mastrosimone lose herself. The victim and the victimizer, the cager and the caged form an earlier, personal experience. each other."

Marjorie must defend herself against the most privileged citizen in our society: the recidivist criminal, Mastrosimone said.

In Mastrosimone's research, he discovered that one out of every three women in the United States is sexually assaulted by the age of 18. However, only two percent of these rapes result in a conviction.

The average rapist rapes 29 times. Most of the attacks go unreported due to embarrassment, he wrote.

"The politics of 'Extremities' explores a violated social contract ... Marjorie's actions are based upon the perception that society violates the social contract by not keeping up its end of offering protection," Matrosimone wrote.

"The very things that we have in society to protect us - police, courts and laws, can not protect the woman who has been raped," MacFarland said.

MacFarland poses the question, "What would happen to us who are civilized, if suddenly we were confronted with a very wild and uncivilized experience?"

Marjorie acts on instinct in her position.

'At the end of act I Marjorie says, 'I will not wear a rape whistle. I want to live my own life. From now on, I make my own laws," MacFarland said.

In the last scene, Marjorie's cyclotic drive to tear Raul apart results in a communication between victim and victimizer that goes beyond revenge, Mastrosimone wrote. "Marjorie does for Raul what all the social scientists, psychiatrists, police, and prisons have failed to do; she gives him a conscience, and a soul.

"Raul has a certain devil-may-care variety of humor, but it's not for the sake of making mirth, but to turn people around, give doubt, divide, manipulate and finally destroy," Mastrosimone wrote.

Hetrick's role as the streetwise, intelligent and hateful rapist involved extensive research.

Hetrick talked to psychologists, read literature and reflected a lot about the character.

To gain a better understanding of Raul's character of engrained hatred and superiority over women, Hetrick followed his lead actress, Hays, around town, as a potential rapist

"There were so many times I could have overpowered her so quickly, if I would have been a rapist personality," Hetrick said.

"(Rape) could happen to anyone," he added.

MacFarland said, "The play is very controversial. It is hard to produce because the subject matter is so physically violent."

The hardest part of the play is achieving reality on stage - making the illusion complete to the audience even though it isn't," Hetrick said.

"I knew the play was about rape, but I didn't expect it to be like this. The play adds a different twist," said Susie Unrein, junior in elementary

Because "Extremities" can arouse personal feeling within the audience, there will be informal discussion sessions after each performance in

Judy Davis, director of Women's says in his author's notes. "In order to Resource Center, will be available to survive Raul, Marjorie has to direct an open discussion of the become like Raul. To do that is to play's subject matter and provide support for anyone connected with

> There will be a special postperformance presentation Wednesday. Members of Arts and Science Freshman Seminar will see the play together after previously reading additional articles on date rape, otherwise known as acquaintance

> "I'm thrilled the Arts and Science Seminar people have seen fit to tie the cultural aspect of university life to a social problem ... making acquaintance rape the priority," Davis said.

Marjorie, played by Jennifer Hays, senior in theater, cowers under the knife of Raul, portrayed by Mark Hetrick, freshman in theater, as he attempts to rape Marjorie in the play "Extremities" playing in Nichols Theatre.

Mark Hetrick, portraying Raul, tells Marjorie about life in prison and how it would be more tormenting than being raped. In preparation for his role as a rapist, Hetrick spent many hours researching the part, including following Hays around to see how vulnerable she was.

Moslems down Afghan plane

By The Associated Press

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan Moslem guerrillas shot down an Afghan military transport plane, killing two army generals and all 14 other people aboard, Afghanistan's government radio said Thursday.

It said insurgents brought the Antonov-32 transport down Wednesday with a U.S.-built Stinger missile. The plane carried 12 passengers and four crew members, according to the Kabul radio

Among the passengers were two brigadier generals, Mohammed Ismail Noori and Abdul Ahad Razmenda, and Col. Mohammed Hassan Koshyar, political affairs director for military forces in the Kunduz region, the radio said. It described Razmenda as a Defense Ministry lawyer.

The plane was bound from Kabul to Kunduz City, 160 miles northeast of Kabul near the Soviet border, the broadcast said.

Major battles between guerrillas and Soviet and Afghan forces have been reported in the Kunduz area. Warplanes flying from Soviet territory bombed insurgent positions late last month.

Soviet soldiers began withdrawing from Afghanistan May 15 under a U.N.-mediated agreement and half the estimated 115,000 had left by Aug. 15. All are to be gone by Feb. 15, 1989.

Richard Martin, director of McCain, said he was aware of the need for additional lighting.

"I knew we were supposed to get some type of lighting different than ordinary, but in cases of vision problems it is not always possible to get what is necessary," Martin said.

"We certainly tried to make the speaker comfortable. We want any speaker to be able to read, to see insofar as is humanly possible," he said. McCain and member of Illuminating Engineering Society, said that he did what was requested by the president's office.

"We used 2000-watt lighting didn't do my job," he said.

Revenue sports, which are mainly football and basketball, help pay for the non-revenue sports. Non-revenue sports, such as volleyball and track, don't bring in near as much money, Miller said.

In the future, Miller said he hopes to hire a full-time marketing consultant to market the football program in hopes of improving ticket sales.

Can the 'Cats win at football?

inning and losing are learned attitudes. What we have to do is learn to change things from the ground up, and not go for the quick, or temporary, fix. When we can do that, I think we can win. We can always do better."

so aboveboard. That's why when the topic of whether or not K-State's football program will ever be successful is discussed with the new leader of the Wildcat athletic program, he chooses to accentuate the positive rather than dwell on the negative. "I not only think it's possible and conceivable that we're going to win, but I would say it's a mandate," Mill-

The man currently leading the Wildcat football program, Stan Parrish, agrees with his boss.

"I think this program can reach respectability, but we've got a long road to walk down to get there," Parrish said. "And several components go into assuring we'll get there."

Included in Parrish's list of components is a stronger and more broad support base, a strengthened budget, a well-thought-out schedule, support from the K-State administration, and a continued emphasis on playing the game by the rules.

"First of all, we've got to strength-duct. If you can give us a full commitment, even through the tough times, we'll be given the opportunity to give you the best product. Give us the chance to do what you require and deserve." K-Staters, according to season ticket sales figures released Thursday morning, aren't currently giving the athletic program that chance.

Student season ticket sales, which numbered 4,518 in 1987, were 2,235 as of Wednesday evening. The total number of season tickets sold, which was 9,590 in 1987, is currently at 6,587 for 1988.

All-in-all, Miller predicts the lost season ticket revenue may lead to a football budget deficit ranging from $100,000 to $400,000.

Without that money, K-State won't be able to make the continued facility improvements Parrish said the program needs.

"Don't get me wrong, we've done a great many super things since I've been here. But we've got to have a commitment to great facilities in order to keep up with the Joneses.

"We've come a long way in that respect with our new locker area and a bigger weight room and improvements on the playing field, but we've got a long way to go."

Parrish said that "long way" must include a well-developed scheduling plan as well.

"We need to continue to do a good job scheduling. Our league is so tough that you need to put yourself in a position to carry some wins into the conference," Parrish said. "There was a time this school was defeating the South Dakota State's of the world, and although teams like Iowa obviously test your mettle, you need to be able to win some games in the non-conference slate."

He also admitted, however, that a little something extra must accompany that support. "Above and beyond it all, from the Miller said Parrish's exit isn't on the immediate horizon. In fact, Miller vehemently supported his coach.

By Chris Wilhelm Sports Writer

If football games could take on biblical proportions, then the K-State-University of Iowa football game Saturday could be considered a David and Goliath story.

K-State coach Stan Parrish enters his third home opener at K-State with a 1-1 record in local unveilings. In his first home game, he had the privilege of knocking off Division I-AA member Western Illinois, 35-7. In his next home opener, Parrish's Wildcats lost to another Division 1-AA member, 26-22 to Austin Peay.

Parrish's third home opener will be his toughest to date. The Hawkeyes, 0-1 and ranked 17th nationally, are a team of a different caliber than the past two season's opening foes.

"Iowa is going to be a top 10 team this year," Parrish said. "They are still favored to win the Big 10. They are a very, very strong football team.

"The only chance we'll have is to keep them totally off balance. We need to cut down on our mistakes and we need to force them into making mistakes.'

K-State, 0-1, had four major miscues in its season opener against Tulsa - one interception and three fumbles - which resulted in the 'Cats being unsuccessful in their attempts to move the ball.

"We made a lot of mistakes down in Tulsa," Parrish said. "With a lot of young guys out there, that's going to happen. We just have to cut our mistakes down from week to week. It also didn't help us that Tulsa played near perfect football. We'll need Iowa to put the football on the ground to have a chance."

Personnel changes made by Parrish at the beginning of the season have led to improved play at key positions. K-State's defense has been strengthened, Parrish said, and the younger players are beginning to 'gain some experience.

"The kids we moved to defense played very well for us," Parrish said. stepped into the role of starting quar-

Hawaii took advantage of the short pass against Iowa completing 22-of-33 attempts for 278 yards. Both teams turned the ball over only

K-State offers club sports

By Mike Rouse Sports Writer

Soccer, rugby and crew are three of the club sports at K-State to watch for this season.

A youth movement marks the outlook of the Wildcat soccer team; K-State's rugby squad has its sights set on avenging last year's loss to the University of Kansas; and the crew has more members this season than even before. Below is a profile of the three club teams.

SOCCER

With a new coach at the helm, a very young soccer club has set out to become a top team in the Midwest.

Club president Rob Healy, who took over as head coach this summer, said there are about 26 people out for the team right now and he is not expecting to cut any players.

The team returns eight players from last year's squad.

"We are a very young team but experience in the games will make us better," he said.

K-State opened its season Sept. 3 by dropping a 2-1 decision to the alumni squad.

Healy has a schedule lined up that is "very competitive," he said. "We play in a league with a lot of Big Ten schools and we also have three tournaments lined up," he said. K-State plays Friday at Ames, Iowa, against Iowa State and Saturday at Lincoln, Neb., against the University of Nebraska.

RUGBY

After a loss to the University of Kansas last year, K-State's rugby team has set a goal of beating the Jayhawks this year.

Head coach Dan Blea said he is pleased with the team's performance so far. It was beat by the alumni team last weekend and tied No. 2 Air

Besides playing at the collegiate level, the team also plays at the club "If our team can play well in these tournaments, it will help on the collegiate side," he said.

The team will play in the Kaw Valley championship this weekend in

"I really feel that we can win the tournament," Blea said. "This will be an early opportunity to play Kansas, which will help when it comes to regional competition."

and the addition of three coaches, K-State's crew team is looking to improve.

The crew team will have four divisions rowing for the first time in several years. Rose will coach the men's varsity, and Amanda Robinson will coach the women's varsity. The freshman men will be coached by William Beuk, and the freshman women will be coached by Brent York.

K-State men harriers sport new look

By Chris Hays Sports Writer

This year the K-State men's cross country squad, which tied for fourth place at the Big Eight Conference meet last year and also took fourth at the District V meet, will sport a fairly young look, which is ironic considering nearly everyone returned.

"We have a very interesting group this year. We have 12 to 14 that can make the top seven," Capriotti said. "We redshirted four or five guys last year who don't have a lot of experience, but they do have a lot of talent."

The men's team, like the women's, has three of its top runners who are injured or started training late, but none should miss the entire season.

Sophomore David Warders has a stress fracture, Cloud County transfer Roger Koester had his appendix removed recently, and sophomore Jan Jonssan is just coming off military service in his native country.

Capriotti says the three should be ready to go in time for the "big" meets at the end of the season.

'We need to get our top runners going," Capriotti said. "Hopefully we'll be able to insert them toward the end of the year."

One of only three seniors, Daryl Reichard, has been hampered by a sore leg. But Capriotti said he should be ready to go after taking it easy for a week and soaking in the whirlpool.

Heading the pace in preseason training for K-State is junior Pat Hessini, who redshirted last year and currently holds the K-State indoor track record for the 1000-meter run.

Pushing Hessini are junior David Keller, senior Brian Zwahlen, sophomore Joe Bonneau and senior Rob Hays. Keller was K-State's highest finisher at the Big Eight Conference championships last year with a 10thplace finish, while Zwahlen took 13th in his first cross country meet ever and Bonneau took 34th. Hays did not place in the Big Eight meet but is probably Capriotti's most experienced returnee.

"We're looking pretty good with those guys right now," Capriotti said. "They've all been training well. We just have to start developing a top runner. That is very important."

Capriotti said five others should also give the front-runners some good competition for the seven-man varsity squad.

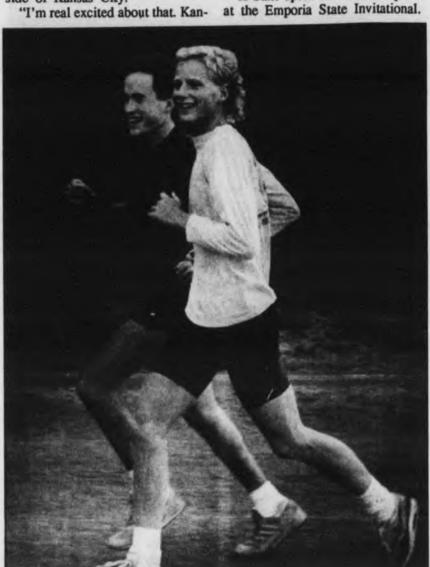

They are: true freshman Ron Smith, who finished 13th at the Kinney Cross Country National Championships last year and also won the Kansas 6A crown, sophomores Matt Vavala and Steve Christensen, and redshirt freshmen Kevin Lashley, Todd Eggers and Steve Palmer.

"I'm not that concerned right now about our injuries. But we need to be very, very good when it counts, and get all the kids back. I'm excited to see what we do.'

Capriotti also said he is happy with Kevin Lashley, sophomore in business, left, and Ron Smith, freshman the fact that he has been able to find undecided, run during 6 a.m. cross country practice.

most of his talent in the state of Kansas. Only four runners from the 15-man roster are not from Kansas and one of those is from the Missouri side of Kansas City.

I'm just glad that we were fortunate enough to sign some of them," Capriotti said. K-State opens the season Sept. 24

'Cat lady harriers slowed by injuries

By Chris Hays Sports Writer

The K-State women's cross country team suffered a major blow in its preseason workouts when top returnee Laura Haggerty suffered a stress fracture in her foot and will miss the entire

"That really hurts us. It's like losing a Shawnee Call in volleyball or a Mitch Richmond in basketball," Coach John Capriotti said. "It's hard to do well without those type of people, but we just have to look ahead and see what will happen."

Capriotti will also be without the services of two other runners this season. Laura Ostmeyer also has a stress fracture and freshman recruit Michelle Murphy has decided to get married and will not pursue a collegiate athletic career, although she is still enrolled at K-State.

Those announcements might make most coaches reconsider their career choice, but Capriotti remains optimistic.

"By losing three of our top seven runners, you would think that our Big Eight Conference title hopes were pretty nonexistent, but I'm a pretty optimistic guy," Capriotti said. "I don't know who our No.1 runner will be yet, but we still have a good nucleus returning and I think we'll have a solid cross country

"I'm confident that any one of the five juniors we have can step up and fill the hole that Laura

Those five are Jenny Faunce, who placed 109th at the NCAA championships last year, Marge Eddy (120th), Becky Ives (122nd), Tammy Van Laeys (124th), and Angie Barry, who missed all of last season with a foot injury.

"Those girls have been doing a helluva job," Capriotti said. "They've been training really well, so we're looking good."

Capriotti also signed two freshmen standouts last year who he said are also "bidding for the top They are: Janet Haskin, from Onaga High School, who took second at the 1A-2A cross country meet last year and also won the 800-, 1600-, and 3200-meter runs at the 2A track championships three straight years; and Janet Treiber, from Labette County High School in Altamont, who was a three-time winner in the 1600- and 3200-meter runs at the 1A championships and was the state champion in cross country her freshman year.

"There is a good possibility that one or both of them could be our top runner,'

Capriotti also said the women's squad is looking good depth-wise. Besides losing sophomore Renee Russell for the season to mononucleosis, freshmen Jennifer Hillier, Katie Williams and walk-on freshman Leslie Meidiger should push the front runners for that

NL president Giamatti named commissioner

By The Associated Press

MONTREAL - Angelo Bartlett Giamatti, the National League president, was named Thursday as baseball's next commissioner to succeed Peter Ueberroth, who will end his term nine months early to help the transition.

Giamatti was elected to a five-year term by unanimous vote of the 26 team owners at their quarterly meeting. Giamatti, 50, will become the game's seventh commissioner when he officially takes office April 1,

"My priorities are not too different than Peter Ueberroth's," Giamatti said. "My first priority as commissioner-elect will be finding the best possible resolution to baseball's labor relations problem."

Ueberroth, who often said he would be a one-term commissioner, led the support for Giamatti and did not want the selection process to drag out. Ueberroth made his recommendation at a morning meeting and owners voted for Giamatti "without a lot of discussion," the commissioner

"It's obviously no surprise. While investigating the role, the action today became very obvious," Ueberroth said. "He's the right man for the Giamatti and NL owners met briefly Thursday to talk about a method of choosing a new NL president. No names were discussed, although New York Mets general manager Frank Cashen has been mentioned previously.

Giamatti, president of Yale University for eight years, earned a reputation as "the dean of discipline" in two years as NL president. He suspended Pete Rose for 30 days this season after the Cincinnati manager bumped umpire Dave Pallone and refused to bend to criticism and pressure to lighten the sentence.

Last year, Giamatti suspended Kevin Gross for scuffing baseballs and Billy Hatcher for corking a bat, insisting that order was necessary and cheating was intolerable. Giamatti was also said to be the driving force behind this season's enforcement of balk rules, although he denies being the main proponent.

Giamatti was discussed as a possible candidate for commissioner in 1983 during a 21/2 -year search for Bowie Kuhn's successor. Giamatti had been rumored as Ucberroth's successor since being elected as NL president in June 1986 and taking office six months later. He denied, however, he left the Ivy League with the commissioner's job in mind.

'Cat baseball team set to begin season

Junior varsity, freshman teams added

By Mike Rouse Sports Writer

K-State's baseball team began practice last week, and coach Mike Clark is already excited to start playing some fall games.

Under National Collegiate Athletic Association guidelines, teams are only allowed to practice for eight weeks during the fall season, so the Wildcats can only take to the field for about two hours per day.

"And we had to wait a week before we could start practicing, so we're ready to go," Clark said.

With the coming of the fall season, some changes have been made concerning K-State's baseball program. The Wildcats have added a junior varsity and a freshman team which

Clark said will help in the long run, and will return the 'Cats to contention in the Big Eight Conference

"These players will be able to play in around 20 to 30 games and get as many as 200 at bats a year," Clark said. "With the playing experience they will get, some will be able to go right to the varsity if we need them."

Another change to the program is the improvements of Frank Myers Field. Some 2,500 seats will be added, making Myers Field the largest stadium in the Big Eight. As for the team's attitude, Clark said the players are "antsy to play and positive about the season.' The amount and quality of walkons this season has also pleased the

Prop 48 exams criticized

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK - The overwhelming majority of college football players disqualified because of Proposition 48 this year are black, according to a survey by The Associated Press, and the overall number of academically ineligible players has stabilized.

The AP was able to indentify the race of 213 of the 274 football players disqualified this year by Proposition 48, or 77.7 percent. One hundred eighty-five of those are black, 86.8 percent.

Critics feel these numbers show that standardized tests such as those used under Prop 48 are culturally biased.

"We know that standardized test scores are correlated with socioeconomic status," said Ursula Walsh, director for research for the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Walsh said blacks accounted for 81 percent of football ineligibles in 1986 and 90 percent in 1987, according to an NCAA survey.

Those who put together the tests disagree that the tests are culturally biased.

"It's being very simplistic to blame the difference in scores on the test and not look for the reasons behind it," said Frank Moreno, associate director of public affairs for the College Board, which sponsors the SAT. "It's not so much cultural difference as much as educational backgrounds of blacks, their having appreciably less academic courses in high school."

Proposition 48 requires players to achieve a minimum score of 700 out of 1,600 on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 out of 36 on the American College Test and have at least a 2.0 high school grade-point average in 11 mandatory courses.

In 1987, the average SAT score nationally for all students was 906. The average score for blacks was 728.

Defending champion Lendl routs Rostagno

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Defending champion Ivan Lendl, peaking at the right time, overpowered Derrick Rostagno Thursday to advance to the U.S. Open semifinals for the seventh straight year.

Lendl, seeking a record fourth straight Open title, beat the former Stanford star 6-2, 6-2, 6-0 at the National Tennis Center.

"He's very tough, very fast, very powerful, very accurate, very solid," lowest ranked player left in the tournament. "He's a great player."

Lendl, who struggled in the early rounds, was nearly faultless Thursday. The top seed made only 10 unforced errors, held serve every time and had just one double-fault. Lendl only came to the net twice in the entire match, but he won both those points too.

"I was very pleased with my intensity and concentration," he said. "It's said Rostagno, who at No. 52 was the not that easy to play Derrick. He plays a lot like (Miloslav) Mecir. He made unbelievable shots and missed easy shots."

Lendl, who lost only one set in each of his last three Opens, has already dropped three sets this year. He played a five-setter in the opening round against Amos Mansdorf and a four-setter against Jakob Hlasek in the fourth round. Rostagno, playing in his first Grand Slam quarterfinal, was philosophical about the defeat. "If I won it this year, I wouldn't have anything to look forward to next year," he said. Rostagno, a 22-year-old Californian who travels the U.S. circuit in an old bus, couldn't beat Lendl but he did beat the odds by reaching the quarterfinals.

"I played some great tennis here, although maybe not today," he said. "I'm proud of myself. I did my best out there today. I missed, but I kept trying."

In the mixed doubles final, Jana Novotna of Czechoslovakia and American Jim Pugh defeated Elizabeth Smylie of Australia and American Patrick McEnroe, 7-5, 6-3.

Individual, team sports highlight intramural slate

By Mike May Sports Writer

Three weeks into the school year, K-State students are battling in intramural competition in two team sports and seven individual sports.

"We have roughly the same amount of participation this year as we did last year," said Steve Martini, intramural coordinator.

The most popular of the team sports, football, has attracted 150 teams in five different divisions.

"We have roughly the same amount of participation this year as we did last year."

Soccer, the other team sport currently going on, consists of 34 teams.

All entries are divided into five divisions: fraternity, sorority, men's residence hall, women's residence hall and independent.

The team sports are divided into divisions and then subdivided into leagues. After playing a round-robin schedule, one team emerges from each league. The league winners then play a single elimination tournament to determine a division winner. Each member of the winning teams receives a shirt, with the sport and division he or she won printed on the

The winners of the independent division, fraternity division and residence hall division will then meet to determine the all-University champion. The champion team members receive iron-on transfers to accompany the division award.

In addition to the team sports, more than 1,200 people are playing in seven individual sports. Doubles volleyball has drawn the most participants, followed by singles tennis, three-wall racquetball singles, horseshoes singles, badminton singles, one-on-one basketball, and three-wall handball singles, respectively.

After being divided into divisions, the players are seeded. Each division has a single elimination tournament to crown a division winner.

The division winners then play to determine a men's and women's all-University champion. Shirts are given to the division winners, with the all-University champion receiving a shirt and an iron-on.

Three more intramural sports will get started within the month. Interested individuals will be able to sign up for golf, putt-putt golf and swimming starting next week, with the deadline for entry extending to Sept.

Kappa Kappa Gamma team member Trish Thompson, junior in business administration pre-professional, attempts a handoff to Gretchen Downey, senior in physical education, in an intramural game against Alpha Xi Delta Thursday afternoon.

Miller investing in K-State's future, excellence

By Bill Lang Sports Writer

Steve Miller has a plan. He calls it "an investment in our future, and in excellence." Miller's not sure how long it will take, but he believes it is earmarked for success.

Since being selected as K-State's athletic director in June, Miller has named six new assistant coaches to five different sports.

"What we're trying to do (at K-State) is run a first class operation," Miller said. "We're trying to make having a good environment both from a technical standpoint and a leadership and organizational standpoint.

"In order to compete at the level we want to compete at, we have to have that kind of help (on the coaching staff)."

Miller also said changes would occur with the number of people working in athletic administration. He said the following positions would be created: marketing and promotions, facilities, systems analsure the athletes have the benefit of yst for setting up a computer system for the entire department, and fund raising.

"If you think something is worthwhile, you invest in it," Miller said. "A term that will be heard a lot around here is, 'It's an investment in our future, and in excellence."

Miller said the hirings were a combination of many aspects.

"It's a combination of having a plan and a format," Miller said. "Not being foolish financially. But also recognizing that sometimes you have to spend money to make money.

"Before I took the job, I had a plan written down," he said. "To be succesful in anything you have to have a direction. We're now beginning implementation of that direction. In 30 days we have gotten a lot done, but we still have a long way to go."

Miller's "investment" lies with the following coaches: Cliff Rovelto, assistant track coach; Phil Morgan, assistant baseball coach; Gaye Griffin, assistant women's basketball coach; Kevin Ramsey, outside linebackers football coach; Richard McClure, assistant strength and conditioning coach; and Jon Tenuta, still loyal to Kansas. I went to school defensive line football coach.

Rovelto comes from the University of Kansas, where he served for seven years.

"I've known (Steve) Miller for a long time," he said. "His first year here was my first year at KU. I've known him for a long time and have a tremendous amount of respect for him. John (Capriotti, K-State track and cross country coach) is also a good friend of mine."

Rovelto said he found the switch to K-State a relatively easy one, although that would not have been the case a few years back.

"I knew the people here, and I knew that I would enjoy working here," he said. "It was also a time for me to move on. I had a chance to come here a few years back. I was there ... I just wasn't ready then."

One who was ready for a change was Morgan. He said he wanted a new challenge and the chance to move "up the ladder."

"Two or three things appealed to me about the job" he said. "Once you've had continued success, you want to continue up the ladder. Another was knowing Mike (Clark, head baseball coach). We've played against each other in college and I knew of the things that he had done in the college ranks and what he had done here. And the influence that (Steve) Miller has on the nonrevenue sports here was the biggest factor. It gives us the ability to improve the program."

Loss of coach doesn't hamper golf

Although Rob Sedorcek resigned as K-State's head golf coach on out the best person available for the period, similar to baseball's fall tional and the NCAA. Sept. 1, there has been no interruption in the practices and schedule of the men's and women's teams.

Sedorcek stepped down from his duties as K-State head golf coach to pursue a dream of being a professional golfer.

He said that if he had stayed on as a full-time coach, he would have had to give up competitive golf. To convince him to return to the college ranks, he said the University would have to have its own course in which he was the local pro.

Associate Athletic Director Jim Epps said the naming of an interim coach will take place today or early next week. Epps said the loss of Sedorcek hasn't caused too much of a stir among the team members.

"Beyond the normal unsettlement and surprise, I don't think (the resignation) has caused much of a problem, he said.

"We've spoken to the teams, both collectively and individually, as to what they want in a coach," he said. "(The players') concern is to find someone who can do a credible job and see that they get into the proper tournaments. They are all curious as to who is going to suc-

Parrish said the integrity question may be the most important as far as he's concerned.

"In the interim, or until we're where we'd like to be, we've got to have great integrity and honesty, not violate any rules, and do it aboveboard.

"If we can maintain our course, others will self-destruct in front of us.

Self-respect and integrity is important in life, OK?"

Self-respect and integrity don't necessarily lead to job security, as Miller admitted.

"It gets back to results, appraisal, inspection and evaluation," he said. "If after several more observations, we're not satisfied, we might have to make some adjustment. But believe me, we will get it done.

"I am really excited to be a part of what we're about to do. The change is not going to happen in two weeks, or three weeks, or even four, for that matter. But it is going to happen. We will win."
